JUDICIAL SYSTEM

De Hoge Raad der Nederlanden (The Supreme Court of the Netherlands): The Hague; f. 1838. For appeals in cassation against decisions of courts of lower jurisdiction. As a court of first instance the Supreme Court tries offences committed in their official capacity by members of the States-General, Ministers and some other high officers. Dealing with appeals in cassation a court is composed of five justices (raadsheren). Pres. Supreme Court C. W. DUBBINK; Vice-Pres. CH. M. J. A. MOONS, H. E. RAS, H. B. VROOM, C. H. TELDER; Procurator-Gen. M. S. VAN OOSTEN; Attorney-Gen. W. J. M. BERGER, J. REMMELINK, F. C. KIST, Th. B. ten KATE, J. VAN SOEST, J. K. FRANX; Sec. of the Court M. J. C. REYERS.

Gerechtshoven (Courts of Appeal): 5 courts: Amsterdam, Arnhem, 's-Hertogenbosch, Leeuwarden, The Hague. A court is composed of three judges (raadsheren); appeal is from decisions of the District Courts of Justice. Fiscal Divisions (Belastingkamers) of the Courts of Appeal deal with appeals against decisions relating to the enforcement of the fiscal laws (administrative jurisdiction). The court at Arnhem has a Tenancy Division (Pachtkamer) composed of three judges and two assessors (a tenant and a landlord); this division hears appeals from decisions of all Canton Tenancy Divisions. A Companies Division (Ondernemingskamer) is attached to the court at Amsterdam, consisting of three judges and two experts as assessors.

Arrondissementsrechtbanken (District Courts of Justice): 19 courts for important civil and penal cases and for appeals from decisions of the Canton Judges. A court is composed of three judges (rechter); no jury; summary jurisdiction in civil cases by the President of the Court; simple penal cases, including economic offences, generally by a single judge (Politierechter). Offences committed by juveniles are (with certain exceptions) tried by a specialized judge (Kinderrechter), who is also competent to take certain legal steps when the upbringing of a juvenile is endangered.

Kantongerechten (Canton Courts): 62 courts for civil and penal cases of minor importance. A court consists of a single judge, the Canton Judge (Kantonrechter). Each Canton Court has a Tenancy Division (Pachtkamer), presided by the Canton Judge who is assisted by two assessors (a landlord and a tenant).

Justices and judges must have graduated in law at a Dutch university, and are nominated for life by the Crown. The justices of the Supreme Court are nominated from a list of three compiled by the Second Chamber of the States-General.

ADMINISTRATIVE JURISDICTION

Ambtenarengerechten (Civil Service Courts): 10 courts for civil service arbitration. The Civil Service Court at The Hague also acts as Military Service Court for military service arbitration, and hears appeals against decisions on pensions for ex-civil and military servants.

Raden van Beroep (Appeal Councils): 10 courts to hear appeals against decisions enforcing social insurance legislation.

Centrale Raad van Beroep (Central Appeal Council):

NETHERLANDS

Utrecht; tries in supreme instance appeals against decisions of the Appeal Councils and the Civil Service Courts; Pres. C. J. A. KONING; Sec. (vacant).

College van Beroep voor het bedrijfsleven (Board of Appeal for Trade and Industry): Hears in first and last instances

THE PRESS

Newspapers appeared in the Netherlands as early as 1618 in Amsterdam and they soon flourished there and spread to other cities. The first constitution in 1796 declared that "the freedom of the press is sacred" but Napoleon prevented this from being put into practice. However, in 1848 article seven was inserted in the constitution, which stated: "No person shall require previous permission to publish ideas or sentiments by means of the press, without prejudice to every person's responsibility before the law." This article still guarantees the freedom of the press, but Netherlands law does not recognize the right to reply nor the right of a journalist to protect his source of information. However, the growth of the press was still hindered after 1848 by the oppressive newspaper duty. When this was removed the press developed rapidly and when the first socialist newspaper appeared in 1900 every important political and religious group in the country had its own newspaper. The freedom of the press was temporarily curbed by the German occupation in 1940, but a large "underground" press quickly grew and soon became stronger than the "official" press. Several of the papers which started at that time still survive.

There are nine dailies which circulate throughout the country and over 100 provincial newspapers. A few papers appear in several different regional versions. A distinguishing feature of the Dutch press is that it is aimed at the family and most of the papers are read in the home. Most of the papers appear only in the evening, though the trend towards morning editions is growing, and nearly all of the total circulation is sold by subscription. As street sales are negligible there is practically no sensational press. Although over half the papers are officially independent, most have some definite political bias.

In spite of the large circulation much important revenue from advertising has been lost since 1968 to radio and television and many papers have been in financial difficulties. There have been several mergers and liquidations in recent years and in August 1971 the Government announced that they would allot ten million guilders to help the press out of its difficulties and to preserve the traditional diversity of the press which is regarded as essential for a democratic state. The subsidy was increased to 30 million guilders in June 1972. The programme of subsidies has not been a success, however, and the Catholic daily, De Tijd, was the first major casualty when, in late 1974, it changed to a weekly rather than close down.

RADIO AND TELEVISION

Nederlandse Omroep Stichting (N.O.S.) (Netherlands Broadcasting Corporation): P.O.B. 10, Hilversum; f. 1969; Chair. E. C. M. JURGENS.

The Board of N.O.S. consists half of leading members of the broadcasting corporations; a quarter of its members are appointed by the Crown and a quarter by cultural organizations; the Chairman is appointed by the Crown. The financial management is supervised by the Government.

There are eight associate companies (Algemeene Vereeniging Radio Omroep, Nederlandse Christelijke Radio Vereniging, Omroepvereniging VARA, Katholieke Radio Omroep, Omroepvereniging VPRO, Televisie Radio Omroep Stichting, Evangelische Omroep, Veronica Omroep Organisatie). All broadcasting companies and institutions, having obtained transmission-time, retain individual autonomy in planning and broadcasting their programmes during the hours allotted to them by the Government decree. The Nederlandse Omroep Stichting provides a joint programme (20 per cent of total broadcasting time). Advertising was started in 1968 and is supplied for both radio and television by Stichting Ether Reclame, Hilversum.

Television programmes are provided by eight private Broadcasting Corporations and N.O.S. Studios, staff and technical facilities are provided by N.O.S. and financed by Government-collected licence fees.

There are two television channels broadcasting daily in the evenings. Advertising is permitted up to 180 minutes per week.

The Nederlandse Omroep Stichting provides a joint TV programme for 25 to 40 per cent of broadcasting time. Colour television started in 1967.

In 1976 there were 3,754,000 television sets.

TRADE UNIONS

Central Federations and affiliated unions are usually organized on a religious, political or economic basis.

The most important unions are those of the transport, metal, building and textile industries, and agriculture.

CENTRAL FEDERATIONS

Nederlands Verbond van Vakverenigingen (NVV) (Netherlands Federation of Trade Unions): Amsterdam, P.O.B. 8110; f. 1906; Pres. W. KOK; Vice-Pres. F. DRABBE; Gen. Sec. P. DAMMING; Treas. J. KAPPER; 700,000 mems.; publ. De Vakbeweging (The Trade Union Movement, weekly), De Band (fortnightly), International Bulletin (irregular, in English).

Fourteen affiliated unions, of which the principal are:

Algemene Bond van Ambtenaren (Civil Servants): Stadhouderslaan 9, The Hague; Pres. J. VAN DIJCK; Gen. Sec. J. V. D. PLOEG; 152,406 mems.

Algemene Bond van Onderwijzend Personeel (Teachers): Herengracht 56, Amsterdam; Pres. E. STEENBERGEN; Sec. R. VAN LEEUWEN; 32,034 mems.

Algemene Nederlandse Bond voor de Bouw- en Houtnijverheid (Building and Wood Workers): Houttuinlaan 3, Woerden; Pres. A. BUYS; Gen. Sec. R. B. VOULON; 99,034 mems.; publ. De Bouwer.

Agrarische en Voedings Bedrijfsbond (Agricultural and Food Workers): Goeman Borgesiuslaan 77, Utrecht; Pres. A. J. KUIPER; Sec. H. VAN KERK; 33,878 mems.

NVV Bond Mercurius, Bedrijfsbond voor de Handel, het Bank- en Verzekeringswezen en de Vrije Beroepen (Shop Assistants, Administrative Workers, Commercial Travellers, etc.): Plein 40-45 1, Amsterdam-Slotermeer; Pres. J. BROUWER; Gen. Sec. K. J. KOLHORN; 54,042 mems.

Algemene Nederlandse Grafische Bond (Printing and Allied Trades): Koninginneweg 20, Amsterdam-Z; Pres. H. J. VAN DER WERFF; Gen. Sec. J. SCHIPPER; 32,483 mems.

Nederlandse Politiebond (Police): Plein 40-45 5, Amsterdam-Slotermeer; Pres. A. K. MUD; Gen. Sec. S. J. BRANDSMA; 11,849 mems.

Industriebond NVV (Metal, Electrical and Electronic Workers, General Factory Workers, Textile and Clothing Workers, etc.): Plein 40-45 NR 1, P.O.B. 8107, NL-Amsterdam; f. 1972; Pres. A. GROENEVELT; First Vice-Pres. A. LOCHORN; Second Vice-Pres. C. DE HAY; 200,216 mems.

Vervoersbond NVV (Railway, Tram, Inland Waterways, and Transport Workers): Goeman Borgesiuslaan 77, Utrecht; Pres. S. BARENDREGT; Gen. Sec. J. DE VRIES; 49,772 mems.

Nederlands Katholiek Vakverbond (NKV) (Catholic Trade Union Federation): Amsterdam, P.O.B. 8003; f. 1909; affiliated to ICFTU; Chair. W. J. L. SPIT; Sec. H. VAN EEKERT; membership 400,000.

Principal affiliated unions:

Bouw-en Houtbond NKV (Building): Houttuinlaan 3, P.O.B. 510, Woerden; f. 1917; Pres. L. BROUWER; Sec.-Gen. P. VAN DER VEN; 90,000 mems.

Dienstenbond NKV (Catholic Retail Staff): Houttuinlaan 3, Woerden; f. 1963; Pres. P. M. A. BRULS; Sec. F. A. C. M. VAN DEN GOUW; 12,500 mems.; publ. Dienstenbond (fortnightly review).

Industriebond NKV (Industrial Workers): Oudenoord 14-16, Utrecht; Pres. P. SPIJKERS; Sec. S. TH. VAN BIJSTERVELD; 140,000 mems.

Ned. Kath. Bond van Overheidspersoneel (Catholic Government personnel): Mesdagstr. 118, The Hague; Pres. M. J. H. VAES; 51,174 mems.

Ned. Kath. Grafische Bond (Printing): P. C. Hoofstraat 172, Amsterdam; Pres. J. DOEZÉ.

Voedingsbond NKV (Agriculture): Goeman Borgesiuslaan 77, Utrecht; Pres. A. C. BASTIAANSEN; Sec. W. P. VAN SANTE.

Vervoersbond NKV (Transport): Goeman Borgesiuslaan 77, Utrecht; Pres. J. H. SCHROER; Sec. C. A. VAN DER WAARDEN; 25,000 mems.

Christelijk Nationaal Vakverbond in Nederland (CNV) (Christian Nat. Fed. of Trade Unions in the Netherlands): Utrecht, Ravellaan 1; f. 1909; Pres. J. LANSER; Gen. Sec. A. HORDIJK; 240,000 mems.; Protestant; publs. De Gids (fortnightly), Evangelie en Maatschappij. Fifteen affiliated unions, of which the principal are:

Christelijke Bedrijfsbond voor de Handel, het Bank- en Verzekeringswezen, de Administratieve Kantoren en de Vrije Beroepen (HBV) (Civil Servants): De Laïressestr. 129, Amsterdam-Z; f. 1897; Pres. P. M. DE WIT; Sec. D. W. VAN DER WINDT; 12,500 mems.; publ. Beginnel en Bedrijf (fortnightly).

Nederlandse Christelijke Grafische Bedrijfsbond (Printing): Valeriusplein 30, Amsterdam-Z; Pres. N. F. KRUIJFF; Sec. L. BLAAUW; 6,300 mems.

Hout- en Bouwbond CNV (Wood and Building): Kromme Nieuwe Gracht 22, Utrecht; Pres. D. VAN COMMENÉE; Sec. P. H. DE KLEUVER; 44,000 mems.

Industriebond CNV: Nijenoord 2, Utrecht; Pres. C. VAN DIJK; Sec. F. DE VRIES; 57,000 mems.

Nederlandse Christelijke Bond van Overheidspersoneel (Government Personnel): Bankplein 3, The Hague; Pres. H. WIERINGA; Sec. L. POST; 60,000 mems.

Algemene Christelijke Bond van Vervoerspersoneel (Transport): Kromme Nieuwe Gracht 50, Utrecht; f. 1903; Pres. J. J. DASSEL; Sec. W. H. HENDRIKS; 13,500 mems.

Nederlandse Centrale van Hoger Personeel (NCHP) (Netherlands Federation of Managerial Personnel): Godebaldkwartier 383, P.O.B. 2272, Utrecht; Pres. Dr. H. VAN DER SCHALIE; 130 affiliated organizations; publ. L. & S. Magazine.

CONSULTATIVE ORGANIZATIONS

Stichting van de Arbeid (Foundation of Labour): The Hague; 60 Bezuidenhoutseweg; f. 1945; central organ of co-operation between employers and employees; 18 mems.; Joint Pres. C. VAN VEEN, W. KOK; Secs. Dr. P. S. PELS, H. P. ENGEL.

Sociaal-Economische Raad (Social Economic Council): The Hague, 60 Bezuidenhoutseweg; Tripartite advisory body f. 1950 to advise the Government on social and economic problems; 45 members, of which 15 belong to the Netherlands trade union federations, 15 belong to the employers' organizations, and 15 independent experts in social and economic affairs; Pres. J. W. DE POUS, M.A.

INTERNATIONAL FAIR

Koninklijke Nederlandse Jaarbeurs (Int.) (Royal Netherlands Industries Fair): Utrecht; f. 1916; organizers of annual Utrecht Spring Fair and Autumn Fair (consumer goods) and of numerous specialized trade fairs; Man. Dir. J. H. D. VAN DER KWAST.

TOURISM

Stichting Nederlands National Bureau voor Toerisme (Netherlands National Tourist Office): The Hague, Bezuidenhoutseweg 2, P.O.B. 90415; f. 1969; Dir.-Gen. J. N. STRIJKERS.

EUROPEAN BRANCHES

Austria: Stubenbastei 12, A1010 Vienna.
Belgium and Luxembourg: Cantersteen 16, Central Station, Brussels 1000.

Het Nationale Ballet: Marnixstraat 427, Amsterdam; f. 1961; Artistic Dir. R. VAN DANTZIG; Administrative Dir. A. L. GERRITSEN.

PRINCIPAL ORCHESTRAS

Concertgebouworkest: Jacob Obrechtstraat 51, Amsterdam; Principal Conductor BERNARD HAITINK.

Residentie-Orkest: Statenlaan 28, The Hague; Principal Conductor FERDINAND LEITNER.

Rotterdams Philharmonisch Orkest: c/o De Doelen, Kruisstraat 2, Rotterdam-3002; f. 1918; Conductor EDO DE WAART; Gen. Man. Dr. J. OOSTERLEE.

ATOMIC ENERGY

Wetenschappelijke Raad voor de Kernenergie (Scientific Council for Nuclear Affairs): Duinweg 24, P.O.B. 5086, The Hague; f. 1962; to advise state and private institutions on nuclear research; Chair, Prof. Dr. H. G. VAN BUEREN; Deputy Chair, Prof. Ir. D. G. H. LATZKO.

Industrial Council for Nuclear Energy: Bezuidenhoutseweg 95, The Hague; to advise the ministers on the industrial application of nuclear energy and ionizing radiation; Pres. H. W. BLOEMERS.

The first nuclear power plant, a 54 MW boiling-water reactor, at Dodeward (nr. Nijmegen), was brought into operation at the end of 1968. A second power plant at Borssele (near Flushing), with a 477 MW pressurized water reactor, came into full operation in autumn 1973.

Interdepartmental Committee on Nuclear Energy: c/o Ministry of Economic Affairs, Directorate of Nuclear Energy, Bezuidenhoutseweg 95, The Hague; f. 1964; interdepartmental preparation of the policy of various ministries as to measures to be taken towards peaceful uses of nuclear energy; members: representatives of most ministries.

Stichting voor Fundamenteel Onderzoek der Materie (FOM) (Foundation for Fundamental Research on Matter): Lucasbolwerk 4, Utrecht; Dir. Dr. A. A. BOUMANS.

In the FOM Institute for Atomic and Molecular Physics at Amsterdam work on fundamental atomic physics with ion beams is carried out. The FOM Institute for Plasma Physics at Jutphaas (Utrecht) is a centre for thermonuclear research, established 1959. FOM organizes and finances research on nuclear physics, atomic physics, metals, molecular physics, solid state physics, high energy physics, and plasma physics at the Universities in the Netherlands. A National Institute for Nuclear and High Energy Physics is being established.

Stichting Instituut voor Kernfysisch Onderzoek (Foundation Institute for Nuclear Physics Research): Ooster Ringdijk 18, Amsterdam; Man. Dir. Dr. J. SCHUTTEN; Scientific Dir. Prof. Dr. A. H. WAPSTRA.

A 300 MeV linear electron accelerator will be completed in 1979. Both the Institute and FOM (above) also undertake radioisotope research.

Nederlandsche Centrale Organisatie voor Toegepast-Natuurwetenschappelijk Onderzoek (TNO) (Central Organization for Applied Scientific Research in the Netherlands): Head Office, Juliana van Stolberglaan 148, P.O.B. 297, The Hague; 4,920 employees; Chair, Dr. L. B. J. STUYT.

Nijverheidsorganisatie TNO (Organization for Industrial Research TNO): Head Office, Juliana van Stolberglaan 148, P.O.B. 297, The Hague; Groups 22 institutes and one project group; Chair, Prof. Dr. Ir. J. C. VLUGTER.

NETHERLANDS

The Project Group for Nuclear Energy TNO, Lian van Westenenk, 501, P.O.B. 370, Apeldoorn-Zuid, coordinates the research and development activities within TNO in the nuclear field; Dir. Ir. A. R. Brauns.

Focus is on high temperature technology in the frame of development of large components for sodium-cooled fast reactors (in co-operation with the industrial consortium Neraatom).

Main activities are:

Materials research and development (mechanical and corrosion properties of structural materials, bearing facing materials):

strength, safety and reliability (development of calculational methods including fatigue, creep and plasticity effects);

heat transfer and fluid flow (including stability, vibrations in tube bundles):

remote repair methods development;

bearing, vibration and sealing problems of long shafts.

Under contract from the Government, operation of a 50 MW sodium component test facility.

Atomic Energy, University

Association Euratom—ITAL (Institute for Atomic Sciences in Agriculture): Keizerbergweg 6, Wageningen; T. 1057, 110 mems.; Dir. Dr. Ir. J. Stegman, Tech. Dir. Dr. W. E. Oosterhout, Scientific Dir. Dr. A. Risgaard.

Irradiation facilities include a 100-kW reactor especially designed for agricultural research, a 1.7 MeV electron generator, gamma sources of 300 and 3,000 Curie Cs-137, X-ray machine.

There is a pilot plant for feedstock distillation with a primary source of 250,000 Cubic Cords.

NORWAY

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Kingdom of Norway forms the western part of Scandinavia in Northern Europe, bordered to the East by Sweden and, within the Arctic Circle, by Finland and the U.S.S.R. A long, indented coast faces the Atlantic. Climate is temperate on the west coast but colder inland. There are two forms of the Norwegian language, which are officially recognized as equal. About 80 per cent of children in schools learn the older form Bokmål as their principal language, whereas only 20 per cent learn the newer form Landsmål (Neo-Norwegian). The Evangelical Lutheran Church is the established religion. The national flag (proportions 11 by 8) has a dark blue cross, bordered with white, on a red field, the upright of the cross being left of centre. The capital is Oslo.

Recent History

Norway was a founder member of the United Nations in 1945 and the country's Minister for Foreign Affairs, Trygve Lie, was elected as the first UN Secretary-General. Norway abandoned its traditional policy of neutrality and isolationism and joined NATO in 1949. It was also a founder member of the Nordic Council in 1952. In 1957 King Haakon VII died after a reign of 52 years and was succeeded by his son, Olav V. Norway continued its policy of promoting international co-operation, and was a founder member of EFTA in 1960.

Norwegian political life was for a long time fairly stable. With only one month's interruption, the Labour Party formed the Government from 1935 to 1965. The 1965 elections resulted in the formation of a non-socialist coalition Government under Per Borten, which lasted until March 1971. The Labour Government led by Trygve Bratelli which then came to power resigned in October 1972, after its Treaty of Accession to the EEC was defeated in a referendum. A minority coalition of Liberals and the Centre and Christian People's Parties formed a Government with Lars Korvald as Prime Minister, but the general election of September 1973 resulted in a major redistribution of political power. The Labour Party had been split over EEC entry and lost many seats to the left-wing Socialist Electoral League; the Liberals also lost heavily because of the defection of the New People's Party; and four seats were won by a new Poujadist movement, Anders Lange's Party. In October 1973 Trygve Bratelli formed a minority Labour Government, dependent on the support of the Socialist Electoral League (from 1975 the Socialist Left Party), which gave it a majority of one vote in the Storting over the non-socialist parties. The Government also obtained support from the centre and right-wing parties for its policies of lower taxes and controlled, gradual economic development. In January 1976 Prime Minister Bratelli resigned and was succeeded by the Labour Party's Parliamentary leader, Odvar Nordli. In September 1977, Nordli called a general election which was strongly contested by the Conservatives, the Centre Party and the Christian Democrats. After several recounts, the final results gave the Labour Party and the Socialist Left Party an aggregate majority of one seat, enabling the minority Labour Government to continue in office.

Government

Norway is a constitutional monarchy, headed by an hereditary King. Legislative power is held by the unicameral Parliament (Storting), with 155 members elected for four years by universal adult suffrage, using proportional representation. The members choose one-quarter of their number to form the Lagting (upper house), the remainder forming the Odelsting (lower house). Executive power is nominally held by the King but is exercised by the State Council (Council of Ministers), led by the Prime Minister. The Council is appointed by the King in accordance with the will of the Storting, to which the Council is responsible. Norway comprises 19 counties (fylker).

Defence

Norway is a full member of NATO. Out of a total budget of 99,286 million kroner for 1978, 6,848 million kroner is allocated to defence. Every male is liable for national service from the age of 20 to 45. At 20 he does twelve months' service in the army, or fifteen months in the navy or air force. He is then called back periodically for refresher training. The total strength of the armed forces in 1977 was 39,000, including 25,000 conscripts, army 20,000, navy 9,000, and air force 10,000. There is also a mobilization reserve of 120,000 and a Home Guard of 80,000.

Economic Affairs

The geographic structure and climate of Norway make farming difficult. Less than 3 per cent of the land surface is cultivated and the Norwegians have naturally turned to the sea for a living. Their merchant fleet is one of the largest and most modern in the world. The great majority of ships are not home-based, but are totally engaged in foreign trading. Norway's fishermen take 5 per cent of the world's catch, and fish is a major export.

For a long while industry, which is protected and subsidized by the Government, was based on local raw materials such as iron ore, timber and fish. Since 1900 hydro-electric power has been utilized to expand industry rapidly and aluminium has now become a valuable export. Ship-building, engineering and electro-technical industries are also important.

In the late 1960s reserves of petroleum and natural gas were discovered in the Norwegian sector of the North Sea. The Government set up a state oil company to exploit these resources in partnership with foreign oil companies, and three major fields, Frigg, Ekofisk and Statfjord, are now under development. In late 1975 Norway began exporting crude petroleum on a large scale. It has been government policy to hold back development of offshore finds, to avoid imposing undue strains on the economy. The search for oil and gas in the waters above the 62nd parallel was postponed in May 1977, following a blowout in the Ekofisk field in April.

The G.D.P. increased by 3.3 per cent in 1975 and by a further 5.3 per cent in 1976, aided by a number of measures, implemented in 1975, which were specifically directed towards expansion of the economy. These anti-recession measures led to a rise in the current deficit on the balance of payments, which increased from 13,000 million kroner in 1975 to 20,000 million kroner in 1976. This was partly due to the increase in the net debt of oil companies, as Norway had been borrowing abroad against future oil income. However, oil exports have begun to narrow the deficit; in 1976 they contributed 18.6 per cent of export earnings and during the first five months of 1977 earnings from oil were four times higher than in the same period in 1976.

In 1975, for the first time in twenty years, the shipping industry ran into financial difficulties and a number of shipowners asked for government assistance. In October 1975 a guarantee institute was established to provide loans to shipping companies which might otherwise be sold. In March 1977 the Storting approved a 1,125,000 million kroner aid scheme for the shipbuilding industry. This helped in maintaining levels of production and employment in 1977.

In April 1976 the first ever four-sided wage settlement was agreed by the Government, unions, employers and farmers. Low wage increases were to be offset by tax reductions, price freezes and reductions in employers' social security contributions. The 1977 budget included large increases in old age pensions and cuts in direct taxes. These were to be partly offset by a rise in public service charges. In June 1976 the Government reintroduced a bank rate, in a move to slow down bank lending and reduce liquidity. In April 1977 a comprehensive incomes policy was introduced, which affected about 300,000 workers, along with tax concessions and an extension of food subsidies. The 1978 budget aimed to hold down production costs, maintain high employment and limit consumer spending. It also included measures worth 410 million kroner to aid Norwegian industry, whose competitiveness was affected by two devaluations of the krone, in April and August 1977.

Two of Norway's most important trade partners, Federal Germany and the United Kingdom, are now in the EEC. Following the popular decision not to join, the Government negotiated a free trade agreement with the EEC in 1973, gaining trade advantages for Norway's major exports, particularly fish, aluminium, paper and steel.

In May 1977, Norway cut the fish quotas of EEC boats by 33 per cent in the economic zone north of the 62nd parallel. In October the U.S.S.R. and Norway agreed on fish quotas in the Barents Sea for 1978. Discussions were to be held in December 1977, to decide on fishing limits, as both countries have claimed exclusive economic zones within 200 nautical miles (370 km.) of their coastlines.

Transport and Communications

The Norwegian State Railways have a total length of 4,241 km., more than half of which is electrified. In 1976 Norway had 77,117 km. of roads, 24,897 km. of which are main roads. In 1976 the Norwegian merchant fleet numbered 2,042 ships, totalling over 27 million gross tons. Norwegian Airlines has a two-sevenths share in the Scandinavian Airlines System (SAS).

Social Welfare

A compulsory National Pension Scheme came into force in January 1967, and covers old age, disability, widows, widowers, children and rehabilitation. Existing health insurance and other compensation schemes will be incorporated. Financed by premiums from those covered, employers' contributions and grants from local and central government, the Scheme provides a basic pension, irrespective of former income, as well as an additional pension calculated on previous earnings. The Trygderetten, an organization with a function similar to that of the Ombudsman, deals with complaints concerning state insurance and pension schemes.

Education

Education is compulsory for all children between the ages of 7 and 16. Elementary education is divided into a 6-year lower stage (barneskolen) and a 3 year upper stage (ungdomsskolen). A pupil may then transfer to an upper secondary school for a course which may last from 1 to 3 years. Upon completion of a 3 year course, a pupil may then seek admission to one of the four universities and 10 colleges of university standing. A broader system of higher professional education is being organized on a regional basis. Since 1969 10 regional colleges (distriktshøgskole) have been established.

Tourism

Norway is a popular resort for tourists who prefer holidays in rugged, peaceful surroundings. It is also a centre for winter sports. Receipts from tourism in 1976 amounted to 2,163 million kroner.

Visitors entering Norway from Denmark, Finland, Iceland and Sweden do not require a passport.

Visas are not required for nationals of the following countries: Algeria, Andorra, Argentina, Australia, Austria, the Bahamas, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cyprus, Denmark, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Fiji, Finland, France, the Gambia, the Federal Republic of Germany, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, the Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, the Republic of Korea, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Malta, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Morocco, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, the Philippines, Portugal, Romania, San Marino, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Spain, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Tanzania, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, the United Kingdom and dependencies, the U.S.A., Uruguay, the Vatican City, Venezuela, Yugoslavia, Zambia.

Sport

Skiing originated in Norway and remains the most popular sport, closely followed by ice skating. Football is also popular. There is little professional sport.

Public Holidays

1978: March 23rd (Maundy Thursday), March 24th (Good Friday), March 27th (Easter Monday), May 1st (May Day), May 5th (Ascension Day), May 15th (Whit Monday), May 17th (Constitution Day), December 25th and 26th (Christmas).

1979: January 1st (New Year's Day).

Weights and Measures

The metric system is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

100 ore = 1 Norwegian krone.

Exchange rates (October 1977):

£1 sterling = 9.70 kroner;

U.S. $1 = 5.47 kroner.

FINANCE

100 øre = 1 Norwegian krone.

Coins: 5, 10, 25 and 50 øre; 1 and 5 kroner.

Notes: 10, 50, 100, 500 and 1,000 kroner.

Exchange rates (October 1977): £1 sterling = 9.70 kroner; U.S. $1 = 5.47 kroner.

100 Norwegian kroner = £10.31 = $18.29.

Note: Between September 1949 and August 1971 the par value of the krone was 14 U.S. cents (U.S. $1 = 7.143 kroner). From December 1971 to February 1973 the central exchange rate was $1 = 6.645 kroner (1 krone = 15.05 U.S. cents). In terms of sterling, the exchange rate was £1 = 17.143 kroner from November 1967 to August 1971; and £1 = 17.316 kroner from December 1971 to June 1972. Since March 1973 the Norwegian krone has been allowed to "float" against the U.S. dollar and sterling. The average exchange rate (kroner per U.S. dollar) was: 5.7658 in 1973; 5.5397 in 1974; 5.2269 in 1975; 5.4565 in 1976.

THE CONSTITUTION

THE Constitution of the Kingdom of Norway was promulgated on May 17th, 1814, by the National Assembly at Eidsvold.

According to the Constitution, Norway is a "free, independent, indivisible, inalienable Kingdom"; its form of government a "limited and hereditary monarchy". The Evangelical-Lutheran religion is the established religion of the State.

Executive power is vested in the King, legislative power in the Storting (the Parliament), and judicial power in the Judicature.

EXECUTIVE POWER

The King exercises his power through the Statsråd (State Council). The State Council (the Government) is composed of a Prime Minister and not fewer than seven other Councillors of State, all above thirty years of age. The business to be dealt with in State Council is prepared by the various executive Ministries, each with a State Councillor at its head. These executive departments conduct the administrative work of the country.

The Government submits the budget estimates and introduces bills in the Storting.

Formally, the King appoints the Government, but since the introduction of the parliamentary system in 1884 it is the practice for him to act in accordance with the will of the Storting.

LEGISLATIVE POWER

The Storting is elected quadrennially by universal suffrage. All Norwegian citizens over 20 are eligible to vote and those over 21 are eligible to stand for election. The Storting has 155 members, who elect a quarter of their own body to constitute the Lagting; the other three-quarters compose the Odelsting. All bills must first be introduced in the Odelsting, either by the Government through a State Councillor or by a member of the Odelsting. Should the bill be passed by the Odelsting, it is sent to the Lagting, who may adopt it or return it with amendments. If a bill be passed twice by the Odelsting and rejected on both occasions by the Lagting, it is submitted to the entire Storting and decided by a two-thirds majority. When a bill has thus been passed it must receive the royal assent in State Council.

Bills for the revision of the Constitution must be introduced in the first, second or third session after a new election. But only the Storting, after the next election, has power to decide whether the proposed alteration should be adopted. Bills relating to the Constitution are dealt with only by the united Storting. For the adoption of a bill of this nature a two-thirds majority is required, and the measure becomes law without the royal assent.

The Storting votes all State expenditure and determines State revenue, taxes, customs tariffs and other duties; the Odelsting exercises control over government administration, government appointments and so forth.

The Storting prepares its business through its committees and settles such business, with the exception of bills, in plenum. The State Councillors (Ministers) may attend the Storting, having the right of speech but not of voting.

The Storting determines the duration of each session. It is opened and prorogued by the King each year. The Storting cannot be dissolved either by the King or by its own resolution until the expiry of the quadrennial period for which it has been elected.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Judges are appointed by the Crown. The Supreme Court, sitting in Oslo, deals with both civil and criminal cases.

Attorney-General: BJÖRN HAUG.

Supreme Court, Oslo: Pres. ROLV RYSSDAL.

Superior Court for Civil and Criminal Cases, Bergen: Pres. HANS FR. MARTHINUSSEN.

Superior Court for Civil and Criminal Cases, Oslo: Pres. JENS FAGERENG.

Superior Court for Civil and Criminal Cases, Skien: Pres. KRISTEN SYVERTSEN.

Superior Court for Civil and Criminal Cases, Tromsø: Pres. JON FJALSTAD.

CIVIL

In each municipality there is a Conciliation Court (Forliksråd) consisting of three members elected by the municipal council for four years. As a rule, no case may be taken to a court of justice without mediation having been attempted by a Conciliation Court. In addition to mediation, the Conciliation Court has a judicial capacity and is intended to settle minor cases in a simple manner without great expense to the parties involved.

The ordinary lower courts are the District and Town Courts (Herredsrett, Byrett), which decide all cases not adjudicated upon by the Conciliation Court, and they also act as courts of appeal from judgments given in the Conciliation Court. The cases are adjudicated by a judge or magistrate, who sits either alone or with two lay judges.

Judgments delivered in the District and Town Courts may be taken, on appeal, to the Courts of Appeal (Lagmannsrett or "Lagmann's" Courts) or to the Supreme Court (Høyesterett). In the Courts of Appeal cases are judged by three qualified judges, but if requested by one of the parties, lay judges may be summoned.

The Supreme Court sits in Oslo and decides cases in the last instance. Five judges here participate in judging an appeal case.

CRIMINAL

The criminal courts are: Examining Courts (Forhørsretten), the District and Town Courts, Courts of Appeal (Lagmannsrett) and the Supreme Court. In the Examining Courts the professional judge presides alone, but in the District and Town Courts two lay judges also sit. The more serious criminal cases must be brought directly before the "Lagmann's" Court. Cases originating in the lower courts may be retried by the Courts of Appeal (Lagmannsrett) when the question of guilt is at issue; otherwise they are appealed directly to the Supreme Court. The "Lagmann's" Court is presided over by three legally qualified judges, who judge the case with the assistance of a jury of ten jurymen. For the accused to be pronounced guilty, at least seven jurymen must vote that he is so.

The Supreme Court (Høyesterett) is the Court of Final Appeal. In criminal cases the competence of the Court is, however, limited to questions concerning the application of the law, the nature of the penalty, and procedural errors of the lower court.

Capital punishment has been abolished, except for certain military and treasonable offences in time of war.

OMBUDSMAN

Since the office was introduced by law in 1963, an Ombudsman has been elected by the Storting every four years. The Ombudsman provides a free service to all citizens to "try and ensure against the public administration committing any injustice to the individual citizen" and "that civil servants and others employed in the state administration do not make mistakes or fail in their duties". His field of activity does not cover private legal affairs, and he does not have the right to reverse an official decision. In practice, however, his pronouncements are normally complied with.

RELIGION

The Evangelical Lutheran Church is the established Church of Norway and is endowed by the State. The King is the head of the Church and nominates its clergy. There are 10 dioceses, 90 archdeaconries and some 600 clerical districts.

The Evangelical Lutheran State Church: Bishops: ANDREAS AARFLOT, Oslo; (vacant), Borg; GEORGE HILLE, Hamar; DAGFINN HAUGE, Tunsberg; ERLING UTNEM, Agder; SIGURD LUNDE, Stavanger; THOR WITH, Björgvin; T. GODAL, Nidaros; BJARNE O. WEIDER, Sør-Hålogoland; KRISTEN KYRRE BREMER, Nord-Hålogoland.

The United Methodist Church: Northern Europe Area, which includes Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden; f. 1856; 35,000 mems.; see Sweden.

The Norwegian Baptist Union: f. 1860; 6,423 mems.; Gen.-Sec. PER MIDTEIDE, Hausmannsgt. 22, Oslo 1.

The Lutheran Free Church of Norway: f. 1877; 19,300 mems.; Chair. of Synod Rev. JENS LUND ANDERSEN, Eventyrn. 32, Oslo 8; Sec. KARSTEIN SOLVANG, Synod Office, Josefines gt. 5, Oslo 3.

The Roman Catholic Church: 12,000 members; Diocese of Oslo (est. 1953): Bishop Rt. Rev. J. W. GRAN, Akersveien 5, Oslo 1; Vicar Apostolic of Central Norway: Bishop Rt. Rev. Dr. GERHARD SCHWENZER, Prinsensgate 2 A 2, 7000 Trondheim; Vicar Apostolic of North Norway: Bishop Rt. Rev. JOHANNES B. PRZYKLENK; Apostolic Administrator: Most Rev. GERHARD GOEBEL, Storgaten 94, 9000 Tromsø.

THE PRESS

The principle of press freedom is safeguarded in the Norwegian Constitution. There is no law specifically dealing with the Press; newspapermen are subject like any other citizen to the penal and other laws. Editors bear wide responsibility in law for the content of their papers, especially regarding such matters as libel. Although a journalist is legally entitled to conceal his source he may be required to disclose this information under penalty of imprisonment; but such instances are rare.

A three-member Council of Conduct gives judgements in cases of complaint against a paper or of disputes between papers. It has no powers of enforcement but its judgements are highly respected. The Press Association has a Code of Ethics aimed at maintaining the standards and reputation of the profession.

Norway has 154 newspapers with a total circulation of 2,027,784. Of these 72 are dailies accounting for some 1,619,000. A few very large papers are responsible for the bulk of this circulation; the average daily sells some 5,000 copies. The non-dailies mostly appear three times a week, averaging 4,600 copies.

The Eastern region is the scene of most press activity. Oslo has eight dailies which are especially influential throughout this area, and four of these—Aftenposten, Verdens Gang, Dagbladet and Arbeiderbladet—have a national readership. Nevertheless, in Norway's chief cities the large local dailies easily lead in their own districts. There are no Sunday newspapers but on Saturday the dailies usually have an extra large edition.

There are almost 2,000 periodicals with an estimated total circulation of two million copies. Women's magazines are particularly popular and make up over a quarter of this circulation figure.

There are no major publishing chains; newspapers are mainly privately owned. Most of the big papers are owned by corporations whose shares are held by individuals and political parties. The Labour Party and the Norwegian Federation of Trade Unions (LO) own and subsidize the Labour press. Certain papers with Conservative sympathies such as Morgenbladet are subsidized by the Conservative holding company, Libertas, but many Conservative papers insist on being financially independent. The chief organs of the parties are Aftenposten (Conservative), Dagbladet (Liberal), Nationen (Centre) and Arbeiderbladet (Labour).

A number of medium-sized papers which have been experiencing economic difficulties receive financial help from private individuals, parties and other organizations. Some papers economize by engaging in a form of co-operation by which two papers, sometimes with different political views, share the news copy while carrying different headings, editorials and sometimes one or two different pages. A State loan fund was set up in 1972 to ease newspapers' credit problems.

In 1976 the most popular newspapers were, in order of circulation, Aftenposten (Oslo), Verdens Gang (Oslo), Dagbladet (Oslo), Bergens Tidende, Adresseavisen (Trondheim), Arbeiderbladet (Oslo) and Stavanger Aftenblad.

POLAND

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Polish People's Republic is situated in Eastern Europe, bounded to the north by the Baltic Sea, to the west by the German Democratic Republic, to the south by Czechoslovakia and to the east by the U.S.S.R. The climate is temperate. Most of the population is Roman Catholic but there are 13 other religious denominations, the largest being the Polish Autocephalous Orthodox Church. The language is Polish. The national flag (proportions 8 by 5) has two horizontal bands of white and red. The capital is Warsaw.

Recent History

A people's democracy was set up after the defeat of the German forces in 1944. Under the Potsdam Agreement signed by the major Allied powers in 1945, the former German territories along the line of the rivers Oder and Neisse and now forming one-third of Poland's total area, came under Polish sovereignty. Józef Cyrankiewicz led a Communist-dominated government elected in 1947, with Władysław Gomułka as deputy premier. As the control of the Communists increased and allegiance to the Soviet Union strengthened, Gomułka was dismissed. The Government's strict control eased slightly with the death of Stalin, but no significant change was felt until 1956, when "bread riots", started by the industrial workers of Poznań, brought a political crisis which resulted in Gomułka's return to office. Soviet intervention was resisted by the new leaders and a period of liberalization followed in which control of the army was given to Poles, the secret police lost much of its power, political prisoners were rehabilitated, the collectivization of agriculture was stopped, censorship eased and freedom of movement restored.

In December 1970 "bread riots" again broke out in three Baltic towns, sparked off by a sudden increase in food prices and by a feeling of dissatisfaction with economic affairs generally. The situation led to the resignation of several leading members of the Government, including Gomułka, who was succeeded as First Secretary of the Workers' Party by Edward Gierek. The latter strengthened his position in 1971 with several government reshuffles, and by giving priority to raising living standards and involving the working class in economic management. As a result of elections held in March 1972, most of Gomułka's former supporters were removed from the Government and from the Sejm. Under Gierek more attention has been paid to the wishes of the population than in most East European countries. In early 1976 proposed amendments to the Constitution were considerably modified in response to representations from intellectuals and prominent Catholics. After elections in March 1976 and a subsequent Government reshuffle, Gierek appeared to have further consolidated his position. In June 1976, however, after a five-year price freeze, substantial increases in food prices were proposed. Strikes and violent demonstrations followed, forcing the Government to postpone the increases and to review its economic policy. Unrest continued in 1977, and the various problems were examined by special commissions.

Foreign relations have improved steadily in recent years. In 1972 the Vatican normalized relations by recognizing Poland's post-war frontiers. In the same year diplomatic relations were established with Federal Germany, and in 1975 an agreement was signed involving the repatriation of Polish citizens of German origin.

Government

Under the 1952 Constitution, the supreme organ of state power is the Sejm (Parliament), a unicameral body comprising 460 deputies elected for a four-year term by all citizens of 18 years and over. From its number the Sejm elects the Council of State (17 members) to be its permanent organ. Supreme executive power lies with the Council of Ministers, who are appointed or recalled by the Sejm. The Council of Ministers is responsible for its activities to the Sejm and to the Council of State between sessions of parliament. The Supreme Board of Control oversees national and local administration. It is responsible to the Sejm and the Council of State, but remains independent of the government whose activities it supervises.

In February 1976 numerous amendments to the 1952 Constitution were approved. The Republic was for the first time officially described as a socialist state and the Polish United Workers' Party (PUWP) recognized as the leading political force in the state. The Communist PUWP dominates the Front of National Unity (including two other smaller parties), which presents an approved list of candidates for elections to representative bodies. The PUWP's highest authority is the Party Congress, convened every five years. The Congress elects a Central Committee (140 full members and 111 candidate members) were elected in December 1975) to supervise Party work. To direct its policy the Committee elects a Political Bureau (Politburo), with 14 full members and three alternate members.

Since 1975 local government has been on a two-tier system. The country is divided into 49 provinces (voivodships), each with a People's Council elected for four years.

Defence

Poland is a member of the Eastern European Mutual Aid Treaty (the Warsaw Pact). Military service lasts for two years in the army, internal security forces and air force, and for three years in the navy. The strength of the armed forces in 1977 was 307,000: army 220,000, navy 25,000, air force 62,000. There are also 97,000 security and border troops. The defence budget for 1977 totalled 57,280 million zlotys.

Economic Affairs

Poland is one of the world's leading agricultural nations. Although co-operative and state farms exist, 50.6 per cent of agricultural land remains in private hands. Livestock production is important, and meat and meat products such as ham, bacon, sausage, etc. make significant contributions to Polish exports. The principal crops are rye, wheat, oats, sugar beet and potatoes. Polish farming provides about 8 per cent of European agricultural production.

Nevertheless, Poland now finds itself in a phase of intensive industrialization based on socialist principles. Over 70 per cent of the country's population now earns its living in industry and non-agricultural activities, and industrial growth is among the ten fastest in the world. Industrial production accounts for over 50 per cent of Poland's material product. Poland is one of the world's richest countries in copper and sulphur deposits, and there are also deposits of natural gas. Coal output was 179.3 million tons in 1976, of which 38.9 million tons were exported. Poland ranks among the world's 12 leading ship-building nations and is the fourth largest exporter of ships. Other important industries are textiles, engineering, steel, cement, chemicals and foodstuffs. The main exports are coal, ships, steel and clothing.

The 1971-75 Five-Year Plan aimed at concentrating industrial effort on increasing exports and satisfying the home market. During this period, total agricultural production rose by 27 per cent, and industrial output by 73 per cent, thus exceeding the target. National income increased by 62 per cent, and investment expanded by 90 per cent. The 1976-80 Five-Year Plan envisages an increase of 50 per cent in industrial production, with emphasis on the mechanical engineering, electrical and chemical industries, and a 16 per cent increase in agricultural production. National income is expected to rise by 55 per cent, and investment by 40 per cent. Exports are scheduled to increase by 75 per cent.

Economic difficulties were reported in 1975 and 1976, and continued in 1977, due largely to successive bad harvests. Many key commodities, particularly meat, were in short supply.

Poland is a member of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (CMEA), and a contracting party to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). About 52.5 per cent of Poland's foreign trade is with Eastern Europe and about 30 per cent with the Soviet Union.

Transport and Communications

Transport is by rail, road, inland waterway and air. There are 26,695 km. of railways, 5,988 km. of which are electrified. There are 103,023 km. of main roads in Poland and 4,527 km. of navigable waterways. The Polish airline LOT maintains internal and international services. There are three large ports on the Baltic coast at Gdynia, Gdańsk and Szczecin. The merchant fleet had 320 ships in 1976, with a displacement of 2,718,900 gross tons.

Social Welfare

The Polish social welfare system is controlled by the Ministry of Health and Social Welfare. Locally the system is administered by the Health and Social Welfare Departments of the Presidiums of the National Councils. Medical care is provided free for all workers and rural population. There is a special system of dispensaries for infants, women and school children, as well as an all-embracing industrial health service. The Polish Red Cross organizes and carries out the care of the sick at home and general home assistance to those who are incapacitated through ill-health, etc. Alimony is assured by law to single mothers who are unable to enforce payment of alimonies due to them. Pensions are organized and managed by the Union of Pensioners, Invalids and Retired Persons.

Education

Education is free and compulsory for children between the ages of 7 and 14 years. Before the age of 7, children may attend creches (żłobki) and kindergartens (przedszkola); however, there are not enough of this type of school to meet the demand. Basic schooling begins at 7 years of age when a child enters the eight-year school (szkoła podstawowa). Curricula are uniform throughout Poland and prepared with a view to continuity between each level. There is a small number of private schools run under state supervision. On completing his compulsory education at the eight-year school the child is free to go to work. Secondary education is free to candidates successful in the entrance examination and more than 90 per cent of pupils continue their studies. Of these, 79 per cent go to vocational and technical schools (technika zawodowe), or to basic vocational schools (zasadnicze szkoły). The latter kind, organized by both the government and by work establishments, provide three-year courses consisting of three days theoretical and three days practical training per week, and in addition some general education is given. Those leaving the basic vocational school generally go straight into industry, agriculture, etc. Vocational technical schools provide five-year courses of general education and vocational training together, and can lead to qualifications for entering higher educational establishments. The remaining 21 per cent of children who leave the eight-year school to continue with their education enter general secondary schools (liceum ogólnokształcące), where four-year courses lead to college or university entrance. Here, as in vocational technical schools, the student may receive his leaving certificate (Matura). There are 89 higher educational establishments in Poland, including ten universities and 17 technical universities. Current expenditure from the government budget on education for 1976 was about 56,114 million zlotys.

Tourism

The Polish Tourist and Country Lovers' Society is responsible for tourism and itself maintains about 260 tourist hotels and hostels throughout the country. Poland is rich in historic cities such as Wrocław, Cracow and Warsaw. There are 30 health and climatic resorts, while the mountains, forests and rivers provide splendid scenery and excellent facilities for sporting holidays. Poland was visited by 9,623,000 foreign tourists in 1976. Tourists enjoy a favourable exchange rate of about 57 zlotys to £1.

Sport

Sport in Poland is directed by the Central Committee of Physical Culture and Tourism and the Polish Sports' Federation, and every sport discipline has its own union. In 1976 these unions had a total membership of 3,873,000. The most popular sports are football, boxing, and cycling.

Public Holidays

1978: March 26th and 27th (Easter), May 1st (Labour Day), May 9th (Victory Day), May 25th (Corpus Christi), July 22nd (Polish National Day) November 1st (All Saints' Day), December 25th and 26th (Christmas).

1979: January 1st (New Year's Day).

Weights and Measures

Currency and Exchange Rates

100 groszy = 1 zloty.

Exchange rates (September 1977):

£1 sterling = 5.77 zlotys;

U.S. $1 = 3.32 zlotys.

⁷ Figures refer to both primary and secondary metal. Zinc production includes zinc dust and remelted zinc.

FINANCE

100 groszy = 1 zloty.

Coins: 1, 2, 5, 10, 20 and 50 groszy; 1, 2, 5, 10 and 20 zlotys.

Notes: 50, 100, 200, 500, 1,000 and 2,000 zlotys.

Exchange rates (September 1977): 1 zloty = 22.5 Soviet kopeks.

£1 sterling = 5.77 zlotys (basic rate) or 57.70 zlotys (non-commercial rate);

U.S. $1 = 3.32 zlotys (basic rate) or 33.20 zlotys (non-commercial rate).

100 zlotys = 22.50 roubles = £17.33 = $30.12 (basic rates).

Note: Since 1961, except for a short period in 1975-76, the zloty has been officially valued at 22.5 Soviet kopeks (1 rouble = 4.444 zlotys). Prior to August 1971 the official exchange rate was U.S. $1 = 4.00 zlotys (1 zloty = 25 U.S. cents). Between December 1971 and February 1973 the rate was $1 = 3.68 zlotys (1 zloty = 27.14 U.S. cents). In terms of sterling, the basic exchange rate between November 1967 and June 1972 was £1 = 9.60 zlotys. Since March 1973 the basic exchange rate has been U.S. $1 = 3.32 zlotys (1 zloty = 30.12 U.S. cents). The value of foreign trade transactions is calculated on an exchange rate of 1 zloty = 30.10 U.S. cents ($1 = 3.322 zlotys).

THE CONSTITUTION

(Adopted in July 1952, amended in 1976.)

Summary

Introduction

The Polish People's Republic is a republic of the working people. A State of People's Democracy has been firmly established, and a new social system is taking shape and growing in strength. The legal principles of this system are laid down by the Constitution of the Polish People's Republic.

Political Structure

Article 1—(1) The Polish People's Republic is a socialist State.

(2) In the Polish People's Republic, the power belongs to the working people of town and country.

Article 2—(1) The working people rule the State through their representatives elected to the Sejm (Parliament) of the Polish People's Republic and to the People's Councils on the basis of universal, equal and direct suffrage by secret ballot.

(2) The people's representatives in the Sejm of the Polish People's Republic, and in the People's Councils, are responsible to their constituents and may be recalled by them.

Article 3—(1) The Polish United Workers' Party is the leading political force in the building of socialism.

(2) Co-operation between the Polish United Workers' Party, the United Peasants' Party and the Democratic Party is the basis of the National Unity Front.

(3) The National Unity Front forms the common platform of action of the social organizations of the working people and the patriotic associations of all citizens.

*Article 4—*The main aim of the Polish People's Republic is the development of a socialist society, satisfying the needs of the citizens.

Article 5—(1-10) The Polish People's Republic safeguards the achievements, power and freedom of the working people; realizes the principles of social justice; protects the family and cares for the health of the nation; supports the development of education, science and national culture.

*Article 6—*The Polish People's Republic in its policy:

(1) Is guided by the interests of the Polish nation, its sovereignty, independence and security.

(2) Refers to the traditions of solidarity with the forces of freedom and progress, strengthens friendship and co-operation with the U.S.S.R. and other socialist states.

(3) Relations with states of different social structure are based on the principles of peaceful co-existence and co-operation.

*Article 7—*The Polish People's Republic realizes and develops socialist democracy.

Article 8—(1) The laws of the Polish People's Republic express the interests and the will of the working people.

(2) Strict adherence to the laws of the Polish People's Republic is the fundamental duty of every organ of the State and of every citizen.

(3) The functioning of all organs of State power and administration is based on the rule of law.

Article 9—All organs of State power and administration are supported in their work by the conscious and active co-operation of the people.

Article 10—The armed forces of the Polish People's Republic safeguard the sovereignty and independence of the Polish nation and its security and peace.

Social and Economic Structure

Article 11—(1-4) The socialist economic system is the basis of the socio-economic structure of the Polish People's Republic. The State has the monopoly of foreign trade.

Article 12—(1-2) The State ensures protection of national resources and the natural environment.

Article 13—The State provides for participation by the workers in the management of State enterprises.

Article 14—(1) The Polish People's Republic strengthens the economic union between town and country.

(2) For this purpose, the Polish People's Republic secures a continuous increase in the production of State industry, at the same time planning the constant growth of production of agricultural commodities.

Article 15—(1-5) The Polish People's Republic creates for agriculture conditions which ensure steady growth in agricultural production, and protects the individual farms of working peasants, as well as co-operatives and State farms.

Article 16—The Polish People's Republic promotes the development of different forms of the co-operative movement.

Article 17—The Polish People's Republic recognizes and protects, on the basis of existing legislation, individual property and the right to inherit land, buildings and other means of production belonging to peasants, craftsmen and persons engaged in domestic handicrafts.

Article 18—The Polish People's Republic guarantees to citizens full protection of personal property and the right to inherit it.

Article 19—(1) Work is the right and the duty of, and a matter of honour for every citizen.

(2) Work champions and veterans enjoy the respect of the whole nation.

(3) The Polish People's Republic puts into practice, to an increasing degree, the principle: "From each according to his ability, to each according to his work".

The Supreme Organs of State Authority

Article 20—(1) The supreme organ of State authority is the Sejm of the Polish People's Republic.

(2) The Sejm gives form to the sovereign rights of the nation.

(3) The Sejm passes laws and exercises control over the work of other organs of State authority and administration.

Article 21—(1) The Sejm is made up of 460 Deputies.

(2) The validity of the election of a Deputy is confirmed by the Sejm.

(3) A Deputy may neither be brought before a Court, nor arrested, without the consent of the Sejm, and when the Sejm is not in session, without the consent of the Council of State.

Article 22—(1) The Sejm meets in sessions. The Council of State convokes a session of the Sejm at least twice a year. Likewise, on a written motion by one-third of the total number of Deputies, the Council of State is bound to convoke a session.

(2) The first session of a newly-elected Sejm must be convoked within a period of one month from the date of the elections.

Article 23—(1) The Sejm elects from among its members a Chairman, Deputy Chairmen, and Committees.

(2) The Chairman or his deputy presides over the debates and supervises the course of the work of the Sejm.

(3) The debates of the Sejm are open to the public. The Sejm may vote the holding of a secret session if this be required in the interests of the State.

(4) The order of work of the Sejm, the kind and number of committees, are defined by rules of procedure adopted by the Sejm.

Article 24—(1) The Sejm adopts the national economic plans for a period of several years.

(2) The Sejm adopts the State budget every year.

(3) The Sejm approves the execution by the Government of the budget and the national economic plan for the previous year.

Article 25—(1) The right to propose legislation is vested in the Council of State, the Government and the Deputies.

(2) Acts passed by the Sejm are signed by the President and Secretary of the Council of State.

Article 26—The Sejm may appoint a Committee to examine a specified matter. The terms of reference and procedure of the Committee are established by the Sejm.

Article 27—The Chairman of the Council of Ministers or individual Ministers are bound to answer, within the time limit, a question put by a Deputy.

Article 28—(1) The Sejm is elected for a term of four years.

(2) The decision to hold elections to the Sejm is adopted by the Council of State not later than one month before the expiry of the term of office of the Sejm, the polling day to be fixed on a day free from work within two months after the expiry of the term of office of the Sejm.

Article 29—(1) At its first sitting, the Sejm elects a Council of State composed of the Presidents of the Council of State, four Deputy Presidents, the Secretary of the Council of State, and eleven Members.

(2) The Chairman and Deputy Chairmen may be elected to the Council of State as Deputy Presidents or as Members.

(3) After the expiry of the term of office of the Sejm, the Council of State acts until the election of a Council of State by the newly-elected Sejm.

Article 30—(1) (i-xii) The functions of the Council of State include the ordering of elections to the Sejm, and the convocation of sessions of the Sejm; the issuing of decrees with the force of law; the appointment and recall of plenipotentiary representatives of the Polish People's Republic in other States; the ratification and denunciation of international agreements; the exercise of the right to grant pardon.

(2) The Council of State is accountable to the Sejm for all its activities.

(3) The Council of State acts as a body.

(4) The Council of State is represented by the President or his deputy.

Article 31—(1) In the intervals between the sessions of the Sejm, the Council of State issues decrees with force of law. The Council of State submits the decrees to the Sejm at its next session for approval.

(2) Decrees issued by the Council of State are signed by the President of the Council of State and its Secretary.

Article 32—The Council of State exercises ultimate supervision over the local People's Councils. The specific powers of the Council of State in this matter are determined by law.

Article 33—(1) A declaration concerning a state of war can be issued only in the event of armed aggression having been committed against the Polish People's Republic, or if, in pursuance of international agreements, the necessity should arise of common defence against aggression. Such a declaration is voted by the Sejm or, if the Sejm is not in session, by the Council of State.

(2) The Council of State may proclaim martial law in parts or in the entire territory of the Polish People's Republic should this be required by considerations of the defence or security of the State. For the same reasons, the Council of State may proclaim partial or general mobilization.

The Supreme Board of Control

Article 34—(1) The Supreme Board of Control is appointed to supervise the activities of the central and local organs of State administration.

(2) The Supreme Board of Control also supervises non-socialized economic units.

Article 35—(1-3) The Supreme Board of Control serves the Sejm, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers in the execution of their functions; the Chairman of the Council of Ministers supervises the Supreme Board of Control.

Article 36—(1) The Chairman of the Supreme Board of Control is appointed and recalled by the Sejm.

Article 37—(1) The Sejm appoints and recalls the Government of the Polish People's Republic—the Council of Ministers or its individual members.

(2) In the intervals between sessions of the Sejm, the Council of State, on the motion of the Chairman of the Council of Ministers, appoints and recalls members of the Council of Ministers. The Council of State submits its decisions for approval to the Sejm at its next session.

Article 38—(1) The Council of Ministers is the supreme executive and administrative organ of State authority.

(2) The Council of Ministers is responsible to and accounts to the Sejm for its work, and if the Sejm is not in session, to the Council of State.

Article 39—(1) The Council of Ministers is composed of: the Chairman of the Council of Ministers, who presides, the Deputy Chairmen of the Council of Ministers, the Chairman of the Supreme Board of Control, Ministers, Chairmen of Commissions and Committees specified by law, carrying out the functions of the supreme organs of State administration.

(2) The Chairman and Deputy Chairmen of the Council of Ministers are the Presidium of the Government. The Council of Ministers can appoint from among its members other members of the Presidium of Government.

Article 40—(1) The Chairman of the Council of Ministers directs the work of the Council of Ministers and the Presidium of Government.

(2) The Chairman of the Council of Ministers issues orders and ordinances in pursuance of the execution of laws.

Article 41—(1-11) The functions of the Council of Ministers include the co-ordination of the activities of Ministries and other organs; the adoption of the budget and national economic plan, and the supervision of their execution; the protection of public order, the interests of State and the rights of citizens; the exercise of general guidance as regards relations with other States, and the defence of the country.

Article 42—(1) Ministers direct branches of State administration, as specified by law.

(2) Ministers issue orders and ordinances in pursuance of laws and for their execution.

(3) The Council of Ministers may rescind an order or ordinance issued by a Minister.

The Local Organs of State Authority and Administration

Article 43—(1) The People's National Councils are the local organs of State authority.

(2) The organ of State authority and social self-government in two different units of territorial division, but of the same rank, can be the common People's Council.

(3) The term of the People's Councils of all ranks is established by law.

*Article 44—*The People's Councils express the will of the working people and develop their creative initiative and activity in order to increase the strength, prosperity and culture of the nation.

*Article 45—*The People's Councils strengthen the links between the State authority and the working people of town and country, drawing increasing numbers of the working people to participate in governing the State.

*Article 46—*The People's National Councils direct and co-ordinate the activity of all administrative and economic units in their regions. The People's Councils link local requirements with the aims of the State.

*Article 47—*The People's Councils take constant care of the everyday needs and interests of the population, combat any manifestations of an arbitrary or bureaucratic attitude towards citizens, carry out and promote social control over the activities of offices, enterprises, establishments and institutions.

*Article 48—*The People's Councils are in charge of the maintenance of public order, protect public property, safeguard the rights of citizens and co-operate in strengthening the defences and security of the State.

*Article 49—*The People's Councils make full use of all local resources for satisfying the needs of the population as regards supply and services, as well as for the expansion of institutions and establishments in the field of public services, education, culture, hygiene and sport. The People's Councils adopt local economic plans and local budgets.

Article 50—(1) The People's Councils meet in sessions.

(2) The People's Councils elect from among their members the Presidiums to prepare sessions.

Article 51—(1) The local organs of State administration are: voivods, mayors of cities and heads of towns, heads of districts and heads of communes.

(2) The local organ of State administration is subordinate to superior organs and, when executing tasks assigned by a People's Council, to the People's Council.

Article 52—(1) The voivods, mayors of cities, heads of towns, heads of districts and heads of communes exercise State administration in accordance with directions established by superior organs.

(2) Voivods and mayors of cities in the rank of voivodship are the Government representatives in their regions.

*Article 53—*The People's Councils appoint commissions for different spheres of their activity. The commissions of People's Councils maintain constant and close links with the population.

Article 54—(1) A People's Council rescinds the decision of a People's Council at a lower level, if this decision is in conflict with the law or incompatible with the basic line of the policy of the State.

*Article 55—*The details of composition as well as terms of reference of and rules of procedure of People's Councils and their organs are established by law.

The Courts and the Public Prosecutor's Office

Article 56—(1) The administration of justice in the Polish People's Republic is carried out by the Supreme Court, Voivodship Courts, District Courts, and Special Courts.

(2) The Commissions for infringement cases adjudge in cases of infringement.

(3) The structure and competence of and procedure in the Courts and Commissions for infringement cases are laid down by laws.

Article 57—The Courts pronounce judgment in the name of the Polish People's Republic.

Article 58—The Courts are custodians of the structure of the Polish People's Republic, they safeguard the rights of citizens, and punish offenders.

Article 59—(1-4) Except in cases specified by law, people's assessors take part in the hearing of cases and the pronouncement of judgment, and have equal rights with judges. People's assessors are elected by People's Councils, the electoral procedure and term of office being established by law.

Article 60—(1-2) Judges are appointed and recalled by the Council of State, the procedure being established by law.

Article 61—(1) The Supreme Court is the highest judicial organ and supervises the activity of all other Courts.

(2) The scope and procedure of exercising supervision by the Supreme Court is established by law.

(3) The Supreme Court is appointed by the Council of State for a term of five years.

(4) The Council of State appoints the First President and the Presidents of the Supreme Court from among the judges of that court.

Article 62—Judges are independent and subject only to the law.

Article 63—(1) Cases in all courts of the Polish People's Republic are heard in public. The law may specify exceptions to this principle.

(2) The accused is guaranteed the right to a defence counsel, either of his own choice or appointed by the Court.

Article 64—(1) The Chief Public Prosecutor of the Polish People's Republic ensures that the rights of citizens be respected.

(2) In particular, the Chief Public Prosecutor supervises the prosecution of offences endangering the system, security and independence of the Polish People's Republic.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Note: the administrative reforms of June 1975 have not yet been implemented in the Judicial system. Below is the system as it was before.

THE SUPREME COURT

First President: Prof. Dr. hab. WŁODZIMIERZ BERUTOWICZ.

The Supreme Court is the highest judicial organ and court of cassation, and is the court of revision for sentences passed by Voivodship Courts. The judges for this court are elected by the Council of State for a term of five years.

Voivodship and Regional Courts. Persons may appeal from the Regional Courts to the Voivodship (province) Courts. The Regional Courts consist of one professional magistrate and two laymen, and these try less serious cases. The Voivodship Courts try more serious cases; when acting as court of first instance they consist of one professional judge and two laymen, and when acting as court of second instance they consist only of professional judges.

The Public Prosecutor-General is appointed and recalled by the Council of State. He is especially charged with the protection of social property.

Prosecutor-General: Gen. LUCJAN CZUBIŃSKI.

THE PRESS

The Polish Press is probably the most distinctive in Eastern Europe. It was nationalized in 1946 along with the other communications media and remains under strict government control. The majority of newspapers and magazines are published by the Communist Party (Polish United Workers' Party).

Freedom of the Press is guaranteed by the 1952 constitution, yet is subject to general control by administrative bodies. The government dictates general policy on what appears in Polish newspapers, and they must still follow the Party line. However, Poland has long been one of the more nationalistic of the Communist Bloc countries, and this spirit is still evident in the Press. As long ago as 1954, the problem of the country's development became an important theme in the Polish Press. More and more editors have expressed Poland's national awareness of the currents of European thought. It has resulted in the Polish Press becoming slightly more objective than its East European counterparts, more representative of public opinion, and more aware of a responsibility to its readership. This national awareness has produced a Press with a far more individual character than elsewhere in Eastern Europe. Poland has always had close affinities with the West, and a considerable Western influence is evident in its newspapers and periodicals. Trybuna Ludu (circ. 1,000,000), the Party daily, has published display advertisements since 1957 and in some papers they now take up to 20 per cent of the total space. Express Wieczorny (circ. 570,000) and Życie Warszawy (circ. 380,000) have a particularly Western appearance. Perspektywy (circ. 270,000), a weekly magazine, is similar.

In 1976 there were 44 daily newspapers in Poland with a total circulation of 8,284,000. Trybuna Ludu is the most influential daily newspaper. There are 2,365 periodicals with a combined circulation of 31.9 million copies.

INDUSTRIAL FEDERATIONS

There are Industrial Federations for the following industries: Agricultural Machinery, Automobiles, Coal, Constructional Machinery, Electrical Goods, Electronics, Foundry Products, Machine Tools, Metal Products, Railway Rolling Stock, Shipbuilding, Textile Machinery, Iron Mining and Iron and Steel Smelting.

TRADE UNIONS

Centralna Rada Związków Zawodowych (CRZZ) (Central Council of Trade Unions): 00-328 Warsaw, Kopernika 36/40; affiliated to the WFTU; mems. 12,826,326 (1976); Chair. WŁADYSŁAW KRUCZEK; Deputy Chair. EUGENIUSZ GROCHAŁ, ROMAN STACHOŃ; publs. Głos Pracy, Przegląd Związkowy, research periodicals, papers from different branches of industry.

There are 23 trade unions, each of a general type covering administrative and industrial workers in a particular branch of industry, with an aggregate of over ten million members and 49 Voivodship's Councils of Trade Unions. United under the Central Council of Trade Unions, they are elected every 4 years by the National Congress of Polish Trade Unions. The unions play an important part in the development of a socialist economy and of the culture and education of the working people and in the management of factories and other establishments. Trade Union representatives exert direct influence on the system of wages and on income tax rates. Working conditions are supervised and inspected regularly by labour inspectors from the Central Labour Inspection Office and in addition, a social labour inspector is appointed by each trade union works' council. Disputes are regulated by Arbitration Commissions as well as by Labour Courts, attended by trade union representatives. The unions run health centres and provide recreation facilities for members.

There is close co-operation between the Polish Trade Unions and those in other countries as well as with the World Federation of Trade Unions and international bodies such as UNESCO.

PORTUGAL

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Portuguese Republic lies on the Atlantic side of the Iberian peninsula, bordered by Spain to the north and east. The climate is mild and temperate with an annual mean temperature of 16°C (61°F). In the interior the weather is drier and hotter. The language is Portuguese. Roman Catholicism is the religion of the majority of the people. The national flag (proportions 3 by 2) carries two vertical bands of green and red, the green occupying two-fifths of the total area, with the state coat of arms superimposed. The capital is Lisbon.

Recent History

The regime of the Estado Novo (New State) began in 1926, giving considerable stability to the country after the frequent government changes of previous years. Dr. António Salazar became Prime Minister in 1932 and established a right-wing dictatorship. In 1968 Dr. Salazar was succeeded by Dr. Marcello Caetano who pursued slightly more liberal policies.

The drain on Portugal's economy and manpower by the long wars against nationalist forces in the overseas provinces contributed in great part to the staging of a bloodless coup d'état on April 25th, 1974, initiated by the Movimento das Forças Armadas (MFA, Armed Forces Movement), a group of young army officers. Gen. António de Spínola, head of the Junta of National Salvation which had assumed power, became President in May and promised liberal reforms, a civil government and free democratic elections. In July Brig.-Gen. Vasco dos Santos Gonçalves replaced Prof. Adelino da Palma Carlos as Prime Minister. Gen. Spínola resigned in September following a split between left- and right-wing factions in the MFA, and was replaced by Gen. Francisco da Costa Gomes, but conflict between right and left continued.

In March 1975 there was an abortive counter-coup by high-ranking officers reputedly under the orders of Gen. Spínola. This resulted in a swing to the left. All existing organs of the MFA were dissolved and the Council of the Revolution was created. Six parties signed a platform of agreement with the armed forces movement, ensuring that it would stay in power for five years.

In April, elections for the Constituent Assembly resulted in a victory for the Socialist Party (PS), who polled 38 per cent of the vote while the Communist Party (PCP) polled only 12 per cent. During May, disputes between Socialists and Communists provoked the PS and the People's Democratic Party (PPD) into leaving the Government. Several weeks of political instability followed with Portugal being governed by a triumvirate of generals. The MFA put forward plans for "direct democracy", bypassing the political parties, and the Socialists then accused them of attempting to install a Communist dictatorship.

Following much dissension between parties and within the MFA itself, Gen. Vasco Gonçalves was dismissed and Admiral José Pinheiro de Azevedo became Prime Minister in August. In September the fifth provisional government resigned under pressure from the moderate factions and a new government of "united action" was formed, including members of the armed forces, the PS, the PPD and the PCP. However, violent clashes continued between rival political groups, and in mid-November the Government suspended its activities due to a lack of support from the armed forces. An abortive leftist military coup resulted from the political turmoil. A number of changes took place within the Council of the Revolution and in December the armed forces put forward a plan to reduce its political power. A split in the PPD occurred following dissent over the PCP's inclusion in the Government after the coup.

In April 1976 a new Socialist Constitution was promulgated, despite opposition from the conservative Centre Democratic Party (CDS), and elections to a Legislative Assembly resulted in the PS remaining the largest single party with 106 seats but not having an overall majority in the 262-member Assembly.

In June, the Army Chief of Staff, Gen. António Ramalho Eanes, backed by the PS, the PPD and the CDS, was elected President on a platform of law and order. A minority Socialist Government was formed under Dr. Mário Soares; popular support was confirmed by the municipal elections of December 1976, which were won by the PS with a slightly reduced vote of 33 per cent.

The Government refused to enter into coalition with either the PCP or the "democratic convergence" announced in May 1977 by the Partido Social Democrático (PSD, formerly the PPD) and the CDS, and relied instead on temporary alliances with each party to carry through the Assembly measures designed to combat the continuing deterioration in the economy. These tactics provoked criticism, most vocally from Dr. Francisco Sá Carneiro, president of the PSD. Meanwhile the question of agrarian reform was causing violent unrest both within the PS and throughout the country; the left demanded that expropriation of farmland, begun after the 1974 revolution, should continue, while the right insisted that priority should be given to restitution of illegally expropriated land and compensation. The Land Reform Review Bill was passed in July in circumstances which clearly emphasized the rifts within the Government and the PSD. The Government resigned in December, following defeat in a motion of confidence over its proposed economic measures. Dr. Soares was requested by President Eanes to form a new government.

Immediately after the coup d'état in April 1974 Portugal began the withdrawal of troops from its colonial territories in Africa, and independence was granted to these territories in 1974 and 1975. In 1976 Indonesia annexed the former Portuguese Timor, but Macao is still governed by Portugal under a special statute. The Azores and Madeira were granted autonomy in 1976, but separatist movements continued to demand independence. Portugal is a member of EFTA, but applied in March 1977 for membership of the EEC.

Government

A new Constitution, envisaging the construction of a socialist society in Portugal, was promulgated in April 1976. The organs of sovereignty are the President, the Council of the Revolution, the Assembly of the Republic and the Government. The President, elected by popular vote for a five-year term, appoints the Prime Minister after consultation with the Council of the Revolution and the parties represented in the Assembly (262 members elected for four years). The President appoints other members of the Government on the proposal of the Prime Minister. The Council of the Revolution, comprising the four military commanders and 14 elected officers, is an advisory body and acts as the guarantor of the Constitution. Macao is governed by special statute, and the Azores and Madeira were granted autonomy in 1976.

Defence

Military service is compulsory and lasts for two years. Portugal is a member of NATO. Total strength of the armed forces is 52,000 comprising: army 30,000, navy 12,000 and air force 10,000. Defence expenditure in 1977 was 19,831 million escudos. The armed forces are being restructured.

Economic Affairs

Under the regimes of Salazar and Caetano Portugal was a traditionally agricultural country, the major exports being textiles, clothing, wood products and wine. The industrial sector was mainly controlled by large financial groups. In recent years agricultural production has been stagnant due to an inefficient farming system, lack of mechanization, and drought.

The coup d'état of April 1974, which occurred at the same time as a general world recession, severely disrupted the economy. Traditionally, economic problems were solved by exporting unemployment in the form of migrant workers, creating monopolies and forcing the colonies to sell their produce to Portugal at below world market prices. Invisible earnings, in the form of remittances from workers abroad and tourist revenue, kept the balance of payments in surplus in spite of a large trade deficit.

The achievement of independence by the former colonies denied Portugal a cheap source of raw materials, especially cotton for the textile industry, and the return of some 800,000 refugees from Africa put a severe strain on resources. The relaxation of traditional controls after the coup resulted in higher wages, and industrial production fell by 5.7 per cent in 1975, mainly as a result of strikes. Foreign investment fell, due to a lack of international confidence and the world recession, and stringent customs controls were introduced to halt the flight of escudos from Portugal. Two major sources of revenue, tourism and remittances from workers abroad, almost ceased.

In 1974 and 1975 about 60 per cent of the country's productive capacity was nationalized and the long-awaited agrarian reform programme began. Over 1.5 million hectares of land, particularly in the Alentejo region, were expropriated and a further 700,000 hectares were taken over illegally. In 1976 the new Socialist Government announced that land occupied illegally should be returned to its former owners, or compensation made, and the Land Reform Review Law of August 1977 increased the amount of land legally retained by private farmers in the Alentejo. Emphasis is now given to improving efficiency and the co-existence of private farms and collectives. The early chaotic application of agrarian reform, however, resulted in a fall in agricultural production and a higher import bill for food, to which a disastrous 1976 harvest contributed. The fishing industry is a priority sector, and in February 1977 territorial waters were extended to 200 nautical miles (370 km.).

Major problems include unemployment, running at 16 per cent in 1977; inflation of 36 per cent in the year to June 1977; a large balance of payments deficit, estimated at $1,200 million in 1977; a trade deficit of $2,000 million in 1977; and dwindling foreign reserves.

Austerity measures announced by the Government in February 1977 included a 15 per cent devaluation of the escudo, price controls on essential food items, continued severe import restrictions on luxury and non-essential goods, tax incentives for exporters, increased sales tax, and incentives for private savings. Complementary measures announced in August included the controlled floating of the escudo (which in late 1977 was about 25 per cent below its pre-February level), reduction of public spending, fuel price rises, a rise in interest rates and further import restrictions. Further controls on public spending and increased taxation were expected to be included in the 1978 Budget. The 1977-80 Plan was to be debated early in 1978.

The new Constitution establishes that the economy is to be run on socialist lines with priority given to collective ownership of property, worker participation and state planning, but the government programme provides for "competitive co-existence" between the private and public sectors (regulated by law in December 1976 and July 1977); tax, credit and technical incentives for firms helping to promote regional development, increase exports, substitute imports or reduce unemployment; a prices and incomes policy and legislation to regulate worker participation in management; in October 1976 and June 1977 workers' liability to dismissal and right to strike were regulated by law. The 1977 ceiling for wage rises was 15 per cent, and was expected to be 20 per cent in 1978.

The Sines development area south of Lisbon, planned to cover 400,000 hectares of land, continued to expand during 1977, with a port, petrochemical complex and ship-building and -repairing yards. A new refinery with a 10 million ton annual capacity was due to go on stream early in 1978.

The Government's austerity measures, coupled with the improved political stability, have had some effect; GDP rose in 1976 by 5 per cent and in January-June 1977 by an estimated further 7.5 per cent, revenue from tourism and remittances from workers abroad recovered in 1976 and 1977 to almost pre-Revolution levels, and the foreign investment codes of April 1976 and August 1977 have helped to increase investment in industry.

The 1972 Portugal-EEC trade agreement was strengthened and extended in 1976. Portugal has been granted many international loans and credits, particularly from the U.S.A. and the IMF; in June 1977 an 11-country consortium loan of $750 million was promised. In October 1976 EFTA set up a 25-year $100 million fund for industrial development in Portugal.

Transport and Communication

There are 34,085 km. of roads in Portugal. The State-operated railways cover 3,563 km. Portugal's merchant fleet had a displacement of 1,127,481 gross registered tons in 1976. Regular air services connect Lisbon with European, American and African capitals.

Social Welfare

A Ministry of Social Affairs is maintained within the structure of the present Government, with two Secretariats of State, one for Health and one for Social Security. Under the new Constitution the State is obliged to provide a social security system and full health facilities. The Government's programme foresees the establishment of a National Social Security system and a free National Health Service covering the whole population. Many measures have already been taken including the integration of all health services under the responsibility of the Secretariat of State for Health, increased family allowances, old age pensions, pensions for the handicapped and a statutory minimum wage.

Education

Education is free and compulsory between the ages of 7 and 14, and consists of four years' primary school followed by three years' continuation classes. Compulsory schooling at the age of 6 has been virtually guaranteed by the State. Secondary education is voluntary and fees are charged. State fees are low and scholarships are provided. There are eleven universities, and about thirty colleges and institutes providing technical and vocational courses. The bacharelado is generally awarded after three years, and the licenciatura after five; all universities award doctorates and the creation of a Master's degree is envisaged. University entrance examinations were reintroduced in the 1977/78 academic year, and the year of civic service formerly required was replaced by one of introductory study.

An adult literacy programme has been launched aiming to reduce the 35 per cent illiteracy rate.

Tourism

Portugal is popular with visitors because of its mild and clement weather. Apart from Lisbon and the Algarve on the mainland, Madeira and the Azores are much favoured as winter resorts. In 1975 only 1,966,409 tourists visited

Introductory Survey, Statistical Survey

Portugal, Madeira and the Azores, compared with over 2.6 million in 1974 and 4.1 million in 1973. This was due to the prevailing climate of political instability. However, in 1976 the number of foreign visitors increased by 9 per cent over 1975, and in the first nine months of 1977 by 36 per cent over the same period in 1976.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter Portugal: Andorra, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Ecuador, Finland, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Malta, Monaco, the Netherlands, Norway, Peru, Romania, Spain, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Tunisia, Turkey, the United Kingdom, the U.S.A., Yugoslavia.

Nationals of Belgium, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Liechtenstein and Switzerland do not require a passport to enter Portugal.

Sport

Association football is Portugal's principal sport.

THE CONSTITUTION

(The Constitution was promulgated on April 2nd, 1976.)

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES

Portugal is a sovereign Republic based on the dignity of the individual and the will of the people, and is committed to its own transformation into a classless society. It is a unitary state and comprises the territory defined by history on the European continent and the archipelagos of the Azores and Madeira. The territory of Macao, under Portuguese administration, shall be governed by a Statute in keeping with its special situation. The archipelagos of the Azores and Madeira shall constitute autonomous regions with their own political and administrative statutes.

The fundamental duties of the State are to safeguard national independence; to secure the organized participation by the people in the solving of national problems and to socialize the means of production and wealth; to promote general welfare and the quality of life and to abolish the exploitation and oppression of man by man. The alliance between the Armed Forces Movement and the democratic parties and organizations shall serve the peaceful advance of the revolutionary process.

FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS AND DUTIES

All citizens are equal before the law, enjoying the rights and being subject to the duties laid down in the Constitution.

Rights, freedoms and safeguards

The State upholds the following rights, freedoms and safeguards:

- the right to life, there being no death penalty in any case whatsoever;
- the right of habeas corpus and to safeguards in criminal proceedings;
- the right to the inviolability of the individual's home and correspondence;
- the right to information on the contents of data banks concerning them and on the use for which it is intended;
- the right to marriage and divorce, the spouses having the same rights and duties; discrimination against illegitimate children being forbidden;
- the right to freedom of expression and information, and of the press;
- the right of political parties, trade unions and professional organizations to utilize the radio and television broadcasting facilities;

- the right to freedom of conscience, religion, worship and intellectual, artistic and scientific creation;
- the freedom to learn and teach shall be safeguarded; public education shall not be denominational;
- the right to freedom of movement and migration;
- the right to freedom of assembly, demonstration and association, including the right to establish or join political associations and parties;
- the right to take part in political life and the control of the country's public affairs.

Economic, social and cultural rights and duties

The collective appropriation of the means of production, the planning of economic development and the democratization of institutions are safeguards and conditions for the effective exercise of the following rights and duties:

- the right and the duty to work;
- the right to full, secure employment, with equality of opportunity;
- the right to remuneration, training and good working conditions;
- the right to elect workers' committees in plenary assemblies by direct and secret ballot, to ensure the defence of their interests and a democratic share in the running of the company;
- the freedom to form trade unions, the right to strike and the prohibition of lock-outs;
- the right to set up co-operatives and experiments in self-management;
- the right to private property and to its transfer;
- the right to social security and access to medical services;
- the right to a healthy and ecologically balanced human environment;
- the right to a dwelling of adequate size;
- the duty of the State and of society to protect the family, children, the elderly and those who are physically or mentally disabled;
- the right to education, culture and sport;
- the duty of the State to encourage and protect scientific research and to preserve and defend the country's cultural heritage.

ECONOMIC ORGANIZATION

The economic and social organization of Portugal shall be based on the development of socialist relations of production through collectivization of the principal means of production, land and natural resources and through the exercise of democratic power by the working classes. It is the duty of the State:

- to promote an increase in the social and economic well-being of the people;
- to stabilize the economy and to ensure the full use of the means of production;
- to promote equality;
- to improve the distribution of wealth and income;
- to encourage the balanced development of all sectors and regions;
- to abolish and prevent the formation of private monopolies, by nationalization or other means, and to stop the abuse of economic power;
- to achieve agrarian reform;
- to encourage social and economic equality between towns and rural areas;
- to ensure fair competition between enterprises by providing legal protection for small- and medium-sized firms;
- to promote a system of democratic economic planning;
- to promote the development of socialist relations of production;
- to encourage the participation of the working classes in the economic and social organization of the country.

The State shall promote the establishment of co-operatives. Private economic initiative may be exercised in those areas of activity allowed by law, provided that it contributes towards the progress of the community. Foreign investment and participation in economic activity shall be regulated by law, to ensure that they contribute to the country's development in accordance with the Plan and to safeguard national independence and the interest of the workers.

During the transition to socialism there shall be three sectors of ownership: the public, co-operative and private sectors. The public sector shall comprise collectivized property and production units under the following forms of management:

- property and production units managed by the State and by other public bodies corporate;
- property and production units used and managed by workers' collectives;
- community property used and managed by local authorities.

The development of social ownership shall be based on the expansion of the public and co-operative sectors. Production units managed by the State and other public bodies corporate shall, as far as possible, evolve towards forms of self-management.

PLAN

The Plan, which may be long-term, medium-term or annual, will be drawn up by a National Planning Council and approved by the Assembly of the Republic. The country shall be divided into planning regions.

AGRARIAN REFORM

The aim of agrarian reform is to improve the economic, social and cultural situation of farm workers, to increase agricultural production and productivity and to create effective equality between farm workers and other workers. Latifundia will be eliminated and property which has been expropriated shall be handed over to small farmers, farm workers, co-operatives or other units of collective exploitation by workers. Small land holdings will be reapportioned so as to improve their productive capacity. The agrarian reform programme will guarantee the ownership of land by small- and medium-sized land holdings where the holding is in use and will protect the interests of emigrants and of those who have no other means of sustenance. Co-operatives and other forms of collective farming by workers will be formed. With regard to land owned by aliens, the stability and lawful interests of the cultivator are safeguarded.

FINANCIAL AND FISCAL SYSTEM

The structure of the financial and fiscal system shall be laid down by law in such a way as to encourage savings and to provide security for those savings, and to ensure the use of financial resources with a view to achieving the equal distribution of wealth and incomes. The General State Budget, which shall be drawn up by the Government and approved by vote in the Assembly of the Republic, shall be supervised by the Assembly and the Audit Office.

TRADE

The State shall intervene in the fixing and regulation of prices and the rationalization of the distribution network. Misleading advertising shall be prohibited. In external trade relations, the State shall also intervene in the promotion and control of external trade transactions and in the inspection of the quality and price of imported and exported goods.

POLITICAL ORGANIZATION

Political power shall lie with the people. The organs of sovereignty shall be: the President of the Republic, the Council of the Revolution, the Assembly of the Republic, the Government and the Courts.

Direct, secret and regular elections shall be the general rule in appointing the members of the elected organs of sovereignty, the Autonomous Regions and local government. Electoral registration is compulsory. No-one shall hold political office for life.

PRESIDENT OF THE REPUBLIC

The President of the Republic shall represent the Republic and shall exercise the functions of the President of the Council of the Revolution and of the Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces in an ex-officio capacity. He shall be elected by direct and secret universal adult suffrage. Citizens entitled to vote who are Portuguese by origin and more than 35 years of age shall be eligible for election. No-one shall be re-elected for a third consecutive term of office or during the five years immediately following the end of the second consecutive term of office. Nominations for the office of President shall be sponsored by no less than 7,500 and no more than 15,000 citizens entitled to vote. The candidate who obtains more than half the valid votes will be elected President of the Republic. If no candidate obtains this number of votes, there shall be a second ballot within 21 days of the first. The President shall hold office for five years.

The President shall be held answerable before the High Court of Justice for those crimes committed in the exercise of his duties. For those crimes not connected with the exercise of his duties, he shall be held answerable after his term of office ends. He may resign by means of a direct message to the Council of the Revolution and the Assembly of the Republic. In the event of his resignation, absence or temporary incapacity, his functions will be assumed by the President of the Assembly of the Republic.

The duties of the President of the Republic are as follows:

- to preside over the Council of the Revolution;
- to fix the dates for the elections to the Assembly;
- to convene extraordinary sessions of the Assembly;
- to address the Assembly and to dissolve it;

to appoint and dismiss the Prime Minister;
to appoint and dismiss members of the Government at the proposal of the Prime Minister;
to preside over the Council of Ministers when the Prime Minister so requests; to dissolve or suspend organs of the Autonomous Regions after consulting the Council of the Revolution; to appoint one of the members of the Constitutional Commission and the Chairman of the Advisory Commission on the Autonomous Regions;
to appoint and dismiss the President of the Audit Office, the Procurador-Geral and the State representatives in the Autonomous Regions at the proposal of the Government; to promulgate and have published laws, decree-laws, and regulations and to sign other decrees;
to declare a state of siege or emergency;
to take decisions on all national emergencies;
to grant pardons and commute sentences;
to appoint ambassadors and special envoys at the proposal of the Government and to accept the credentials of foreign diplomatic representatives; to ratify approved international treaties;
to declare war and sign peace treaties.

The President may exercise the right of veto on legislation emanating from the Assembly. Some of the acts specified above must be countersigned by the Government and others are subject to the approval of the Council of the Revolution.

COUNCIL OF THE REVOLUTION

The Council of the Revolution acts as an advisory body to the President, as guarantor of the proper working of democratic institutions, of the implementation of the Constitution and of loyalty to the spirit of the Portuguese Revolution of April 25th, 1974. It also serves as a political and legislative organ in military matters.

The Council is composed of the President, the Chief and Deputy Chief of the General Staff, the Prime Minister (if he is a member of the armed forces), eight army officers, three air force officers and three navy officers (all elected by their own branch of the armed forces) and the three Chiefs of Staff.

The duties of the Council are as follows:

to advise the President on the exercise of his duties;
to authorize him to declare war and to make peace, to declare a state of siege or emergency and to absent himself from the national territory;
to decide on his temporary or permanent physical incapacity;
to pronounce on the constitutionality of any act before it is promulgated or signed;
to ensure that the necessary measures for the implementation of the Constitution are taken;
to decide on the constitutionality of any legislation published and to declare the unconstitutionality of the same;
to advise the President on the appointment and dismissal of the Prime Minister and on the exercise of the right of veto;
to make laws and regulations concerning the organization, operation and discipline of the armed forces;
to approve international treaties or agreements of a military nature.

ASSEMBLY OF THE REPUBLIC

The Assembly shall have a minimum of 240 and a maximum of 250 members, elected by the electoral constituency in a number proportionate to the number of citizens on the district's electoral register. Members of the Assembly who are civil servants, officials of other public bodies corporate or who are appointed as members of the Government, shall not exercise both functions at the same time. The duties of the Assembly are as follows:

to approve amendments to the Constitution and to approve the political and administrative statutes of the Autonomous Regions and the Statute of the territory of Macao;
to enact legislation on all subjects except those which the Constitution reserves to the Council of the Revolution or the Government;
to confer legislative authority on the Government;
to grant amnesties;
to approve the Plan and the Budget;
to authorize the Government to raise loans and engage in other credit transactions not involving floating debts;
to define the limits of the territorial waters and Portugal's rights to adjacent sea-beds;
to approve treaties;
to discharge other functions conferred on it under the Constitution and by law;
to supervise the fulfilment of the Constitution and laws and to scrutinize Government acts; to ratify declarations of a state of siege or emergency exceeding 30 days and to ratify those Government decree-laws which are not the exclusive responsibility of the Government;
to supervise the accounts of the State and of other public bodies determined by law;
to scrutinize the annual and final reports on the National Plan;
to scrutinize the Government's programme;
to pass motions of confidence in, and censure of, the Government; to express opinions on the dissolution or suspension of the organs of the Autonomous Regions;
to appoint the Provedor de Justiça, one member of the Constitutional Commission and two members of the Advisory Commission on the Autonomous Regions; to exercise sole legislative competence in the following matters: citizenship; the status and capacity of persons; rights, freedoms and safeguards; states of siege and emergency; the definition of non-military crimes, penalties, security measures and criminal proceedings; the elections of members of the organs of sovereignty, the Autonomous Regions and local authorities; associations and political parties; the organization of the local municipal authorities; the participation by local people's organizations in local government; the organization and powers of the judiciary, the Public Prosecutor and magistrates (with the exception of military courts); the organization of national defence; the organization and sphere of action of the civil service and the civil liability of the Administration; the bases of the educational system; the fiscal system and taxes; the determination of the sectors of ownership of the means of production and the delimitation of private enterprise; the methods and forms of intervention, nationalization and socialization of the means of production and the criteria for determining compensation; the bases of agrarian reform including the criteria for determining the maximum size of private farming units; the monetary system and the weights and measures standard; the planning system and the remuneration of the President, members of the Assembly and Government and the judges of the High Courts;
may authorize the Government to issue decree-laws on matters within their exclusive competence; to draw up and approve its Rules of Procedure, to elect its President and other members of the Bureau (Mesa) and to constitute and elect the Standing Committee and other committees.

Each legislative period shall last four years. In case of dissolution, the Assembly subsequently elected shall not begin a new legislative period. In the event of an election, as a result of dissolution, during the last legislative session, the newly elected Assembly shall complete the current legislative period and continue throughout the following one. The Assembly shall not be dissolved during a state of siege or emergency.

The legislative session shall run from October 15th to June 15th each year. Extraordinary sessions shall be convened at the initiative of the Standing Committee or in, the case of grave emergency, if the Standing Committee is unable to meet, on its own initiative. The President may convene extraordinary sessions. Members of the Government shall be entitled to attend and speak at plenary sittings of the Assembly. Between legislative sessions and during suspensions, the Standing Committee of the Assembly shall function, and shall have the powers of the Assembly. The President shall be required to dissolve the Assembly when, by withholding its confidence from the Government, or passing a motion of censure on it, it has brought about a third change of Government.

GOVERNMENT

The Government formulates the general policy of the country and is the highest organ of public administration. It shall comprise the Prime Minister, Ministers, Secretaries and Under-Secretaries of State and may include one or more Deputy Prime Ministers. The Secretaries and Under-Secretaries of State are not part of the Council of Ministers although they may be called to meetings. The Prime Minister is appointed and dismissed by the President after being advised by the Council of the Revolution and those parties represented in the Assembly, also taking into account the electoral results. Other members of the Government are appointed by the President at the proposal of the Prime Minister. The Government shall be responsible to the President and the Assembly. With the dismissal of the Prime Minister the duties of all other members of the Government cease.

The Government's programme shall be presented to the Assembly for scrutiny within not more than 10 days of the appointment of the Prime Minister, and can be rejected only by an absolute majority of members entitled to vote. The Government may ask the Assembly for a vote of confidence. The Government shall resign if its programme is rejected, a motion of confidence is not approved, or if two motions of censure are approved at an interval of not less than 30 days by an absolute majority of members entitled to vote. The President shall dissolve the Assembly only if the Government's programme is rejected three consecutive times or if there have been three changes of Government caused by the Assembly's withholding its confidence or passing a motion of censure.

The duties of the Government are as follows:

- to countersign specified acts of the President;
- to negotiate and approve the texts of international conventions;
- to approve international agreements and those treaties which fall within its competence;
- to exercise other political acts entrusted to it under the constitution or by law;
- to issue decree-laws on matters that are not confined to the Council of the Revolution or the Assembly;
- to issue decree-laws on matters confined to the Assembly subject to the latter's authorization;
- to issue decree-laws in application of laws laying down legal principles or bases;

- to legislate on its own organization and operation;
- to draw up the Plan and the General State Budget and to supervise their implementation;
- to make regulations that are necessary for the proper execution of the laws;
- to supervise the administration of the State and the administration of the Autonomous Regions;
- to exercise all acts required by law concerning the officials and personnel of the State and of other public bodies corporate;
- to defend democratic legality;
- to promote economic and social development and to satisfy the needs of the people.

The Council of Ministers shall be competent to:

- determine the general lines of Government policy and its implementation;
- decide whether to seek votes of confidence in the Assembly;
- approve private members' bills;
- approve decree-laws in direct implementation of the Government's programme;
- approve the National Plan and Budget;
- approve acts of the Government that involve increases or decreases in public revenue or expenditure.

The Prime Minister shall be competent to direct the Government's general policy and functioning.

JUDICIARY

The courts are organs of sovereignty with competence to administer justice in the name of the people. They shall be independent and subject only to law. Decisions of the courts shall be binding on all public and private institutions and shall prevail over the decisions of all other authorities. Court sessions shall generally be public. There shall be Courts of First Instance (District Courts), Courts of Second Instance (Courts of Appeal) and the Supreme Court of Justice, which is the highest court of law. There shall also be military courts and a Court of Audit, and there may also be administrative and revenue courts.

The jury, which operates when the plaintiff or defendant so requests, shall comprise the judges of the plenary court and the jurors. People's judges may be created, and other forms of participation by the people in the administration of justice established, by law. The Court of Audit shall supervise the general accounts of the State. The judges shall form a single body governed by a single statute. They are irremovable and shall not be held liable for their decisions except as provided for by law. It is the duty of the Ministério Público to represent the State, take criminal proceedings and defend democratic legality and those interests determined by law. It shall have independent status. Its highest organ is the Procuradoria-Geral which is presided over by the Procurador-Geral.

AUTONOMOUS REGIONS

The special political and administrative arrangements for the archipelagos of the Azores and Madeira shall be based on their geographical, economic and social conditions and on the historic aspirations of the people to autonomy. This regional autonomy shall in no way affect the State's full sovereignty and shall be exercised within the limits of the Constitution. The political and administrative statutes of the Regions shall be drafted by the Regional Assemblies and sent for discussion and approval to the Assembly of the Republic. The Autonomous Regions shall be public law bodies. Their duties are as follows:

- to legislate on matters of special interest to the regions, subject to the Constitution and to the general laws of the Republic; to regulate regional legislation and certain general laws;

 to table bills in the Assembly of the Republic;
 to exercise their own executive authority;
 to administer and dispose of their own assets and to make acts and contracts;
 to dispose of revenue collected by them and of any other revenue assigned to them and to apply all such revenue to cover their own expenses;
 to guide and supervise their local authorities;
 to supervise public services and institutions, nationalized concerns, etc.;
 to draw up the regional economic plan and participate in the preparation of the National Plan;
 to participate in laying down and implementing fiscal, monetary, financial and foreign exchange policies in order to secure regional control of the means of payment in circulation and to finance necessary regional investment; to participate in the negotiation of and the benefits from, international treaties and agreements which may concern them.

The organs of sovereignty shall always consult the organs of regional government on those questions within their powers which concern the Autonomous Regions. The sovereignty of the Republic is represented in each of the Autonomous Regions by a Minister of the Republic appointed by the President on the proposal of the Prime Minister after consultation with the Council of the Revolution.

The organs of government in the Autonomous Regions are: the Regional Assembly, elected by direct and secret universal suffrage, and the Regional Government which shall be politically responsible to the Regional Assembly. Its Chairman is appointed by the Minister of the Republic after taking into account the election results. The Minister shall appoint or dismiss members of the Regional Government on the proposal of its Chairman. The President of the Republic may, after consulting the Council of the Revolution and the Assembly of the Republic, dissolve or suspend the organs of the Autonomous Regions for acts contrary to the Constitution. In the case of dissolution or suspension the government of the region shall be carried out by the Minister of the Republic. Regional decrees and regulations shall be submitted to the Minister of the Republic for signature and publication. If the Minister exercises his right of veto but the Regional Assembly confirms its vote by absolute majority of its sitting members, the veto is quashed.

The President of the Republic shall be assisted by a five-member advisory commission on the affairs of the Autonomous Regions.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The local authorities shall be territorial bodies corporate with representative organs serving the particular interests of the local population.

The local authorities on the mainland shall be the parishes, municipal authorities and administrative regions. The Autonomous Regions of the Azores and Madeira shall comprise parishes and municipal authorities. In large metropolitan areas other organizational forms of territorial self-government may be established by law.

Local authorities: The organization of each local authority shall include an assembly, elected by direct and secret universal suffrage of resident citizens by a system of proportional representation, which has powers of decision; and a corporate executive organ responsible to the assembly. The assemblies shall have the power to issue regulations within the limits of the Constitution and laws. The local authorities shall be supervised on the mainland by the Government and in the Azores and Madeira by the local regional organs.

Parishes: The representative organs of the parish shall be the elected parish assembly and the parish council, which shall be the executive organ of the parish and shall be elected by the assembly in secret ballot from among its members.

Municipal authorities: The existing concelhos shall be the municipal authorities provided for in the Constitution. Others may be created, or those that are manifestly not viable may be abolished by law. The representative organs shall be the municipal assembly, comprising the chairmen of the parish councils and at least an equal number of members elected by the votes in the municipal area; the municipal chamber, which shall be the corporate executive organ of the authority and which shall be elected by resident citizens entitled to vote; and the municipal council which shall be the authority's advisory organ representing economic, social, cultural and professional organizations.

Administrative regions: The areas of these regions shall correspond to those of the planning regions. They shall participate in the preparation and implementation of the regional plan and shall co-ordinate with and give support to the municipal authorities and the management of public services. The representative organs of the region shall be the regional assembly, comprising, in addition to representatives elected directly by the citizens, at least an equal number of members elected by the municipal authorities; the regional committee which shall be the corporate executive organ of the region and which shall be elected by the regional assembly in secret ballot from among its members; and the regional council which shall be the advisory organ of the region representing cultural, social, economic and professional organizations.

In each region there shall be a representative of the Government, appointed by the Council of Ministers. Pending establishment of regions the division into districts shall continue. There shall be in each district a deliberating assembly with a civil governor as chairman who represents the Government.

Local people's organizations: These organizations may be established for areas smaller than the parish. The structure shall include an assembly of residents and a committee of residents. The assembly shall comprise residents enrolled in the census and those not so enrolled who are over 16 years of age, and shall meet when publicly convened by at least 20 of its members or by the committee of residents. The committee shall be elected by secret ballot by the assembly, which can dismiss it at will. The organizations may petition local authorities on local administrative matters of concern to residents and participate in the parish assembly without the right to vote.

PUBLIC ADMINISTRATIVE AUTHORITIES

The public administrative authorities shall seek to promote the public interest whilst respecting the legal interests and rights of all citizens. They shall be structured in such a way as to bring their services closer to the population, to ensure the participation of those concerned in its effective management and to avoid bureaucracy. The law shall establish suitable forms of administrative decentralization and devolution without affecting the efficiency, unity of action and the powers of direction and supervision of the Government. Citizens shall have the right to be informed of, and have redress against, the public administrative authorities when the matter directly concerns them.

PORTUGAL

ARMED FORCES

The Portuguese Armed Forces shall safeguard national independence, the unity of the State and the integrity of the national territory. They shall form part of the people and shall secure the continuation of the Revolution of April 25th, 1974. Their mission is to secure those conditions in which Portuguese society may effect a peaceful and pluralistic transition to democracy and socialism. The

SAFEGUARDS AND REVISION OF THE CONSTITUTION

SAFEGUARDS FOR THE CONSTITUTION

Before promulgation, all laws or decree-laws and all instruments approving international treaties or agreements shall be sent simultaneously to the President and the Council of the Revolution for a decision on their constitutionality. If the Council rules that any act is unconstitutional the President shall exercise his right of veto. In the case of an instrument of the Assembly, it shall not be promulgated unless the Assembly approves it again by a majority of two-thirds of its members present. The Council of the Revolution shall be assisted by a Constitutional Commission which shall comprise a member of the Council of the Revolution appointed by the Council and who has the casting vote; four judges, one appointed by the Supreme Court of Justice and the other three appointed by the Conselho Superior da Magistratura; and four citizens of recognized merit, one appointed by the President, one by the Assembly of the Republic and two by the Council of the Revolution, one of them being a lawyer. The Commission's members shall hold office for four years, shall be independent and irremovable and, when exercising judicial functions, shall enjoy the safeguards as to impartiality and the immunity proper to judges.

CONSTITUTIONAL REVISION

During the second legislative period the Assembly shall have the power to revise the Constitution which shall lapse once the revision law has been approved. Changes in the Constitution shall be approved by a majority of two-thirds of the members of the Assembly present, provided that the number of such members exceeds an absolute majority of the members entitled to vote. The Assembly may revise the Constitution by a two-thirds majority of the House five years after the date of publication of any previous revision law. It may, however, revise the Constitution at any time by a four-fifths majority of the House after the first revision.

The Constitution may not be revised while a state of siege or emergency is in force. The laws of constitutional revision must respect:

national independence and the unity of the State; armed forces shall be strictly non-partisan and shall only serve the Portuguese people, not any particular party or organization. Military service shall be compulsory and it is the duty of every Portuguese to defend the nation. Civic service may be established as a substitute for, or as a complement to, military service and may be made compulsory by law for citizens not subject to military service.

the republican form of government;
the separation of the Church and State;
the rights, freedoms and safeguards of the people;
the rights of workers, workers' committees and trade unions;
the principle of collectivization of the principal means of production and land and of natural resources, and the abolition of monopolies and large estates;
the democratic planning of the economy;
the appointment of elected members of the organs of sovereignty, of the Autonomous Regions and of local government by direct, secret and regular universal suffrage and the system of proportional representation; plurality of expression and of political organization, including political parties, and the right of democratic opposition;
the participation by local people's organizations in local government;
the separation and interdependence of the organs of sovereignty;
the scrutiny of legal provisions for active unconstitutionality and unconstitutionality by omission;
the independence of the judiciary;
the autonomy of local authorities;
the political and administrative autonomy of the archipelagos of the Azores and Madeira.

FINAL AND TRANSITORY PROVISIONS

Those laws promulgated before the Constitution became legally effective shall continue to be in force provided that they are not opposed to the Constitution or to the principles laid down therein. The Code of Military Law and any legislation connected therewith shall be brought into line with the Constitution within one year of publication thereof, failing which the said Code and legislation shall lapse. The first Assembly shall be elected on the basis of one deputy for every 25,000 electors.

The Statute of the territory of Macao, promulgated on February 17th, 1976, shall continue in force. Portugal shall remain bound by its responsibility, in accordance with international law, to promote and safeguard the right to independence of East Timor.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The State is represented in the courts by the Public Prosecution, whose highest organ is the Procuradoria-Geral da República (Attorney General's Office).

Procurador-Geral: EDUARDO AUGUSTO DE ARALA CHAVES.

The principle of habeas corpus is recognized and persons illegally detained may appeal to the Supreme Court.

Judges are appointed for life and are irremovable. Conditions of appointment, service, dismissal, pension and transfer are governed by law. They may take no other office of profit under the Government, except service on permanent or temporary commissions. The Conselho Superior da Magistratura controls their appointment, transfer and promotion and the exercise of disciplinary action.

The jury system was reintroduced in 1976 although it operates only at the request of the prosecutor or defendant.

The Supreme Court: Praça do Comércio, Lisbon; it is the highest organ of the judicial system and has jurisdiction over Metropolitan Portugal and Macao; it consists of a president and 22 judges; Pres. JOSÉ JOAQUIM ALMEIDA BORGES.

Courts of Second Instance (or Courts of Appeal): there are four courts of appeal; that in Lisbon consists of a president and 26 magistrates and also has jurisdiction over Macao; in Oporto, of a president and 20 magistrates; in Coimbra, of a president and 12 magistrates; and in Évora, of a president and 9 magistrates.

Courts of First Instance: there is one court for every judicial district or comarca, including one in Macao.

Special Courts: these have exclusive jurisdiction in certain matters, i.e. military courts for military crimes, a Court of Audit to judge the public accounts and administrative and revenue courts.

RELIGION

The dominant religion is Roman Catholicism. There is freedom of worship, and some Protestant Churches have been established.

In 1976 there were 8,485,775 Roman Catholics in Portugal.

THE PRESS

After the coup d'état of April 1974 censorship of the press was abolished. Under the 1976 Constitution the freedom of the press is guaranteed in so far as it affects: freedom of expression and creation by journalists and writers; intervention by journalists of those organs of the mass media which do not belong to the State or to political parties; the right to found newspapers and other publications; permission for periodical publications to become the property of non-profit-making collective organizations, of societies formed by journalists' groups or publishing companies and of Portuguese citizens; and the independence of the press.

The Lisbon newspapers A Capital, Diário de Lisboa, Diário de Notícias, Diário Popular, Jornal de Comércio (which ceased publication in 1976) and O Século (ceased publication in February 1977) were owned by various banking and financial groups which were nationalized in 1974 and 1975 and have since themselves become state-owned.

Oporto is the principal press centre in northern Portugal. Two of its principal morning dailies, O Comércio do Porto and Jornal de Notícias, are now partly government-owned since the nationalization of the majority of their issued share capital, and the Government has proposed their merger.

Decree-law No. 639/76 of July 29th, 1976, nationalized the following newspaper publishing groups: Sociedade Nacional de Tipografia, Sociedade Industrial de Imprensa, Sociedade Gráfica de A Capital and Empresa Nacional de Publicidade. The following state-owned groups were established: EPNC—Empresa Pública dos Jornais Notícias e Capital and EPSP—Empresa Pública dos Jornais O Século e Diário Popular.

Circulations have recently been falling and many newspapers, particularly in the State-owned sector, have been making heavy losses. In September 1977 the Government announced that it could no longer subsidize unprofitable publications, which must adopt Government guidelines to improve their economic viability or risk bankruptcy.

ROMANIA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Socialist Republic of Romania lies in south-east Europe, bounded to the north and north-east by the U.S.S.R., to the north-west by Hungary, to the south-west by Yugoslavia and to the south by Bulgaria. The south-east coast is washed by the Black Sea. It has a climate of hot summers and cold winters with a moderate rainfall. The average summer temperature is 21°C (70°F) and the winter average is -2°C (28°F). The official language is Romanian, a Romance language, although there are minority groups speaking German and Hungarian. The dominant religion is the Romanian Orthodox Church. The national flag (proportions 5 by 3) consists of three vertical stripes, blue, yellow and red, the middle stripe bearing the state emblem. The capital is Bucharest.

Recent History

A government of Communists, Social Democrats and members of the Ploughmen's Front, under the leadership of Dr. Petru Groza, was constituted following a coup towards the end of the Second World War, and after elections in 1946 Communists held most of the important posts. A People's Republic was declared in December 1947 and King Michael was forced to abdicate. In 1948 the Republic's first constitution was adopted, and in the same year the nationalization of the main industrial and financial institutions was begun. There followed numerous political arrests, during which full control was gained by the Communist People's Democratic Front. In 1952, following a purge in the Communist Party, a new constitution closer to the Soviet model was adopted. Gheorghe Gheorghiu-Dej was the most important figure in the Government from that time until his death in March 1965. He was succeeded as First Secretary by Nicolae Ceaușescu. A new constitution in August 1965 made Romania a Socialist Republic. Ceaușescu also became President of the Council of State (Head of State) in December 1967. Following a constitutional amendment, he became President of the Republic in March 1974. Following the elections of March 1975, the new Grand National Assembly re-elected Ceaușescu as Head of State. In January 1977 a major party and government reshuffle was carried out, aimed at strengthening the country's economic management and also Ceaușescu's own position. Changes included an expansion of the Permanent Bureau of the Communist Party from five to nine members.

Romania joined the CMEA in 1949, and the Warsaw Pact and the United Nations in 1955. Romania has gradually adopted a more independent foreign policy, including the development of friendly relations with the People's Republic of China and Western countries. This policy has generally been regarded with disapproval by the other Eastern bloc countries.

Government

Under the 1965 Constitution, the supreme organ of state power is the unicameral Grand National Assembly, with 349 members elected by universal adult suffrage for five years (210 candidates were elected unopposed in March 1975). The Assembly elects from its number the State Council (18 members) to be its permanent organ. The President of the Republic (an office created in March 1974) is elected by the Assembly for its duration and is also President of the State Council. The Council of Ministers, the highest organ of state administration, is elected by (and responsible to) the Assembly.

Political power is held by the Romanian Communist Party (RCP), the only legal party, which dominates the Front of Socialist Unity. The Front presents an approved list of candidates for elections to representative bodies. The Head of State is General Secretary of the RCP and Chairman of the Front. The RCP's highest authority is the Party Congress, convened every five years. The Congress elects a Central Committee which in its turn elects an Executive Political Committee from its members to direct policy. The Executive Committee has a nine-member Permanent Bureau (including the President), which is the Party's most powerful policy-making body.

Romania comprises 40 administrative districts, each with a People's Council elected for five years.

Defence

Romania is a member of the Warsaw Pact. Military service is compulsory and lasts for 16 months in the army and air force, and two years in the navy. Total regular forces are estimated at 180,000, comprising army 140,000, navy 10,000 and air force 30,000. There are 37,000 paramilitary forces, including border troops, and a militia of about 700,000. The defence budget for 1977 totalled 11,300 million lei.

Economic Affairs

Formerly based on agriculture, forestry and oil, the Romanian economy has experienced radical changes since the Second World War, and it is now dominated by industry. At least 50 per cent of national investment since the war has been in industry, and by 1980 it is expected to account for over 65 per cent of the national income. All of industry, mines, banks, telecommunications, transport and external trade enterprises have been nationalized. The most important industries are mainly heavy: oil and natural gas, mining and metallurgy, mechanical engineering, chemicals and timber processing. All branches of light industry account for about 30 per cent of total industrial output. Principal exports include oil products, timber, machinery and equipment, mineral raw materials, metals and chemical products. Agriculture still plays an important part in the Romanian economy, utilizing about 60 per cent of the land area and employing about 38 per cent of the population. A state-financed irrigation plan to be completed in 1990 aims to increase agricultural production. Cereals and fruit make large contributions to the export trade. As a result of the development of plantations and vineyards, Romania is now one of the principal grape-producing countries in the world. Other important products are wheat, maize, rye, sunflower seed, sugar beet, potatoes, plums, apples and eggs. In addition, the food industry contributes about 15 per cent of Romania's exports.

The majority of the targets of the fourth Five-Year Plan (1966-70) were exceeded. Real wages, however, rose by only 20 per cent instead of the 25 per cent planned, and the target was reduced to 20 per cent under the fifth Five-Year Plan (1971-75) which once more emphasized expansion of industry in preference to consumption. A growth rate of 13 per cent was achieved over this period.

The sixth Five-Year Plan (1976-80) is again being directed towards increased industrial expansion and development of foreign trade. Investment should expand by 80 per cent, and foreign trade is expected to double. The national income is planned to grow by about 65 per cent, and real wages by 18 to 22 per cent over the five-year period. It is envisaged that industrial output will increase by 10 to 11 per cent a year, priority being given to the chemical and machine-building industries, and agricultural output by about 5 per cent a year. However, industry was greatly disrupted by a severe earthquake in March 1977.

Although the Soviet Union is still Romania's biggest trade partner, Romania has developed important trade relations with Western countries, having agreements with France, the United Kingdom, the U.S.A., Federal Germany, Italy and other countries, including Japan. Trade exchanges with the developing countries have greatly increased in recent years, and are expected to account for over a third of foreign trade by 1980. In 1975, 35 per cent of Romania's trade was with CMEA countries. Romania became a contracting party to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) in November 1971, and was accepted into the EEC's generalized preference scheme for developing countries on January 1st, 1974. Romania also joined the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank in December 1972.

Transport and Communications

There are about 11,000 km. of State railways and 77,768 kilometres of national roads of which 27,882 kilometres have been modernized. The state airlines, TAROM and LAR, provide daily flights between the capital and chief towns, and international services to Europe, America, Africa and Asia. Navigation on the Danube is open to shipping of all nations. The joint Romanian-Yugoslav Iron Gates power and navigation system on the Danube was completed in 1972. The chief ports, Constanța (on the Black Sea), Galați, Brăila and Giurgiu (on the Danube) have been modernized.

Social Welfare

Romania has a comprehensive state insurance scheme, premiums being paid by enterprises and institutions employing the wage-earners. In 1974 over 9,178 million lei were appropriated to public health protection, representing about 5 per cent of the state budget. Maternity allowances absorbed 600 million lei of this total. There were 198,000 hospital beds and 35,000 doctors in 1976. In addition, funds are allotted to sickness benefits, children's allowances, pensions, and the provision of health resorts for children and workers.

Education

Education is free and compulsory for ten years between the ages of 6 and 16 years. Before this age, children may attend crèches (creșe), and kindergartens (grădinițe de copii). Between the ages of 6 and 16 years children attend the general educational school (școala de bază de cultură generală de zece ani). Compulsory education ends with the ten-year school, but the majority of pupils continue with their studies in secondary schools. Provided they pass the appropriate examination, this period begins after the first eight years of general education.

The general secondary school (liceu), for which a candidate is required to take an entrance examination, provides students with a specialized education suitable for entering college or university. There are also specialized secondary schools, where the emphasis is laid upon industrial, agricultural and teacher training, and art schools, which correspond to secondary schools but cover several years of general education. Vocational secondary schools (școli profesionale de ucenici) train pupils for a particular industry or for agriculture, etc. A general syllabus is not provided in this type of school. There are 137 higher educational institutes in Romania, including seven universities and five technological universities. In 1977 122,450 students were receiving higher education.

Tourism

The Carpathian mountains, the Danube delta and the Black Sea resorts (Mamaia, Eforie, Mangalia and others) are the principal attractions. International tourism is promoted by the National Travel Office (ONT), and between 1966 and 1970, 3,000 million lei were invested in the tourist industry. Tourism from Western Europe and America has been greatly encouraged, and advantageous exchange rates are offered. About 3,400,000 foreign tourists were estimated to have visited Romania in 1975.

In 1967, as part of the International Tourist Year, Romania abolished visas for all tourists travelling through the National Travel Office. Special exchange rates of 12 lei to $1 and 21 lei to £1 are available for foreign visitors. Since November 1974 visitors have been required to change a minimum of U.S. $10 a day into Romanian currency.

Sport

The main sports are rugby and association football, handball, basketball, tennis, table tennis, swimming, rowing, fishing and hunting. Skiing, ice-hockey and skating are popular in winter.

Public Holidays

1978: May 1st (International Labour Day), May 9th (Independence Day), August 23rd (National Day), December 30th (Republic Day).

1979: January 1st (New Year's Day), January 24th (Union Day).

THE CONSTITUTION

(Adopted in August 1965, amended in March 1974)

Summary

The Socialist Republic of Romania*Article 1.* Romania is a socialist republic.

The Socialist Republic of Romania is a sovereign, independent and unitary state of the working people of the towns and villages. Its territory is inalienable and indivisible.

Article 2. The whole power in the Socialist Republic of Romania belongs to the people, free and masters of their destiny.

People's power is based on the worker-peasant alliance. In close union, the working class—the leading class of society—the peasantry, the intelligentsia and the other categories of working people, regardless of nationality, build the socialist system, creating the conditions for the transition to communism.

Article 3. In the Socialist Republic of Romania, the leading political force of the whole of society is the Romanian Communist Party.

Article 4. As sovereign holder of power, the people exercise this power through the Grand National Assembly and the People's Councils, bodies elected by universal, equal, direct and secret vote.

The Grand National Assembly and the People's Councils are the basis of the whole system of state bodies.

The Grand National Assembly is the supreme body of state power, under whose conduct and control all the other state bodies carry on their activities.

Article 5. The national economy of Romania is a socialist economy, based on the socialist ownership of the means of production.

In the Socialist Republic of Romania, man's exploitation by man has been abolished for ever and the socialist principle of distribution according to the quantity and quality of work is implemented.

Work is a duty of honour for each citizen of the country.

Article 6. Socialist ownership of the means of production is either state property—goods belonging to the whole people, or co-operative property—goods belonging to each co-operative organization.

Article 7. The wealth of the subsoil, whatever its nature, the mines, the state land, the forests, waters, sources of natural power, the factories and mills, the banks, the state farms, the machine-and-tractor stations, the means of communication, the state means of transport and telecommunication, the state buildings and dwellings, the material basis of state socio-cultural institutions belong to the whole people and are state property.

Article 8. Foreign trade is a state monopoly.

Article 9. The land of the agricultural production co-operatives, the animals, implements, installations and buildings belonging to them are co-operative property.

Article 10. The agricultural production co-operatives secure the conditions for the intensive cultivation of the land and contribute to the development of the national economy, to the continuous raising of the living standard of the peasantry and of the whole people.

Article 11. In the conditions of co-operativized agriculture, the state guarantees to the peasants who cannot associate themselves in agricultural production co-operatives, ownership of the land which they themselves and their families are working.

Article 12. Land and buildings can be expropriated only for work of public interest and on payment of an equitable compensation.

Article 13. In the Socialist Republic of Romania the whole state activity has as its purpose the development of the socialist system and the prosperity of the socialist nation, the continuous growth of the people's living standard and cultural level, the ensurance of the freedom and dignity of man, the many-sided affirmation of the human personality.

Article 14. The Socialist Republic of Romania maintains and develops relations of friendship and fraternal co-operation with the socialist countries.

The foreign relations of the Socialist Republic of Romania are based on the principles of the observance of national sovereignty and independence, equal rights and mutual advantage, and non-interference in internal affairs.

Article 15. The territory of the Socialist Republic of Romania is organized in territorial-administrative units, district, town and village.

The capital of the Socialist Republic of Romania is the municipality of Bucharest, which is organized in town-districts.

The most important towns can be organized as municipalities.

Article 16. Romanian citizenship is acquired and lost according to the law.

The Fundamental Rights and Duties of the Citizens

Article 17. The citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania, irrespective of nationality, race, sex or religion, are guaranteed equal rights in all fields of economic, political, juridical, social and cultural life.

Article 18. In the Socialist Republic of Romania, the citizens have the right to work. For equal work there is equal pay.

Article 19. The citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania are guaranteed the right to leisure.

Article 20. The citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania have the right to material security in case of old age, sickness or incapacity to work.

Article 21. The citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania have the right to free education.

Article 22. In the Socialist Republic of Romania the co-inhabiting nationalities are ensured the free utilization of their native language as well as books, papers, magazines, theatres and education at all levels in their own language.

Article 23. In the Socialist Republic of Romania women have equal rights with men.

The state protects marriage and the family and defends the interests of mother and child.

Article 24. The Socialist Republic of Romania ensures to young people the conditions required for the development of their physical and intellectual aptitudes.

Article 25. The citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania have the right to elect and to be elected to the Grand National Assembly and the People's Councils.

The vote is universal, equal, direct and secret. All citizens who have reached the age of 18 years have the right to vote.

Citizens with the right to vote who have reached the age of 23 years can be elected as deputies to the Grand National Assembly and to the People's Councils.

The right to nominate candidates shall be vested in the Socialist Unity Front, which is the framework for uniting public organizations.

The electors have the right to recall their deputy at any time, according to the same procedure under which he has been nominated and elected.

Article 26. The most advanced and conscious citizens from the ranks of the workers, peasants, intellectuals and other categories of working people unite in the Romanian Communist Party, the highest form of organization of the working class.

Article 27. The citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania have the right to associate themselves in trade union, co-operative, youth, women's and socio-cultural organizations, in creative unions, scientific, technical, sports associations and other public organizations.

Article 28. The citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania are guaranteed freedom of speech, of the Press, of reunion, of meeting and demonstration.

Article 29. The freedom of speech, of the Press, reunion, meeting and demonstration cannot be used for aims hostile to the socialist system and to the interests of the working people.

Article 30. Freedom of conscience is guaranteed to all citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania.

Anybody is free to share or not to share a religious belief. The school is separated from the Church. No religious confession, congregation or community can open or maintain any other teaching establishments than special schools for the training of servants of the Church.

Article 31. The citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania are guaranteed inviolability of their person.

No person can be detained or arrested if there are no well-grounded proofs or indications that he has committed a deed listed and punished by the law.

Article 32. The domicile is inviolable.

Article 33. The secrecy of correspondence and of telephone conversations is guaranteed.

Article 34. The right to petition is guaranteed. The state bodies have the obligation to resolve the petitions of the citizens concerning personal or public rights and interests.

Article 35. Those harmed in a right of theirs by an illegal act of a state body can ask the competent bodies, in the conditions provided by the law, to annul the act and redress the damage.

Article 36. The right to personal property is protected by the law.

Objects of the right to personal property can be income and savings derived from work, the dwelling house, the household around it and the land on which they stand, as well as the goods of personal use and comfort.

Article 37. The right to inheritance is protected by the law.

Article 38. The Socialist Republic of Romania grants the right of refuge to foreign citizens pursued for their activity in defence of the interests of the working people, for their participation in the fight for national liberation or in defence of peace.

Article 39. Every citizen of the Socialist Republic of Romania is bound to respect the Constitution and the laws, to defend socialist property, to contribute to the strengthening and development of the socialist system.

Article 40. Military service in the ranks of the Armed Forces of the Socialist Republic of Romania is compulsory and is a duty of honour for the citizens of the Socialist Republic of Romania.

Article 75. The Council of Ministers as a whole and every one of its members is responsible to the Grand National Assembly and in the interval between sessions to the State Council.

Article 76. The ministries and the other central bodies of state administration implement the state policy in the branches or fields of activity for which they have been set up.

Article 77. The ministers and the heads of the other central bodies of state administration issue, on the basis and in view of applying the laws and the decisions of the Council of Ministers, instructions and orders as well as other acts provided for by law.

Article 78. The ministers and the heads of other central bodies of state administration are responsible to the Council of Ministers for the activity of the body which they lead.

The Local Bodies of State Power and the Local Bodies of State Administration

Article 79. The People's Councils are the local bodies of state power in the territorial-administrative districts to which they have been elected.

The People's Councils organize the participation of the citizens in the debate of state and public affairs on a local level.

Article 80. The People's Council exercises the following main attributions:

- (1) it adopts the local budget and economic plan, approves the final account of the budgetary exercise;
- (2) it elects and recalls its Executive Committee;
- (3) it establishes enterprises, economic organizations and state institutions of local interest;
- (4) it conducts, directs and controls the activity of its Executive Committee, of the local specialized bodies of the state administration, of the subordinated economic organizations, enterprises and institutions;
- (5) it controls the decisions of hierarchically inferior People's Councils.
- (6) it elects and recalls, according to the law, the judges, the people's jurors and the Chief Procurator of the district, or of the municipality of Bucharest.

Article 81. The People's Councils are formed of deputies elected by the constituencies, one deputy being elected for each constituency.

The mandate of the People's Council is of five years. The new elections are held on one of the non-working days during the last month of the mandate of the People's Council.

Article 82. The People's Councils elect from among the deputies standing commissions which help them in the fulfilment of their tasks.

Article 83. The People's Councils work in sessions; the convocation of sessions is made by the Executive Committee of the People's Council.

Article 84. The People's Councils work in the presence of at least one half plus one member of the total number of deputies.

Article 85. Each deputy is obliged to periodically present to the electorate reports on his activity and on that of the People's Council to which he has been elected.

Article 86. The People's Councils adopt decisions. A decision is adopted if it receives the vote of the majority of the People's Council deputies.

Article 87. The Executive Committee of the People's Council is the local body of state administration with general competence in the territorial-administrative unit in which the People's Council has been elected.

Article 88. The Executive Committee of the People's Council has the following principal attributions:

- (1) it carries out the laws, decrees and decisions of the Council of Ministers and the other acts of the superior bodies;
- (2) it applies the decisions of the People's Council which has elected it;
- (3) it works out the drafts of the local budget and economic plan;
- (4) it carries out the local budget and economic plan, elaborates the report concerning the implementation of the local economic plan, as well as the final account of the budgetary exercise;
- (5) it conducts, directs and controls the activity of the local specialized sections of state administration;
- (6) it conducts, directs and controls the activity of the subordinate economic organizations, enterprises and institutions.
- (7) it conducts, directs and controls the activity of the Executive Committee of the People's Councils which are hierarchically inferior to the People's Council which has elected it.

Article 89. The Executive Committee is elected by the People's Council from among its deputies at the first session after the elections for the duration of the mandate of the People's Council.

Article 90. The Executive Committee of the People's Council is formed of a Chairman, Vice-Chairmen, of whom one can be first Vice-Chairman, and a number of members established by the law.

Article 91. In the exercise of its attributions, the Executive Committee of the People's Council issues decisions on the basis of and with a view to the implementation of the law.

Article 92. The Executive Committee carries on its activity according to the principle of collective leadership.

The Executive Committee as a whole and each of its members are responsible to the People's Council which has elected them, as well as to the Executive Committee of the hierarchically superior People's Council, and to the Council of Ministers.

Article 93. The People's Councils organize, in accordance with the law, attached to their Executive Committees, local specialized bodies of state administration.

The Courts

Article 94. In the Socialist Republic of Romania the law is administered by the Supreme Court, district courts, county courts as well as military courts established according to the law.

Article 95. By their judiciary activity, the courts defend the socialist system and the rights of persons, educating the citizens in the spirit of respect for the law.

Article 96. The courts try civil, penal and any other cases in their competence.

In the cases provided for by the law, the courts exercise control over the decisions of administrative or public bodies having a jurisdictional activity.

Article 97. The Supreme Court exercises general control over the judicial activity of all the courts. The way of exercising this control is established by law.

Article 98. The Supreme Court is elected by the Grand National Assembly for the duration of the legislature in its first session.

The Supreme Court functions up to the election of the new Supreme Court in the following legislature.

Article 99. The Supreme Court is responsible for its activity to the Grand National Assembly, and between sessions to the State Council.

Article 100. The organization of the courts, their competence and judicial procedure are established by law.

Cases in the first instance at the county courts, the district courts and the military courts are tried with the participation of people's jurors, unless otherwise provided for by law.

Article 101. Judges and people's jurors are elected in accordance with the procedure established by law.

Article 102. In the Socialist Republic of Romania judicial procedure is in the Romanian language and, in the regions and districts inhabited by a population of another nationality than Romanian, the use of the mother tongue of that population is assured.

Article 103. Trials are held in public sessions, unless otherwise provided for by law.

Article 104. In their judicial activity the judges and the people's jurors are independent and only subject to the law.

The Organs of the Procurator's Office

Article 105. The Procurator's Office of the Socialist Republic of Romania exercises the supervision of the activity of the penal prosecution organs, and of the penalty execution organs, and watches over the observance of the

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

SUPREME COURT

Chairman: Dr. JUSTIN GRIGORAȘ.

There is one Supreme Court, whose main functions are: to judge, as an appeal instance, the sentences pronounced by higher tribunals; to judge, as fundamental instance, certain requests; to exercise general control of the judiciary activity carried on by all tribunals. The members of the Supreme Court are professional magistrates elected by the Grand National Assembly during the legislation of the latter.

DISTRICT COURTS

Under the new territorial-administrative divisions of Romania (February 1968) there are 39 district courts and the municipal court of Bucharest (with the status of district court). In all the towns in the country there are country courts subordinate to the district courts, and in Bucharest there are eight sectional courts. The panel of judges consists of professional magistrates and, under certain circumstances, of people's jurors.

MILITARY COURTS

Court Martial does not exist. Military courts judge as fundamental and as appeal instances contraventions of the law by servicemen and, in certain circumstances, by civilians. The panel of judges consists of professional magistrates and, under certain circumstances, of people's jurors.

BODY OF ATTORNEYS

Procurator-General: GHEORGHE BOBOCEA.

The Procurator-General of the Republic and the subordinate attorneys represent the body which surveys the strict observance of the laws of the Republic, in the field of judicial activity as well as in the State administration. The Procurator-General is appointed by the Grand National Assembly and is responsible to it. Between Assembly sessions he is responsible to the State Council.

(For more details on the Judicial system see the Constitution.)

RELIGION

According to Article 30 of the Constitution, religious groups are organized and carry on their activities on an autonomous basis, regulated by law. There are fourteen sects and denominations, 85 per cent of believers belonging to the Romanian Orthodox Church.

ROMANIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH

The Romanian Orthodox Church is the major religious organization in Romania and is organized as an autocephalous patriarchate, being led by the Holy Synod, headed by Patriarch Justin. The Patriarchate consists of 5 metropolitanates, 2 archbishoprics and 6 bishoprics.

THE PRESS

The Romanian press is highly regionalized, with newspapers and periodicals appearing in all of the administrative districts (as listed below). In 1976 there were 484 newspapers and magazines with a total circulation of 1,200 million copies annually. Of this total, 59 are newspapers of general information with a total circulation of 1,000 million copies a year, of which 32 are dailies with a total circulation of 1,041 million a year. Fifty-one newspapers and periodicals are published in the languages of co-inhabiting nationalities in Romania, including Hungarian, German, Serbian, Ukrainian and Armenian.

The press sees itself as a potent instrument for the public debate of political, social, economic and educational problems. The most influential publications are the Party organs, the most important of which is Scinteia.

SPAIN

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Kingdom of Spain, in south-west Europe, forms more than four-fifths of the Iberian peninsula. It is bounded to the north by France and to the west by Portugal. To the east is the Mediterranean and, 30 km. to the south, Africa. The climate is less temperate than in most of western Europe, with hot summers and, in the hilly interior, cold winters. The language is Spanish. Catalan is widely spoken in the north-east, Basque in the north and Galician in the north-west. Roman Catholicism is the established religion. The national flag (proportions 3 by 2) carries three horizontal bands of red, yellow (half the depth) and red. The state flag carries, in addition, the national coat of arms. The capital is Madrid.

Recent History

After winning the civil war of 1936-39 the Nationalist forces, led by Gen. Francisco Franco y Bahamonde, established an authoritarian rule which provided peace and stability while restricting individual liberties and severely repressing challenges to its power. After keeping Spain neutral in the Second World War, Franco announced in 1947 that the monarchy (abolished in 1931) would be restored after his death or retirement.

In 1969 General Franco nominated Prince Juan Carlos de Borbón as his successor, and in June 1973 relinquished the post of Presidente del Gobierno (President of the Council of Ministers) to Admiral Luis Carrero Blanco, who was killed in December 1973. Responsibility for the assassination was claimed by ETA, the Basque separatist organization. Carlos Arias Navarro became Prime Minister in January 1974 and promised reforms which, with increased freedom of the press, an apparent weakening of General Franco's health and position and the effect of the coup d'état in Portugal in April 1974, led to intense left-wing political activity, including the formation of democratic unions. Terrorism increased in the Basque provinces, where ETA supporters clashed with the police and right-wing extremists. The killing of several policemen in 1975 led to summary executions.

General Franco died in November 1975 and was succeeded as Head of State by King Juan Carlos. In December a more liberal cabinet was formed, but left-wing discontent continued when the expected full amnesty for political prisoners was not granted. Early 1976 was marked by mass rallies, calling for amnesty and political freedom, and the formation of various opposition groups. In July bills were passed lifting restrictions on political meetings and allowing political associations (subject to approval by the Government), but dissatisfaction at the slow progress of the reforms resulted in widespread demonstrations and industrial conflict.

In July Prime Minister Arias Navarro resigned at the King's request and was replaced by Adolfo Suárez González. The introduction of democratic government proceeded rapidly. Political reforms, including the establishment of an elected bicameral parliament, were endorsed (in amended form) by the Cortes in November, approved by popular referendum in December and incorporated in the Electoral Law of March 1977. In February the legalization process for political associations was amended and in April the Movimiento Nacional, the only political organization permitted under Franco, was disbanded. These measures enabled most of the numerous de facto political parties to apply for legal recognition and take part in the forthcoming general elections for the Cortes. Despite renewed terrorist activity in January and unrest in the armed forces in April over the legalization of the Communist Party, the elections took place on June 15th. An overall majority was won by the centrist Union of the Democratic Centre coalition party headed by the Prime Minister. The Socialist and regional parties gained many seats, while the right-wing parties were less successful than expected.

The Cortes was inaugurated in July and began work on a new constitution. Municipal elections were promised for early 1978. There has been close co-operation between the Government and Opposition Socialist and Communist parties, as evinced by the Moncloa economic and social pact signed in October. The economic situation continued to deteriorate in 1977, and there was industrial unrest; the right to strike was accorded in March and trade unions, legalized in April, grew in strength. Further liberalizing measures include the relaxation of censorship and the restructuring of the judiciary, military command and police forces.

Demands for regional autonomy increased, notably in the Basque provinces (Euzkadi) and Catalonia, frequently associated with calls for further political amnesty (partial amnesties had been granted in November 1975 and July 1976, and widened in March and October 1977). In September the Catalan Generalitat (government) was restored in provisional form, and a similar statute was negotiated in December with the Basques. The constitution will provide for equivalent arrangements in other regions.

Spain has consolidated its links with the Arab countries and Latin America, and entered into diplomatic relations with the eastern-bloc countries. Application was made in July 1977 for membership of the EEC.

Government

Since 1975 Spain has been an hereditary monarchy, with the King as Head of State. He appoints the President of the Government (Prime Minister) and, on the latter's recommendation, other members of the Council of Ministers. The Council initiates legislation for discussion by the Legislative Assembly (Cortes). The King, who has the power of veto over legislation, is advised by the Council of State (some members of which are elected and others nominated) and by the Council of the Realm (16 members, including 10 elected by the Cortes). Spain comprises 50 provinces, each with its own Assembly (Diputación Provincial) and an appointed Civil Governor.

The Electoral Law of March 1977 replaced the unicameral Cortes with a bi-cameral parliament with a Congress of 350 deputies directly elected every four years by universal adult suffrage, and a Senate with 207 members elected on a regional basis (four members for every peninsular province regardless of population, and 19 in all for the Balearics, Canaries, Ceuta and Melilla) and 41 members appointed by the King, also for a period of four years. The amended system of proportional representation for election to the Congress provides that each province should have a minimum of three deputies regardless of population and three per cent of votes are required before a party can gain representation. Election to the Senate is by majority vote. Both houses elect their own president, but the King appoints Parliament's overall president and the president of the Council of the Realm. The King also has the right to call referenda on important national issues regardless of any parliamentary decisions. The function and relationship of the various organs of government will be established in the forthcoming Spanish Constitution.

In September 1977 the Generalitat of Catalonia was re-established by Royal Decree in the provisional form of a 16-member Consell headed by President Josep Tarradellas.

Defence

Military service is compulsory in Spain and lasts for 18 months. Total strength of the armed forces was 309,000 in 1977: army 220,000, navy 48,000 (including 8,000 marines), and air force 41,000. The para-military Guardia Civil numbers 65,000 men. A new defence agreement, to replace that of 1970, was signed by Spain and the United States in January 1976. It provides for the U.S.A.'s continued use of its four air and naval bases in Spain for a further five years in return for American military and other credits and grants totalling $1,220 million. 1977 defence expenditure amounted to 148,373 million pesetas.

Economic Affairs

After years of stagnation the Spanish economy began to improve dramatically in the early 1960s. National income per capita increased from less than $500 in 1963 to $2,000 in 1974. Spain has traditionally been an agricultural country, its main products being cereals, vegetables and fruits, mainly citrus. However, between 1960 and 1970 the proportion of the working population engaged in agriculture dropped from 41 to 28 per cent and industry's share in the G.N.P. rose from 31 per cent in 1960 to 42 per cent in 1972.

Spain's long-standing trade deficit is usually offset by invisible earnings from tourism, remittances from workers abroad and capital inflows, but all three declined in 1975, although tourism revived in late 1976 and 1977. In the industrial sector the motor, chemical, machine tool and ship-building industries grew rapidly in the 1960s, but in recent years car exports have been disappointingly low and shipbuilding has been severely affected by the world recession. The chemical sector continues to expand due to heavy public and private investment.

The momentum of Spain's prolonged economic boom carried industry through 1974 despite the international economic slump, but by 1975 the growth rate was only 0.8 per cent compared with 4 per cent in 1974 and an annual average of 7 per cent in 1960-73. Unemployment rose, due partly to the return of many emigrant workers, and the balance of payments deficit widened, mainly because of the increased price of imported crude oil and a poorer export performance. Also, investment in industry fell. These trends continued in 1976 and industrial production was severely affected by strikes; several economic packages were introduced in 1976, including a 10.4 per cent devaluation of the peseta, but major changes were postponed until after the 1977 general elections.

In July 1977 the peseta was devalued by 20 per cent. The accompanying economic package included tax reform (luxury, inheritance and wealth taxes were introduced, and tax fraud made a penal offence), credit restrictions, wage and price controls, incentives to companies increasing their labour force and a reduction in the rate of increase in money supply (22 per cent in 1976). The 2-year Moncloa economic pact in October limited wage and price rises for 1978 to 22 per cent, and provided for agrarian reform, incentives to exporters and smaller companies, further tax reforms and the reduction of the State budget. Inflation in late 1977 was 28 per cent, and unemployment generally estimated at 1 million. The current deficit on the balance of payments was almost $5,000 million. Exports, however, had risen by 21 per cent during the year.

Transport and Communications

In 1976 Spain had 15,832 kilometres of railways, of which 4,883 kilometres were electrified. At the end of 1976 Spain had 145,328 kilometres of roads, including 1,091.9 kilometres of motorway. Iberia, the Spanish national airline, maintains external and internal services.

Social Welfare

National Insurance is compulsory for all employed or self-employed Spaniards. The National Insurance Scheme covers temporary incapacity to work, accident insurance, assistance to dependants, permanent incapacity, widows' pensions, old-age pensions, unemployment. Contributions are paid jointly by the employer (42 per cent) and the employee (8 per cent) according to the employee's income. Social security schemes covered 28.37 million people in 1972. The October 1977 Moncloa pact provides for the inclusion of social security in the State budget.

Education

General basic education is compulsory and free from the age of 6 to 14. For those students who do not go on to secondary education first grade vocational training is obligatory from 15 to 16 years of age.

Secondary education lasts three years from 14 to 16 years of age and leads to the Bachiller. University education is preceded by an orientation course and in 1975-76 university entrance examination became obligatory.

There are twenty state universities, three polytechnics in Madrid, Barcelona and Valencia, two independent universities in Bilbao and Pamplona, autonomous universities in Madrid and Barcelona and eight technical universities. The degree course leads to a Licenciatura and lasts five years; the doctorate is usually a two-year course by examination and thesis. Higher Technical Studies in engineering and architecture are followed at Escuelas Técnicas de Grado Medio and Escuelas Técnicas de Grado Superior. In 1976 the budget provided for a 20 per cent expenditure on education. Efforts are being made to reduce adult illiteracy, which averaged 9.9 per cent (males 5.7 per cent, females 13.7 per cent) in 1970. The Moncloa pact provides for the introduction of universal free education.

Tourism

Tourism makes an important contribution to the country's economy. Spanish resorts have become increasingly popular with foreigners, 34.6 million visiting Spain in 1973. However, the international economic recession in 1974 has led to a decrease in the number of tourists, with only 30 million visiting Spain in 1976. The Costa Brava, the Costa del Sol, the Balearic Islands and the Canary Islands, the old towns of Spain (Seville, Córdoba, Granada, Toledo) and the modern cities of Madrid and Barcelona all attract many visitors. Winter sports resorts are being developed in the Pyrenees.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter Spain: Algeria, Argentina, Australia, Austria, the Bahamas, Barbados, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cyprus, Denmark, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Fiji, Finland, France, the Gambia, the Federal Republic of Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, Iceland, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, the Republic of Korea, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Malta, Mauritius, Monaco, Morocco, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, the Philippines, Portugal, San

In August 1977 a Cortes Committee began to draw up a new Spanish Constitution, the eleventh since 1808. It was expected to be completed by early 1978.

At present there is no written Constitution of the Spanish State, whose legal foundation is formed by a number of fundamental laws and charters. These are the Fuero de los Españoles (Spaniards' Charter), the Fuero del Trabajo (Labour Charter), the Ley Constitutiva de las Cortes (Parliament Law), the Ley de Sucesión (Law of Succession), the Ley de Referendum Nacional (National Referendum Law), the Ley de los Principios Fundamentales del Movimiento Nacional and The Organic Law of the Spanish State.

THE SPANIARDS' CHARTER, 1937

As early as 1937, the political parties fighting on the National side were unified by decree into a single movement which adopted the name of Falange Española Tradicionalista y de las Juntas de Ofensiva Nacional-Sindicalista (F.E.T. y de las J.O.N.S.) and set out to provide a social organization for Spain on corporative or "national-sindicalist" lines. The aims of the party were summarized in the Spaniards' Charter, published in 1937.

(1) The Spanish State proclaims as the main principle of its acts respect for the dignity, integrity and liberty of the individual, acknowledging man as the bearer of eternal values and member of a national community, endowed with duties and rights, the exercise of which guarantees the common good.

CHAPTER I

(2) Spaniards owe faithful service to their Motherland, loyalty to the Head of the State and obedience to the laws.

(3) The Law protects equally the rights of all Spaniards without class distinction or discrimination between persons.

(4) Spaniards are entitled to respect concerning their personal or family honour. Whoever insults them, regardless of his social status, will incur liability.

(5) All Spaniards have a right to receive knowledge and education and a duty to acquire them, either at home or in private or public centres, according to their free choice. The State will ensure that no talent is wasted for want of financial means.

(6) The profession and practice of the Catholic religion, which is that of the Spanish State, will enjoy official protection.

The State will assume the protection of religious freedom, which will be guaranteed by effective judicial protection and which, in turn, will safeguard morals and public order.

(7) Service to the Motherland in a military capacity confers an honourable status on Spanish citizens.

All Spaniards must accept military service when called up, according to the law.

(8) By means of laws, and always in a general manner, personal contribution can be asked for, in case of national interest or public necessity.

(9) Every citizen must contribute to the public expenditure according to his means. No one can be compelled to pay taxes which are not established in accordance with the appropriate law voted by the Cortes.

(10) All Spaniards have the right to undertake public functions of political representative character, through the family, the Municipality and the Syndicate, without this preventing their being elected to other legally established representative bodies.

(11) All Spaniards may hold public positions and offices according to their merit and capacity.

(12) Every Spaniard is allowed to express his opinions freely so long as they are not directed against the fundamental principles of the State.

(13) Inside the national territory the State guarantees the liberty and secrecy of correspondence.

(14) Spaniards have the right to set up residence freely inside the national territory. (By virtue of Art. 35 suspended for 2 years, May 1962-May 1964.)

(15) No one may enter the home of a Spaniard or carry out any search in it without his consent, unless empowered with a warrant from the competent Authority, and in the cases and manner established by the laws.

(16) Spaniards may meet and associate freely for lawful purposes and according to the rules established by the laws.

The State may create and maintain organizations which it considers necessary to the fulfilment of its purposes. The established rules, which will take the form of Law, will co-ordinate the operation of this right with the one acknowledged in the preceding paragraph.

(17) Spaniards are entitled to legal security. All the organs of the State will operate according to a pre-established social order of rules which cannot be arbitrarily interpreted or altered.

(18) No Spaniard may be detained except for reasons and in the manner prescribed by the Laws.

After a time-limit of seventy-two hours, any detained person must be set free or handed over to the judicial Authority.

(19) No one may be sentenced otherwise than by virtue of a Law existing prior to the offence and by decision of the competent Tribunal after the hearing and defence of the person concerned.

(20) No Spaniard may be deprived of his nationality except for the crime of treason, defined in the penal laws, for enrolling in the army or for accepting public office in a foreign country in defiance of the express prohibition of the Head of the State.

(21) Spaniards may address individual petitions to the Head of the State, to the Cortes and to the Authorities.

Corporations, civil servants and members of the armed forces and Institutes can only exercise this right in accordance with the regulations governing their callings.

CHAPTER II

(22) The State acknowledges and protects the family as a natural and fundamental institution of society, with rights and duties having precedence and superiority over all positive human laws.

Marriage can be only one and indissoluble.

The State will give special protection to large families.

(23) Fathers are under obligation to feed, bring up and educate their children. The State can suspend or deprive of their paternal authority those who do not exercise it in a worthy manner and transfer the guardianship and upbringing of minors to those who can legally take charge of them.

CHAPTER III

(24) All Spaniards have the right to work and the duty to contribute to some useful social activity.

(25) Work, because of its essentially human nature, cannot be relegated to the material concept of trading, nor be the object of any transaction incompatible with the dignity of the person involved. Work constitutes in itself an honourable attribute and sufficient qualification to claim protection and assistance from the State.

(26) The State acknowledges that any Enterprise is a collective contribution of skill, man-power and capital in its various forms, and declares therefore the right of these elements to share in the benefits.

The State will take care that relations between them are kept under the strictest impartiality in a social order which subordinates financial values to those of human quality, to the interest of the State and to the requirements of the common good.

(27) All workers will be protected by the State in their right to a just and sufficient remuneration, allowing them and their families, at least, a degree of welfare which will enable them to lead a worthy and moral life.

(28) The Spanish State guarantees to the workers the security of aid in case of misfortune and acknowledges their right to assistance in the case of old age, death, sickness, maternity, accident at work, invalidity, unavoidable suspension of work and other risks which come under the heading of social security.

(29) The State will maintain public assistance institutions, and protect and give support to those created by the Church, the Corporations and private persons.

(30) Private property, as a natural means of fulfilling individual, family or social purposes is recognized and protected by the State.

All forms of property are subordinated to the necessities of the State and of the common good.

Riches must not remain inactive, nor be dissipated unworthily, nor be used for illicit purposes.

(31) The State will facilitate for all Spaniards access to the kinds of property most intimately connected with the human person: home, land, working equipment and goods in everyday use.

(32) In no case may the penalty of confiscation of property be imposed.

No one may be expropriated except in case of public necessity or social interest, and provided that the appropriate compensation has been paid in accordance with the provisions of the Laws.

(33) The exercise of the rights acknowledged in this Charter cannot be allowed to threaten the spiritual, national and social unity of Spain.

(34) The Cortes shall vote the necessary laws for the exercise of the rights acknowledged in this Charter.

(35) The operation of the articles 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 18 can be temporarily suspended by the Government, totally or partially, by virtue of a Decree-Law which will determine the limit, extent and duration of the measure.

(36) Any violation against any of the rights proclaimed in this Charter will be examined by the laws, which will determine what action can be taken in their defence before the appropriate judicial organ.

Given in the Pardo on the seventeenth of July, nineteen forty-five, and modified in nineteen sixty-six.

ORGANIC LAW

On November 22nd, 1966, General Franco proposed a New Organic Law of the State, which was approved by the Cortes and by the electorate in a National Referendum on December 14th, 1966. A summary of the provisional Organic Law is given below.

THE HEAD OF THE STATE (Art. 1-12)

The Spanish State is legally a monarchy based on the principles of the National Movement promulgated in the Fundamental Law of 1958.

The Head of State confers appointments, public offices and honours, and will appoint the President of the Government, the President of the Cortes and other High Offices; he may preside over the Council of Ministers and National Defence Junta but may not vote. The Cortes must authorize International Treaties or Agreements, declarations of War and Peace, and the Nomination of a Successor. During the absence of the Head of State, the Heir to the Crown (if over 30) or the Council of Regency will assume his functions. The guardian of royal minors will be approved by the Cortes and may not be the President of the Government or the President of the Cortes; he must be Spanish and by religion a Catholic.

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE NATION (Art. 13-20)

The Head of State controls the government by means of the Council of Ministers. The Head of State is to share executive powers with the President, who is to be chosen by the Head of State from a list of three names submitted by the Council of the Realm. The President's term of office will be five years, although he may be removed earlier by the Head of State or the Council of the Realm. A new President must be elected within a period of ten days. The other members of the government will be appointed by the Head of State on the recommendation of the President.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL (Art. 21-28)

The President of the Government in his capacity as National Leader of the Movement is President of the National Council, assisted by the permanent Secretary-General. The Council consists of 70 other members and one elected councillor from each province. The Council promotes mainly the Principles of the Movement and other Fundamental Laws of the Kingdom.

THE JUDICIARY (Art. 29-36)

The President of the Supreme Court supervises the Judiciary which includes military, ecclesiastical and civil courts. Legal aid is granted. The Attorney-General liaises between the Government and the Courts of Justice. The President of the Supreme Court is elected for six years (Art. 58).

THE ARMED FORCES (Art. 37-39)

The National Defence Board, consisting of the Heads of the Armed Forces, relevant ministries and the President of the Government, will be responsible for security and national defence. A Supreme General Staff will co-ordinate the activities of the three General Staffs.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE STATE (Art. 40-44)

The Council of State is the highest consultative body in matters of government and administration, and takes precedence, after the Council of Ministers, over all other bodies.

It consists of a President, a Secretary-General, an undefined number of permanent Councillors appointed by the Head of State and the following eight ex-officio Councillors: the Primate of Spain, the Vice-Secretary-General of the Falange, the Combined Chiefs of Staffs, the Solicitor-General, the Director-General of Litigation, the Rector of the University of Madrid, the Director of the Institute of Political Studies and a National Delegate of the Syndicates. The President of the Council of State is elected for six years (Art. 58).

The Council of the Realm assists the Head of State in those tasks of government that are exclusively his. He takes the advice of the Council when a law approved by the Cortes has to be reconsidered by them, with regard to declarations of peace or war and on the question of the nomination of a successor.

The Council is presided over by the President of the Cortes, and consists also of the senior dignitary of the Church with a seat in the Cortes, the senior Captain General on active service, the senior Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces, the Presidents of the Council of State, the Supreme Court of Justice and the Institute of Spain; two Councillors elected by each of the following groups in the Cortes: the Syndicates, Local Government, National Councillors, representatives of the Family; one Councillor from the University Rectors and the Professional Colleges and three Councillors appointed by the Head of State.

The Regency Council would consist of the President of the Cortes (who would preside), the senior dignitary of the Church and the senior Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces.

The Cortes españolas (Parliament) were established in their present form by the Law of July 17th and the Decrees of October 15th, 1942. The chief mission of the Cortes is the preparation and elaboration of the laws without prejudice to the powers exercised by the Chief of State. The 570 members of the Cortes are called "procuradores", and are partly ex-officio members and partly so by appointment, together with some elected members. Under the new Organic Law of the State of November 24th, 1966, 104 members will be elected by heads of families and their wives.

Members must be Spanish, have attained their majority, be in full use of all civil rights with no political disability. Nominations by the Head of the State can be revoked; the remainder hold office for four years and may be re-elected. The President, two Vice-Presidents, and four Secretaries are elected by the Plenum of the Cortes. The Committees are appointed by the President of the Cortes with the approval of the Government. The President is elected for six years, the other above-named officials are elected for each term of the legislature.

Laws falling under the usual headings, and any others, as also motions and agreements not having the force of law, are submitted to a full session of the Cortes. Committees deliberate on anything not included in the foregoing, draft laws, and submit proposals. In war or emergencies the Government may act through decree-laws to be ratified by the Cortes later. The ratification of international treaties or agreements that affect the full sovereignty or the territorial integrity of Spain, will be the subject of a Law passed by the plenary session of the Cortes. The full Cortes or the Committees consider the ratification of treaties on matters within their competence. There is no provision for introducing new laws through individual members, and no law is promulgated without the approval of the Head of the State, to whom the President of the Cortes submits the draft laws approved by the Cortes.

The National Economic Council is the consultative, advisory and technical body dealing with matters affecting the national economy. The President of the National Economic Council is elected for six years (Art. 58).

The Court of Exchequer of the Kingdom deals with acts and laws of a fiscal nature, and audits the accounts of official organisms receiving aid from the State. The President of the Court of Exchequer of the Kingdom is elected for six years (Art. 58).

LOCAL ADMINISTRATION (Art. 45-48)

The Municipalities and Provinces are empowered to carry out their respective aims under the conditions stated in the law. Municipal and provincial corporations will be elected by articulate suffrage. State aid will be provided to encourage the development of municipal and provincial life.

RELATIONS BETWEEN SUPREME BODIES OF STATE (Art. 49-58)

The Cortes will be immediately informed of the appointment of a new government and settle questions of the Succession. The President of the Government and the Ministers will inform the Cortes of measures taken by them. The Government will submit the accounts of the State for approval by the Cortes, and the Court of Exchequer of the Kingdom will keep both organisms informed. The Head of State alone can seek the opinion of the Council of the Realm, and settle disputes within the judiciary.

THE APPEAL OF "CONTRAFUERO" (Art. 59-66)

A "Contrafuero" is any legislative act or general disposition of the Government which contravenes the principles of the National Movement or the other Fundamental Laws of the Realm. Appeal, which must be lodged within two months, may be lodged by the National Council and the Cortes to the Head of State. The resolution which annuls the "Contrafuero" will immediately be published in the Boletín Oficial del Estado. A special law will establish the conditions, the form and the terms in which the procedure arising from the appeal of "Contrafuero" must be promoted and carried out.

THE LAW OF SUCCESSION

In a broadcast to the nation on March 31st, 1947, General Franco outlined the Law of Succession that was later submitted and approved by the Cortes (on June 7th) and by the electorate in a National Referendum (on July 6th, 1947). This law was amended in The Organic Law of the State of November 24th, 1966.

This law states that Spain, as a political union, forms a Catholic and Social State, and is by tradition a monarchy.

A Regency Council will assume power on the vacancy of the Head of the State, its rulings needing a majority vote of two-thirds to be valid.

The Head of State may at any time nominate to the Cortes his successor, who will bear the title of King or Regent. (The Head of the State may revoke a nomination previously put forward by himself and approved by the Cortes.) If the death or declared incapacity of the Head of the State occurs before his successor has been nominated, the Regency Council shall convoke the Government and the Council of the Realm within three days, and they shall agree by at least a two-thirds majority on the nomination of the successor who must be a person of royal lineage. If no man is acceptable a Regent shall be agreed and appointed for a length of time specified by the Cortes.

In order to be the Head of the State, King, or Regent, the nominee must be a Spaniard, a man over thirty, a Catholic, and swear to obey the fundamental laws of the nation which are the "Spaniards' Charter", the Labour Charter, the Constitutional Law of the Cortes, the Law of Referendum, and the present Law of Succession. He must also be loyal to the principles of the Movimiento Nacional. (Modifications of this law require a national referendum as well as the agreement of the Cortes.) The monarchy having been re-established, the order of succession shall be by primogeniture.

Should the incapacity of the Head of the State be recognized by a majority of not less than two-thirds of the Government it is to be communicated to the Council of the Realm, who are to act in accordance with this Law of Succession.

In July 1969, Gen. Francisco Franco Bahamonde nominated Prince Juan Carlos de Borbón to succeed him as Head of State on his death or retirement.

THE TRADE UNIONS

As participants in work and production, all Spaniards constitute the Trade Union Organization which is divided into syndicates. Within the legal form there will be autonomous associations of employers, technical experts, workers and members of legislative councils. The Unions represent the interests of the national community, and will collaborate in the study of production problems and may propose solutions and take part in the drafting of regulations, and the supervision and fulfilment of working conditions. They may create and maintain organizations for research, moral, cultural and occupational training, health insurance and other items of a social nature that may be of interest to those who participate in production.

its various forms, and declares therefore the right of these elements to share in the benefits.

The State will take care that relations between them are kept under the strictest impartiality in a social order which subordinates financial values to those of human quality, to the interest of the State and to the requirements of the common good.

(27) All workers will be protected by the State in their right to a just and sufficient remuneration, allowing them and their families, at least, a degree of welfare which will enable them to lead a worthy and moral life.

(28) The Spanish State guarantees to the workers the security of aid in case of misfortune and acknowledges their right to assistance in the case of old age, death, sickness, maternity, accident at work, invalidity, unavoidable suspension of work and other risks which come under the heading of social security.

(29) The State will maintain public assistance institutions, and protect and give support to those created by the Church, the Corporations and private persons.

(30) Private property, as a natural means of fulfilling individual, family or social purposes is recognized and protected by the State.

All forms of property are subordinated to the necessities of the State and of the common good.

Riches must not remain inactive, nor be dissipated unworthily, nor be used for illicit purposes.

(31) The State will facilitate for all Spaniards access to the kinds of property most intimately connected with the human person: home, land, working equipment and goods in everyday use.

(32) In no case may the penalty of confiscation of property be imposed.

No one may be expropriated except in case of public necessity or social interest, and provided that the appropriate compensation has been paid in accordance with the provisions of the Laws.

(33) The exercise of the rights acknowledged in this Charter cannot be allowed to threaten the spiritual, national and social unity of Spain.

(34) The Cortes shall vote the necessary laws for the exercise of the rights acknowledged in this Charter.

(35) The operation of the articles 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 18 can be temporarily suspended by the Government, totally or partially, by virtue of a Decree-Law which will determine the limit, extent and duration of the measure.

(36) Any violation against any of the rights proclaimed in this Charter will be examined by the laws, which will determine what action can be taken in their defence before the appropriate judicial organ.

Given in the Pardo on the seventeenth of July, nineteen forty-five, and modified in nineteen sixty-six.

ORGANIC LAW

On November 22nd, 1966, General Franco proposed a New Organic Law of the State, which was approved by the Cortes and by the electorate in a National Referendum on December 14th, 1966. A summary of the provisional Organic Law is given below.

THE HEAD OF THE STATE (Art. 1-12)

The Spanish State is legally a monarchy based on the principles of the National Movement promulgated in the Fundamental Law of 1958.

The Head of State confers appointments, public offices and honours, and will appoint the President of the Government, the President of the Cortes and other High Offices; he may preside over the Council of Ministers and National Defence Junta but may not vote. The Cortes must authorize International Treaties or Agreements, declarations of War and Peace, and the Nomination of a Successor. During the absence of the Head of State, the Heir to the Crown (if over 30) or the Council of Regency will assume his functions. The guardian of royal minors will be approved by the Cortes and may not be the President of the Government or the President of the Cortes; he must be Spanish and by religion a Catholic.

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE NATION (Art. 13-20)

The Head of State controls the government by means of the Council of Ministers. The Head of State is to share executive powers with the President, who is to be chosen by the Head of State from a list of three names submitted by the Council of the Realm. The President's term of office will be five years, although he may be removed earlier by the Head of State or the Council of the Realm. A new President must be elected within a period of ten days. The other members of the government will be appointed by the Head of State on the recommendation of the President.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL (Art. 21-28)

The President of the Government in his capacity as National Leader of the Movement is President of the National Council, assisted by the permanent Secretary-General. The Council consists of 70 other members and one elected councillor from each province. The Council promotes mainly the Principles of the Movement and other Fundamental Laws of the Kingdom.

THE JUDICIARY (Art. 29-36)

The President of the Supreme Court supervises the Judiciary which includes military, ecclesiastical and civil courts. Legal aid is granted. The Attorney-General liaises between the Government and the Courts of Justice. The President of the Supreme Court is elected for six years (Art. 58).

THE ARMED FORCES (Art. 37-39)

The National Defence Board, consisting of the Heads of the Armed Forces, relevant ministries and the President of the Government, will be responsible for security and national defence. A Supreme General Staff will co-ordinate the activities of the three General Staffs.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE STATE (Art. 40-44)

The Council of State is the highest consultative body in matters of government and administration, and takes precedence, after the Council of Ministers, over all other bodies.

It consists of a President, a Secretary-General, an undefined number of permanent Councillors appointed by the Head of State and the following eight ex-officio Councillors: the Primate of Spain, the Vice-Secretary-General of the Falange, the Combined Chiefs of Staffs, the Solicitor-General, the Director-General of Litigation, the Rector of the University of Madrid, the Director of the Institute of Political Studies and a National Delegate of the Syndicates. The President of the Council of State is elected for six years (Art. 58).

The Council of the Realm assists the Head of State in those tasks of government that are exclusively his. He takes the advice of the Council when a law approved by the Cortes has to be reconsidered by them, with regard to declarations of peace or war and on the question of the nomination of a successor.

The Council is presided over by the President of the Cortes, and consists also of the senior dignitary of the Church with a seat in the Cortes, the senior Captain General on active service, the senior Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces, the Presidents of the Council of State, the Supreme Court of Justice and the Institute of Spain; two Councillors elected by each of the following groups in the Cortes: the Syndicates, Local Government, National Councillors, representatives of the Family; one Councillor from the University Rectors and the Professional Colleges and three Councillors appointed by the Head of State.

The Regency Council would consist of the President of the Cortes (who would preside), the senior dignitary of the Church and the senior Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces.

The Cortes españolas (Parliament) were established in their present form by the Law of July 17th and the Decrees of October 15th, 1942. The chief mission of the Cortes is the preparation and elaboration of the laws without prejudice to the powers exercised by the Chief of State. The 570 members of the Cortes are called "procuradores", and are partly ex-officio members and partly so by appointment, together with some elected members. Under the new Organic Law of the State of November 24th, 1966, 104 members will be elected by heads of families and their wives.

Members must be Spanish, have attained their majority, be in full use of all civil rights with no political disability. Nominations by the Head of the State can be revoked; the remainder hold office for four years and may be re-elected. The President, two Vice-Presidents, and four Secretaries are elected by the Plenum of the Cortes. The Committees are appointed by the President of the Cortes with the approval of the Government. The President is elected for six years, the other above-named officials are elected for each term of the legislature.

Laws falling under the usual headings, and any others, as also motions and agreements not having the force of law, are submitted to a full session of the Cortes. Committees deliberate on anything not included in the foregoing, draft laws, and submit proposals. In war or emergencies the Government may act through decree-laws to be ratified by the Cortes later. The ratification of international treaties or agreements that affect the full sovereignty or the territorial integrity of Spain, will be the subject of a Law passed by the plenary session of the Cortes. The full Cortes or the Committees consider the ratification of treaties on matters within their competence. There is no provision for introducing new laws through individual members, and no law is promulgated without the approval of the Head of the State, to whom the President of the Cortes submits the draft laws approved by the Cortes.

The National Economic Council is the consultative, advisory and technical body dealing with matters affecting the national economy. The President of the National Economic Council is elected for six years (Art. 58).

The Court of Exchequer of the Kingdom deals with acts and laws of a fiscal nature, and audits the accounts of official organisms receiving aid from the State. The President of the Court of Exchequer of the Kingdom is elected for six years (Art. 58).

LOCAL ADMINISTRATION (Art. 45-48)

The Municipalities and Provinces are empowered to carry out their respective aims under the conditions stated in the law. Municipal and provincial corporations will be elected by articulate suffrage. State aid will be provided to encourage the development of municipal and provincial life.

RELATIONS BETWEEN SUPREME BODIES OF STATE (Art. 49-58)

The Cortes will be immediately informed of the appointment of a new government and settle questions of the Succession. The President of the Government and the Ministers will inform the Cortes of measures taken by them. The Government will submit the accounts of the State for approval by the Cortes, and the Court of Exchequer of the Kingdom will keep both organisms informed. The Head of State alone can seek the opinion of the Council of the Realm, and settle disputes within the judiciary.

THE APPEAL OF "CONTRAFUERO" (Art. 59-66)

A "Contrafuero" is any legislative act or general disposition of the Government which contravenes the principles of the National Movement or the other Fundamental Laws of the Realm. Appeal, which must be lodged within two months, may be lodged by the National Council and the Cortes to the Head of State. The resolution which annuls the "Contrafuero" will immediately be published in the Boletín Oficial del Estado. A special law will establish the conditions, the form and the terms in which the procedure arising from the appeal of "Contrafuero" must be promoted and carried out.

POLITICAL PARTIES

Until 1974 there was only one legally constituted political organization, the Movimiento Nacional (National Movement), based on the Falange Española Tradicionalista y de las Juntas de Ofensiva Nacional-Sindicalistas.

A law providing for the recognition of political associations came into force in January 1975, which specified that a political association would be recognized only if it had over 25,000 members representing over 15 provinces.

In June 1976 the Cortes approved a bill on political associations which meant that all associations permitted under the 1974 legislation (see above) could operate immediately under the new law. Spaniards over the age of 18 could form associations and the Ministry of the Interior would register or reject the formation of an association within two months of application. Associations would in future be responsible to ordinary tribunals under the auspices of the Supreme Court. They would be forbidden to receive funds from abroad. The Penal Code was approved in July 1976 and it specifically prohibited those parties which "obeyed orders from abroad" and were "aimed at establishing a totalitarian regime".

In February 1977 Decree-Law 12/77 specified that a political association should receive recognition within ten days of submitting its statutes to the Ministry of the Interior, or that the application should be referred to the Supreme Court for a ruling within thirty days. The National Movement was dissolved by decree in April. About 160 parties participated in the general elections of June 15th. The following are among the more important parties:

NATIONAL

Alianza Popular (AP): f. 1976; right-wing; Leader MANUEL FRAGA IRIBARNE.

Federación Democrática Cristiana (FDC): f. 1977 from Federación Democrática Popular and Izquierda Democrática; centre left; Leaders JOSÉ MARÍA GIL ROBLES, JOAQUÍN RUÍZ GIMÉNEZ.

Federación de Partidos Socialistas (FPS): f. 1976; grouping of regional socialist parties, member of Unidad Socialista electoral coalition.

Partido Comunista de España (PCE): f. 1922; "Euro-communist"; Pres. DOLORES IBARRURI; Sec.-Gen. SANTIAGO CARRILLO SOLARES.

Partido Socialista Popular (PSP): Social Democratic party, member of Unidad Socialista electoral coalition; Pres. Prof. ENRIQUE TIerno GALVÁN.

Unión Centro Democrático (UCD): f. 1977; centrist; based on 12-party electoral coalition; Leader ADOLFO SUÁREZ GONZÁLEZ.

Other parties include the Partido de Trabajadores Españoles (PTE), Organización Revolucionaria de Trabajadores (ORT), Partido Carlista, and the Partido Socialista Obrero Español (histórico).

REGIONAL

Coalición Electoral Unió del Centre i la Democràcia Cristiana de Catalunya (UC-DCC): Catalan Christian Democrat party; Leader ANTÓN CANYELLAS BALCELLS.

Esquerra de Catalunya (EC): Catalan autonomist.

Partido Nacionalista Vasco (PNV): Basque nationalist party; Leader JUAN AJURIAGUERRA OCHANDIANO.

Partit Socialista Unificat de Catalunya (PSUC): Communist; Sec.-Gen. ANTONI GUTIÉRREZ DÍAZ.

Socialistes de Catalunya (PSC-PSOE): Socialist; Leader JOAN REVENTÓS CARNER.

There are Socialist, Communist, Christian Democrat and autonomist parties in the majority of Spanish regions.

Illegal terrorist organizations include the right-wing Guerrilleros del Cristo Rey and AAA (Apostolic Anti-Communist Alliance), the avowedly left-wing GRAPO (First of October Anti-Fascist Resistance Groups) and the Basque separatist Euzkadi ta Azkatasuna (ETA).

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Tribunal Supremo (Supreme Court of Justice): Palacio de Justicia, Plaza de la Ville de Paris 1, Madrid; is composed of six tribunals, each with its president and its respective judges; Pres. ANGEL ESCUDERO DEL CORRAL; Attorney-Gen. ANTONIO JOSÉ GARCÍA RODRIGUEZ-ACOSTA; Sec. ISIDRO ALMONACID HERNÁNDEZ.

First Court (Civil): President and twelve judges; Pres. JULIO CALVILLO MARTÍNEZ.

Second Court (Criminal): Ten judges; Pres. ADOLFO DE MIGUEL Y GARCILÓPEZ.

Third Court (Litigation): Ten judges; Pres. FRANCISCO PERA VERDAGUER.

Fourth Court (Litigation): Ten judges; Pres. MANUEL CERVÍA CABRERA.

Fifth Court (Legal Administration): Ten judges; Pres. JUAN VICTORIANO BARQUERO.

Sixth Court (Social and Labour Questions): Ten judges; Pres. JUAN BECERRIL Y ANTON-MIRALLES.

Audiencia Nacional (National High Court): Established in 1977 to supplement the functions of the Tribunal Supremo and Audiencias Territoriales; consists of a Tribunal for Criminal Matters, and one for Legal Administration, each with its president and respective judges; deals primarily with crimes associated with a modern industrial society; three Central Courts of Proceedings are attached; Pres. RAFAEL MENDIZABAL ALLENDE.

Audiencia Territorial (Territorial High Courts): There are fifteen Territorial Courts in the capitals of the fifteen districts into which the country is divided for the administration of justice. These courts are located in Madrid, Albacete, Barcelona, Burgos, Cáceres, Coruña, Granada, Oviedo, Palma de Mallorca, Las Palmas, Pamplona, Sevilla, Valencia, Valladolid, Zaragoza. They deal with civil and criminal cases and litigation. Pres. of the Audiencia Territorial of Madrid, ACISCLO FERNÁNDEZ CARRIEDO.

Audiencia Provincial (Provincial High Courts): There are fifty provincial courts, fifteen of which constitute "Salas" (Tribunals) of the corresponding "Audiencias Territoriales" and the remaining thirty-five are located in the capitals of provinces in which there is no "Audiencia Territorial", the area of their jurisdiction corresponding to that of the provincial boundary. They deal mainly with criminal cases but since September 1968 they have also dealt with some civil cases. The provincial courts that do not form a chamber of the territorial courts are located in Madrid, Albacete, Alicante, Almería, Avila, Badajoz, Barcelona, Bilbao, Burgos, Cáceres, Cádiz, Castellón, Ciudad Real, Córdoba, Coruña, Cuenca, Gerona, Granada, Guadalajara, Huelva, Huesca, Jaén, Las Palmas, León, Llérida, Logroño, Lugo, Málaga, Murcia, Orense, Oviedo, Palencia, Palma, Pamplona, Pontevedra, Salamanca, San Sebastián, Santa Cruz de Tenerife, Santander, Segovia, Sevilla, Soria, Tarragona, Teruel, Toledo, Valencia, Valladolid, Vitoria, Zamora, Zaragoza.

Juzgados de Primera Instancia e Instrucción (Courts of Primary Jurisdiction and Proceedings): Policy is now to separate the civil and criminal jurisdiction of these courts. In Madrid there are 17 Courts of Primary Jurisdiction and 22 Courts of Proceedings and in Barcelona there are 9 and 14 respectively.

Juzgados Municipales (Municipal Courts): administer justice in localities with a population of up to 30,000 inhabitants. They have civil and criminal jurisdiction. There are thirty-three of these courts in Madrid and twenty-four in Barcelona.

Juzgados Comarcales y de Paz (Regional Courts and Justices): administer justice in less important cases in districts where the courts mentioned above do not function. Justices are freely appointed and do not belong to the legal profession.

Consejo Superior de Protección de Menores (Higher Council for the Protection of Juveniles): A Commission of the Council forms a Court of Appeal against the judgment of the Provincial Juvenile Courts. The Commission is composed of a president, a vice-president, two permanent members, two substitutes, and a secretary, all of whom must be trained in the law; Pres. LUIS VALLE ABAD.

Judicial System, Religion

Juzgados de Peligrosidad y Rehabilitación Social (Social Danger and Rehabilitation Courts): These courts have been established in Madrid, Barcelona, Burgos, Málaga, Palma de Mallorca, Valencia, Sevilla, Valladolid and Algeciras.

RELIGION

The population of Spain is overwhelmingly Roman Catholic, and there are some 61,000 churches, with about 500 persons in each parish. In 1976 there were 34,415,600 Roman Catholics in Spain.

Opus Dei (see International Organizations) plays an important role in Spanish society.

In 1967 there were 306 Protestant churches with a practising congregation of 30,000.

THE PRESS

A Press Law was passed in 1966 which put an end to censorship, gave far greater freedom of discussion to editors, and reduced the penalties for offences against morality and the principles of the Movimiento to six months' imprisonment. But in April 1967 the Cortes increased the penalties to six years' imprisonment for exceeding the 1966 definition of press freedom, and to twelve years' for publishing insults to the nation or propaganda against the Fundamental Laws. Restrictions were further increased by the Official Secrets Act of April 1968. Suspension of publication, which like a fine could become effective before consideration in a court, was also provided for as a penalty for infringements of the press laws. In April 1977 the provision in the 1966 Press Law regarding criticism of the Movimiento and the Fundamental Laws was revoked, but criticism of the monarchy and armed forces and regional separatist propaganda remain prohibited.

The Government closely supervises the selection and training of journalists, who must be graduates of a Facultad de Ciencias de la Información (Information Sciences Faculty). There are three such faculties in Madrid, Barcelona and Pamplona. The Government also controls Agencia EFE, the national news agency which monopolizes the distribution of foreign news; through the Press Syndicate the Government also had influence over the distribution of newsprint.

Spain has no national newspapers but provincial towns are well served by local papers. This press regionalism is explained in part by communication problems—Madrid newspapers may take up to a day to reach provincial centres—and in part by regional loyalties.

Most towns have a single Monday paper (Hoja del Lunes), and in a town with more than one daily the publishers combine to produce this edition. There are some 2,884 weekly papers and periodicals, of which about 300 are general interest magazines.

The space devoted to news reports in the newspaper press is relatively small—usually less than half that given to cultural features and entertainments. Most papers are tabloid in format. The majority of daily and weekly papers belong to political, religious, or commercial organizations and associations. One-third of them are published by organs of the former Movimiento. The major ownership groups are as follows:

Organismo Autónomo Medios de Comunicación Social del Estado—MCSE: On the abolition of the Movimiento in April 1977 the thirty-five newspapers owned by the Prensa del Movimiento came under the jurisdiction of the State.

Editorial Católica: closely connected with Acción Católica, a non-political movement supported by businessmen and active in social welfare, this group controls five of the better dailies, headed by Ya in Madrid; it also owns the Logos news agency.

Prensa Española: publishes the daily ABC in Madrid and Seville, and the weekly Blanco y Negro.

Members of Opus Dei, the Catholic group, run a daily in Madrid, Nuevo Diario (morning), and also run the only independent school of journalism at Navarra.

The chief morning papers are ABC, Ya and Marca in Madrid, and in Barcelona Vanguardia, Diario de Barcelona and Correo Catalán. The circulations of ABC, Ya, Pueblo and Vanguardia exceed 220,000 each. There is a growing number of newspapers published in Catalan (such as Avui) and Basque (for example Deia).

Among the more serious weeklies are Ecclesia, the official publication of the Catholic hierarchy, and Destino, an influential progressive paper. Blanco y Negro, Semana, Mundo, Actualidad Española, Gaceta Ilustrada and Triunfo typify the popular class of illustrated family periodicals. A new magazine Cambio 16 is steadily growing in importance. On Sundays the dailies produce special editions; that of ABC is a prominent example.

RADIO AND TELEVISION

It was announced in October 1977 that, pending the establishment of a television statute, RTVE (formerly controlled by the Ministry of Information) should be administered by a committee composed equally of members of the Government and Opposition parties.

In addition, stations would no longer be obliged to relay the nation-wide news service ("Diarios Hablados") of Radio Nacional de España. The rest of the programmes of the commercial stations are independent. Advertising is permitted, but is restricted to 10 per cent of the programme period.

RTVE—Radiotelevisión Española: Prado del Rey, Madrid 11; Dir.-Gen. RAFAEL ANSON OLIART; controls and coordinates radio and television.

RADIO

Radio Nacional Española: Prado del Rey, Madrid 11; Dir. FRANCISCO RUIZ DE ELVIRA.

Radio Nacional Española has Home and Foreign Services. The Home Service comprises the National Programme, the Second Programme (music) and the Third Programme (culture). The Foreign Service comprises a service in Spanish broadcast to Europe, Australia and the Philippines, North and South America and the Atlantic, and the International Service which broadcasts in English, French and Portuguese to Europe and in Arabic and Spanish to the Arab States.

TRADE UNIONS

In April 1977 Law 19/77, amplified by Royal Decree 873/77, established the right of workers to form professional associations to safeguard their interests. Legalization is accorded twenty days after the lodging of statutes at the Public Office, provided no Supreme Court ruling to the contrary has occurred in the interim.

Royal Decree-Law 31/77 of June 1977 provided for the adaptation or cessation of the former syndicates in which both employers and workers were represented.

The following represent some of the more important trade unions, many of which have long been established as de facto organizations:

Confederación Sindical de Comisiones Obreras—CC.OO (Workers' Commissions): Atocha 90-1°, Madrid 1; f. 1956; linked with the PCE; 1,605,000 mems.; Sec.-Gen. MARCELINO CAMACHO ABAD.

RAILWAYS

R.E.N.F.E. (Red Nacional de los Ferrocarriles Españoles) (National System of Spanish Railways): Plaza de los Sagrados Corazones 7, Madrid 16; Pres. PLÁCIDO ALVAREZ FIDALGO; Vice-Pres. ALFREDO MORENO URIBE; Dir.-Gen. ANTONIO CARBONELL ROMERO; 13,509 km. (1976) of wide-gauge track, of which 4,328 km. are electrified; the 1974-77 Electrification Plan provides for the electrification of c. 2,172 km. of track; passengers carried (1976): 206 million; goods loaded (1976): 36.031 million metric tons.

Plans are in hand for the construction of a standard-gauge railway line linking Madrid with Barcelona and the French frontier. The estimated cost of the project (which should be completed by 1980) is 40,000 million pesetas. At present, a variable-axle train that can adjust from the broader Spanish gauge to the narrower European one enables passengers to travel direct to Paris and Geneva.

There are also 2,323 km. (1976) of narrow-gauge railway, of which 555 km. are electrified.

Ferrocarriles de Vía Estrecha (F.E.V.E.): General Rodrigo 16, 2°, Madrid 3; f. 1965; Pres. (vacant); 1,677 km. (1976) of narrow-gauge track.

The organization controls 14 lines.

There are 646 km. (1976) of narrow-gauge railway under private control.

ROADS

Total road length at December 31st, 1976, was 145,328 km., including 1,091.9 km. of motorway.

Motorways under construction include the Autopista del Mediterráneo, running from the French border to Alicante, the first stage of which was completed in 1976, the Bilbao-Behovia motorway and the Seville-Cádiz motorway. Five new motorways are to be constructed between 1976 and 1980.

SWEDEN

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Sweden lies in north-west Europe, occupying half the Scandinavian peninsula. It is bordered by Finland to the north-east and Norway to the north-west and west. The Baltic Sea and the Gulf of Bothnia are to the east, the Skagerrak and Kattegat to the south-west. Winters are cold and summers mild. Average summer temperature in Stockholm is 17°C (62°F) and winter temperature -3°C (27°F). The language is Swedish, but there are Finnish and Lapp minorities in the north retaining their own language. The predominant faith is Lutheran Protestantism. The national flag (proportions 8 by 5) is light blue with a yellow cross, the upright of the cross being to the left of centre. The capital is Stockholm.

Recent History

Sweden remained neutral throughout both World Wars and, despite playing an active part in promoting international co-operation, still refuses to join organizations such as the EEC which might compromise Swedish neutrality. In 1946 Sweden joined the United Nations, to which it has since given considerable financial and military support. Sweden was also a founder member of the Council of Europe in 1949 and of the Nordic Council in 1952. The death in September 1973 of King Gustaf VI Adolf, who had reigned since 1950, and the accession of Carl XVI Gustaf permitted a new constitution to come into force in January 1975, reducing the monarch's role to that of a ceremonial head of state.

From 1932 until 1976, except for a short break in 1936, Sweden was governed by the Social Democratic Party, either alone or as senior coalition partner, and a highly advanced social welfare system was developed. However, correspondingly high taxes caused growing dissatisfaction. The September 1973 general election produced an evenly balanced Parliament, with the socialist and non-socialist blocs each holding 175 of the 350 seats. A minority Social Democrat Government led by Olof Palme, Prime Minister since October 1969, survived the full three-year term with difficulty. In the September 1976 election, for which the number of seats was reduced to 349, the Government was defeated, and in October a coalition of the Centre, Liberal and Conservative Parties was formed, with the Centre Party leader, Thorbjörn Fälldin, as Prime Minister. There has been no significant change of direction under the Centre-Right coalition. Faced with Sweden's mounting economic problems, the Government has been obliged to pursue the Social Democratic employment policy by using the previous Government's job security legislation and prolonging state support and subsidies for employee training. Despite its non-socialist composition, the Government has also proposed the setting-up of a state-owned shipbuilding concern and a semi-state-owned steel company, and the extension of economic intervention to the special steel industry.

Government

The Kingdom of Sweden is a constitutional monarchy. The hereditary King is Head of State but has very limited formal prerogatives. Executive power rests with the Cabinet (Regeringen) which is responsible to Parliament (Riksdag). The unicameral Riksdag was introduced in January 1971. It has 349 members elected by universal adult suffrage for three years, using proportional representation. The Prime Minister is nominated by the Speaker of the Riksdag and later confirmed in office by the whole House. The country is divided into 24 counties.

Defence

Sweden maintains total armed forces of 68,550, including 49,300 conscripts, and has a total mobilization strength of 750,000. The army consists of 46,000 men, of whom 36,500 are conscripts. The navy has 12,000 men, including 7,100 conscripts, and in the air force there are 10,550 men of whom 5,700 are conscripts. In addition there are voluntary defence organizations with a total strength of 500,000. National service lasts from 7½ to 15 months in the army and navy, and from 8 to 12 months in the air force. The 1977/78 budget for defence was 11,930 million kroner. A permanent force at the disposal of the UN was created in 1964, of which 425 men are serving in Cyprus and 687 in Egypt.

Economic Affairs

About 6 per cent of the working population are in agriculture, forestry and fisheries. Agriculture is concentrated in the southern region, the chief crops being oats, wheat, rye, barley and potatoes. Dairy produce accounts for about 30 per cent of farming output. Farming produces about 4 per cent of Sweden's G.N.P. Nearly all the live-stock and crop production is consumed in Sweden. Half the country is covered by forests, providing timber, pitch, fuel and tar, and supplies for the paper and rayon industries. Sweden is rich in mineral resources. There are large deposits of iron ore, which provides the basis of domestic heavy industry and a continuing supply to the industrial market in Western Europe. Sweden accounts for some 5 per cent of world iron ore production. The major ore fields are at Kiruna and Malmberget, north of the Arctic Circle. In 1976 about 27 per cent of the working population were employed in manufacturing industry, of which the largest branches are metalworking and engineering. Industrial products include machinery, vehicles, electronics, telecommunications, and shipping. Swedish furniture, porcelain and glass have an international reputation. Many of Sweden's state-owned businesses are grouped together in a state enterprise company, Statsföretag, which is one of the largest industrial concerns in the country.

Peaceful labour and foreign relations and political stability have helped Sweden to become one of the most prosperous nations in the world. During the international recession the Social Democrat Government encouraged industrial investment and thus kept unemployment low. Exports fell, however, in 1974 and 1975, and the balance of payments deficit increased, because of Sweden's dependence for some 70 per cent of its energy requirements on imported oil. In March 1976 Sweden and Norway agreed to co-ordinate their oil industries, and a bill passed in May envisaged increasing the number of nuclear plants in Sweden to 13, which would be producing 50 per cent of the country's energy requirements by 1985. It is uncertain whether the new coalition Government will continue the expansion of the nuclear energy programme. In the twelve months to July 1977, the inflation rate averaged 12.8 per cent, compared with a rate of 9.9 per cent in the preceding twelve months. The krona was devalued for the third time in a year in August 1977, bringing its cumulative depreciation to 15 per cent over the preceding twelve months and forcing Sweden to leave the European joint currency float. The devaluation was designed to restore the competitive value of Swedish industry and to reduce the balance of payments deficit. In October income tax cuts were promised for 1978; these cuts were intended to encourage moderate wage claims in 1978.

Sweden was one of the founder-members of EFTA and favours the reduction of trade barriers.

Transport and Communications

Sweden has an excellent railway system. Of the 11,360 km. (1976) of nationalized railways, about 7,500 km. are electrified. Swedish State Railways operate ferry services to Denmark and the German Democratic Republic. Roads extend for 98,000 km. The ocean-going fleet totals 7,486,196 g.r.t. (1975). The Swedish airline, A.B. Aero-transport, owns a three-sevenths share in the Scandinavian consortium SAS (Scandinavian Airlines System).

Social Welfare

There is a highly advanced system of social security schemes covering old age and family pensions, sickness, unemployment and disability benefits based on a National Pension Fund. Expenditure on the social services absorbs a considerable part of the national income. In 1969 the State took over the distribution of pharmaceuticals as part of the socialization of the health scheme. A national dental insurance scheme was established in 1974. A law passed in 1975 increased security of employment and unemployment benefits for those made redundant.

Sweden is now developing detailed planning for the development of medical services comprising hospitals and health centres for ambulatory care. Sweden has a very high ratio of hospital beds to population—about 16.4 per 1000 inhabitants. The tendency now is for emphasis on ambulatory care, often highly specialized, and on integration of health and social services.

Education

Basic education, which is compulsory, extends for ten years, starting at the age of 7, and is received at the Comprehensive School (Grundskolan). At the end of this period, the pupil may enter the Integrated upper secondary school. In the Integrated school there are 22 programmes of 2-4 years' duration and also special vocational courses of different lengths of time.

After grade three on the theoretical programmes the pupils may enter university studies. There are 13 state universities, several state owned professional schools and institutes on university level and one semi-private business school.

Tourism

Sweden offers a variety of landscape from the mountains of the Midnight Sun north of the Arctic Circle to the white sand beaches of the south. There are many lakes and forests. Stockholm, a beautifully situated capital, is famous for modern architecture. Income from visitors in 1976 totalled 1,540 million kroner.

Visitors from Denmark, Finland, Iceland and Norway do not require a passport.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter Sweden: Algeria, Andorra, Argentina, Australia, Austria, the Bahamas, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Fiji, France, the Gambia, the Federal Republic of Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, India, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, the Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, the Republic of Korea, Lesotho, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Malawi, Malaysia, Malta, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Morocco, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, the Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Romania, San Marino, Singapore, South Africa, Spain, Swaziland, Switzerland, Tanzania, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, the United Kingdom, the U.S.A., Uruguay, Venezuela, Yugoslavia.

Sport

The most popular sports are football, gymnastics, skiing, ice-hockey, athletics and tennis. Swimming, sailing, golfing, hunting, table-tennis, orienteering, bandy and 'varpa' also have a considerable following.

Public Holidays

1978: March 24th (Good Friday), March 27th (Easter Monday), May 1st (May Day), May 4th (Ascension Day), May 15th (Whit Monday), June 24th (Midsummer), November 4th (All Saints' Day), December 25th and 26th (Christmas).

1979: January 1st (New Year's Day), January 6th (Epiphany).

THE CONSTITUTION

The Swedish constitution dating from 1809 was based on four fundamental laws: the Instrument of Government, the Act of Succession, the Freedom of the Press Act and the Riksdag Act. Following partial reforms in 1968 and 1969, a new Instrument of Government and a new Riksdag Act were adopted in 1973 and 1974, and the revised constitution came into force in January 1975. Government commissions then considered further changes. The principles behind these extensive reforms are described in the Instrument of Government:

All public power in Sweden emanates from the people. The Swedish democracy is founded on freedom of opinion and on universal and equal suffrage and shall be realized through a representative and parliamentary polity and through local self-government. Public power shall be exercised under the laws.

THE RIKSDAG

The Riksdag is described in the Instrument of Government as the prime representative of the Swedish people. It enacts laws, decides the amount and use of taxation and examines the government's actions. The Riksdag at present contains 349 members, elected for three years. Previously, Riksdag members had the right of unlimited speaking time, but the number and length of speeches a member may deliver in a debate may now be restricted.

THE COMMITTEE SYSTEM

In accordance with tradition the work of the Swedish Riksdag is, to a great extent, carried on in a non-partisan atmosphere. This is largely the result of the thorough attention given to all questions by numerous standing committees elected on a basis of proportional representation. Besides the Utrikesnämnden (Advisory Council on Foreign Affairs) and Special Committees, every Riksdag appoints from within the assembly a Constitution Committee, a Finance Committee, a Taxation Committee and at least 12 other committees. At the moment there are 16 standing committees, each with 15 members: Constitution (Konstitutionsutskottet), Finance (Finansutskottet), Taxation (Skatteutskottet), Administration of Justice (Justitieutskottet), Laws (Lagutskottet), Foreign Affairs (Utrikesutskottet), Defence (Försvarsutskottet), Social Insurance (Socialförsäkringsutskottet), Social Welfare (Socialutskottet), Cultural Affairs (Kulturutskottet), Education (Utbildningsutskottet), Communications (Trafikutskottet), Agriculture (Jordbruksutskottet), Economic Affairs (Näringsutskottet), Home Affairs (Arbetsmarknadsutskottet) and Local Government (Civilutskottet).

The Constitution Committee has to examine the minutes of the Cabinet and to deal with or to initiate proposals concerning alterations of the fundamental laws and of laws regulating local government.

THE GOVERNMENT

Under the Instrument of Government, the Cabinet governs Sweden and is responsible to the Riksdag. Sweden's parliamentary system of government has been written into the constitution only since 1968-69. The constitution of 1975 formalized the position of the King relative to Cabinet and Parliament, and laid down rules on the selection and resignation of the Cabinet.

As head of state, the King has representative and ceremonial duties only. The King does not participate in the government of the country, which is conducted rather by the Cabinet at meetings not attended by the King. Decisions of government do not require the King's signature, and it is the Speaker of the Riksdag, and not the King, who leads the procedure resulting in the formation of a new Government. Following consultations within the Riksdag, the Speaker nominates a candidate for Prime Minister. If not more than half of the total number of members of the Riksdag vote against the proposed candidate, he is approved. Failing this approval the procedure has to be repeated. After four unsuccessful attempts to secure Riksdag approval of a candidate for the premiership, a new election to the Riksdag must be held within three months. A candidate for the premiership approved by the Riksdag nominates the other members of the Government himself.

The Prime Minister can be dismissed at his own request, by the Speaker of the Riksdag, or in the event of a vote of no confidence in the Riksdag. Other ministers can be dismissed at their own request, by the Prime Minister or by a vote of no confidence. If the Prime Minister should resign or die, all of the ministers in his Cabinet must resign. A Cabinet which is due to resign shall, however, remain in power until a new Prime Minister has been appointed.

A demand for a vote of no confidence will be considered only if it is supported by 10 per cent of the members of the Riksdag. A vote of no confidence requires the support of more than half of the Riksdag members. If the Riksdag decides upon a vote of no confidence the Cabinet can avoid resigning if it calls for an extra general election within one week. The Riksdag may continue its business, or be summoned to convene, even after a decision has been made to hold new elections. A Riksdag session may, however, be terminated by a special decision of the Government. Existing terms of office do not expire until the new terms of office have begun.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

In Sweden, local government, following a now traditional evolution of de-centralization, is exceedingly important, and it is estimated that municipalities are responsible for about 40 per cent of public administration. However, interaction between local and national government is of fundamental importance to the development and management of the country. For these reasons local government elections have a strong element of national politics, and the turnout for local elections is as large as for general elections.

ELECTORAL SYSTEM

In order that local and national government terms of office should coincide, the Constitution calls for local and general elections to be held on the same day. In both cases the term of office for the elected candidate is three years. Proportional representation was introduced in Sweden between the years 1906 and 1909, universal and equal suffrage by 1921. The voting age is 18. In allocating the 349 seats in the Riksdag the seats are divided into two groups. The first group of 310 "constituency seats" is distributed among the constituencies according to the number of eligible voters, and within each constituency among the parties. The remaining 39 seats are distributed as "adjustment seats". First, it is calculated how many seats each party would have obtained if the whole country had been treated as a single constituency and if the distribution of seats had taken place according to a modified Lague method. From this figure is subtracted the number of "constituency seats" received, the result being the number of "compensatory seats" to be allocated to each party. These seats are filled by candidates nominated in the constituencies. There is a check to the emergence of small parties. Only parties which have received at least 4 per cent of the total votes cast are entitled to a seat. However, any party which receives 12 per cent or more of the votes in any constituency will be allowed to compete for a permanent seat in that constituency.

SWEDEN

The Government, Parliament, Political Parties

POLITICAL PARTIES

Socialdemokratiska Arbetarepartiet (Social Democratic Labour Party): Sveavägen 68, 10560 Stockholm. The Social Democratic labour movement dates back to the 1880s. The party has 1,060,000 members (1976) and 152 out of the 349 members in the Riksdag. Its programme is one of socialist economic reform and support of the United Nations. Chair. OLOF PALME; Sec. STEN ANDERSSON; publs. Tiden, Aktuellt.

Folkpartiet (Liberal Party): P.O.B. 6508, 111 83 Stockholm. The Liberal Party as a country-wide organization was constituted in 1902. Chair. PER AHLMARK; Sec.-Gen. GUNNAR STRÖM; publ. Utsikt.

Centerpartiet (Centre Party): Scheelegatan 8, 104 22 Stockholm. Constituted in 1922, through the coalition of two smaller parties formed in 1913 and 1915 respectively.

SWEDEN

It aims at social and progressive development in the nation and decentralization. Chair. THORBJÖRN FÄLLDIN; Sec. ALLAN PETTERSON; 250,000 mems.; publs. Svensk Politik, Politisk Tidskrift.

Moderata Samlingspartiet (Conservative Party): Lilla Nygatan 13, 111 82 Stockholm. The Party was constituted in 1904, but derives from conservative tendencies during the latter part of the 19th century. The chief points in its programme are social and economic progress on traditional Swedish lines and a liberal market-oriented economy. Chair. GÖSTA BOHMAN; Sec. LARS TOBISSON; 150,000 mems.; publ. Medborgaren.

Vaensterpartiet Kommunisterna (VPK) (The Left Party—Communists): Kungsgatan 84, Stockholm. The party was formed in 1917 as Left Social Democratic Party of Sweden, affiliated to the Communist International 1919. At the Congress in March 1921 it was renamed the Communist Party; in 1967 the party was renamed The Left Party (Communists). The party has about 16,000 members. The policy of the Party is based on the principles of Marxism. Chair. LARS WERNER; Sec. TORE FORSBERG; publs. Socialistisk Debatt, Ny Dag.

Kristen Demokratisk Samling—KDS (Christian Democratic Party): Kungsgatan 58, 3 tr., P.O.B. 451, 101 26 Stockholm; f. 1964 to promote emphasis on Christian values in political life. The party has about 23,000 members. Chair. ALF SVENSSON; publs. Samhällsgemenskap (fifteen times a year), KDS—Information (four times a year).

There is also a small Maoist party, the Communist Party of Sweden (SKP).

Swedish Workers' Communist Party: the party was formed in February 1977, after more than 10 years of internal dissension within the Vaensterpartiet Kommunisterna (VPK). Two of the VPK's 17 members in the Riksdag joined this new party which rejects the Euro-Communist orientation of the VPK's leadership. Chair. ROLF HAGEL.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

In Sweden the judiciary and the executive are separate. Judges are appointed by the Government. A judge can be removed by an authority other than a court, but in such an event he may always call for a judicial trial of the decision.

To supervise the courts in administrative matters, there is a central authority, the Domstolsverket, in Jönköping. This authority has no control over the judicial process, in which the court is independent even of the Government.

There are state officers who exercise control over the judiciary as well as the administrative authorities. The Justitiekansler (Chancellor of Justice) and the four Justitieombudsmen supervise the courts and the general administration including the armed forces. The Justitiekansler performs his functions on behalf of the Government. The Justitieombudsmen are appointed by and act on behalf of Parliament.

COURTS OF FIRST INSTANCE

Tingsrätt (District Court): The Court of First Instance in both civil and criminal cases. In criminal cases the court is composed of a presiding professional judge and five lay judges; in petty cases the court consists of the professional judge only. In civil cases the court is ordinarily composed of three professional judges; however, preparatory sessions are conducted by one professional judge. In family-law cases, e.g. divorce cases and cases concerning the guardianship or the custody of a child, the court is, however, composed of a professional judge and five lay judges. The lay judges are elected for a period of six years. They act as members of the bench and should consequently be distinguished from the jurors of other countries. There are too District Courts.

APPELLATE COURTS

Hovrätt (Court of Appeal): The Court of Second Instance, consisting of a president, judges of appeal and assessors. The work is apportioned between various divisions, each of which has five or six members. In criminal cases the bench consists of three professional judges and two lay judges (see above); in petty and in civil cases there are four professional judges only. There are six Courts of Appeal:

Svea Hovrätt in Stockholm; Pres. S. RUDHOLM.

Göta Hovrätt in Jönköping; Pres. E. ÅGVISS.

Hovrätten över Skåne och Blekinge in Malmö; Pres. T. LANDAHL.

Hovrätten för Västra Sverige in Göteborg; Pres. H. STENBERG.

Hovrätten för Nedre Norrland in Sundsvall; Pres. K. E. SKARVALL.

Hovrätten för Övre Norrland in Umeå; Pres. P.-E. NILSSON.

SUPREME COURT

Högsta Domstolen (Supreme Court of Sweden): in Stockholm, consisting of 26 members, is the Court of Highest Instance. The Court works in divisions, each of which is duly constituted with five members. Certain cases are decided by full session of the Court. There are also special divisions with three members, which decide if the Court is to consider a case or not.

Supreme Court Justices: G. O. E. PETRÉN (Pres. of the Court), B. ALEXANDERSON, E. G. F. CONRADI, P. G. BERGSTEN, B. BERNHARD, B. V. HULT, K. J. G. GYLLENSVÄRD, S. C. E. T. HESSER, V. C. HOLMBERG, K. E. WALBERG, L. S. FREDLUND, O. A. HÖGLUND, L. BRUNDIN, H. N. I. ULVESSON, N. O. G. MANNERFELT, L. T. WELANSON, E. NYMAN, H. HESSLER, U. NORDENSON, S. NYMAN, A. KNUTSSON, L. PERSSON, S. VÄNGBY, B. PALM, B. BENGTSSON, G. EHRNER.

SPECIAL COURTS

Special courts exist for certain categories of cases, e.g. fastighetsdomstolar (real estate courts) for cases concerning real estate.

ADMINISTRATIVE COURTS

The Swedish system of guarantees of the legality of administrative actions is a mixed one, composed on the one hand of elements common to the system of control of lower agencies by higher agencies and on the other hand of a system of separate administrative courts. The most important administrative courts are:

COUNTY ADMINISTRATIVE COURTS AND COUNTY FISCAL COURTS

In each of the 24 administrative districts of the country there is a Länsrätt (County Administrative Court) and a Länsskatterätt (County Fiscal Court). The County Administrative Court is competent in certain cases under the Child Welfare Act and the Temperance Act that are appealed from administrative bodies, e.g. cases concerning detention. It also handles cases concerning compulsory transfer of a child from a custodian to another and cases concerning withdrawal of driving licences. The County Fiscal Court hears cases concerning taxation. The bench of both courts consists of a professional judge and three or four lay judges.

ADMINISTRATIVE COURTS OF APPEAL

All decisions by the County Administrative Courts and the County Fiscal Courts may be appealed to Kammarrätt (Administrative Courts of Appeal) consisting of a president, judges of appeal and assessors. Those courts also handle cases that are appealed from administrative bodies concerning the salary of public servants, social welfare, etc. The courts work in divisions, each of which has five members. The bench consists of at least three and not more than four judges. In certain cases there are, however, three professional judges and two lay judges (see above). There are four Administrative Courts of Appeal:

Kammarrätten i Stockholm: Pres. G. HEDBORG.

Kammarrätten i Göteborg: Pres. N. WENTZ.

Kammarrätten i Sundsvall: Pres. B. ORRHEDE.

Kammarrätten i Jönköping: Pres. C.-A.

SWEDEN

SUPREME ADMINISTRATIVE COURT

Regeringsrätten (Supreme Administrative Court of Sweden) in Stockholm, consisting of 23 members, is the Court of Highest Instance in Administrative cases. The composition of the Court is governed by rules very similar to those that apply to the Supreme Court (see above).

Supreme Administrative Court Justices:

President: C. V. ÅBJÖRNS-SON	P. I. LIDBECK
L. A. DELIN	S. F. NORDLUND

THE OMBUDSMEN

For many years, Sweden's "Chancellor of Justice" officially protected the citizen from undue interference, negligence or errors caused by government officials. Furthermore, the ordinance of 1766 proclaimed that all documents from which government officials make their decisions were to be made public. By the beginning of the 19th century, however, the Chancellor of Justice was considered not sufficiently independent of the Government, and in 1809 the post of Justitieombudsman was created to supervise the manner in which judges, government officials and other civil servants observe the laws, and to prosecute those who act illegally, misuse their position or neglect their duties. The Ombudsman is allowed access to all documents and information and has the right to be present at the considerations of the courts and other authorities. Government ministers in Sweden are not subject to supervision by the Ombudsman. In 1941 the term of office was extended from one to four years. At present there are four Ombudsmen.

Ombudsmen: ULF LUNDAVIK, ANDERS WIGELIUS, LEIF EKBERG, KARL-ERIK UHLIN.

RELIGION

CHURCH OF SWEDEN

Svenska Kyrkan (Church of Sweden): Of the Evangelical Lutheran Faith. The State controls its property, and the King must profess the pure evangelical creed. About 95 per cent of the population are members. The Church consists of 13 dioceses, 2,565 parishes which are united into 1,140 rectors' districts (pastorates), and 179 rural deaneries. The number of active clergy is 2,650 (including missionaries in the mission fields). The administrative authority of the diocese is the chapter, the president of which is the Bishop. Since 1164 the Archbishop of Uppsala has been head of the Church. The relations between the Church of Sweden and other religious denominations are regulated by the Act of Religious Freedom, 1951; publs. Vår Kyrka, Svensk Kyrkotidning, Svensk Pastoraltidskrift (all weekly).

THE PRESS

Press freedom in Sweden dates from the law of 1766. The 1949 Freedom of the Press Act, a fundamental law embodying the whole of the press legislation in the Constitution, has now been replaced by a Mass Media Act which came into effect in January 1977. The new law applies the principles of the 1949 Freedom of the Press Act to all mass media. It guarantees the Press's right to print and disseminate ideas; protects those supplying information by forbidding editors to disclose sources under any circumstances; authorizes all public documents to be publicly available, official secrets being the only exception; and contains provision for defamation. Press offences are to be referred to common law; and all cases against the Press must be heard by jury.

In 1916 the Pressens Opinionsnämnd or Fair Practices Commission was founded. Lacking judicial status, it has powers to protect the reputation of the Press and to rehabilitate persons wronged by the Press who refuse to apply to courts of law. As the Opinionsnämnd, unlike the ordinary courts, permits evidence as to the truth or falsehood of accusations of libel, it is frequently preferred by libelled persons. It treats economic and editorial disputes, examines accusations of inaccuracy, etc. Its judgments are widely published and highly respected.

In response to the economic situation in the newspaper world which since the war has caused many conservative and liberal papers to cease publication, the Press Subsidies Bill was passed in 1966 to grant funds to the political parties who then distribute them to assist their own papers where they are in financial difficulties.

The Press serves as a major medium for political discussion, and the Conservative and Socialist press each enjoy over 20 per cent of daily circulation and the Liberal over 40 per cent. Many papers are directly owned or run by political parties or trade unions. Many party organs depend on substantial subsidies from their parties who since the Press Subsidies Bill have more funds at their disposal.

The trade unions give financial support through the intermediary of the Trade Unions Confederation to some 24 Socialist dailies of which they own approximately four-fifths. Though these papers are party organs, in close contact with the party, each editor expresses a considerable measure of independence. The Trade Union Confederation owns Aftonbladet. Affiliated trade unions publish some 25 periodical organs, with 1.6 million total circulation, including the popular Metallarbetaren (with a circulation of 438,400 in 1975).

There are no important chains of newspapers. Among the major dailies, Svenska Dagbladet is owned by an independent foundation, and Göteborgs-Posten by its editor. One of the main publishers is the Bonnier group which stems from Albert Bonnier's publishing house for books. This group also owns, among a number of enterprises in the paper and printing field, Semic/Åhlen & Åkerlund, whose magazines enjoy 50 per cent of the total circulation of periodicals. Bonniers is also the majority shareholder in the popular Dagens Nyheter and its associated evening paper Expressen. Four other companies account for a further 40 per cent of Sweden's magazine circulation.

The dominating influence of the few major dailies is largely confined to Stockholm, the provinces having a strong Press of their own.

The major dailies in order of circulation are: Expressen, Aftonbladet, Dagens Nyheter, Svenska Dagbladet (all Stockholm), Göteborgs-Posten (Göteborg), Kvällsposten (Malmö). The most popular weekly periodicals include the family magazine Året Runt and the home and household magazine ICA-Kuriren. Vi caters for serious cultural and political discussion and Bonniers Litterära Magasin specializes in literary topics.

Drottningholmsteatern (Drottningholm Court Theatre): Box 27050, S-102 51 Stockholm; f. 1766; still uses the original stage machinery and settings; opera and ballet performances May-Sept.; theatre and collections of theatre art open to visitors daily April-Oct. and by arrangement Nov.-March; library on the history of the stage in Europe; managed by the Drottningholm Theatre Museum Foundation; Dir. (vacant).

There are municipal theatres in Stockholm, Gothenburg, Malmö, Uppsala-Gävle, Norrköping-Linköping and Helsingborg.

OPERA HOUSES

Kungliga Teatern (The Royal Opera): Gustav Adolfs Torg, Box 6094, 103 22 Stockholm.

Stora Teatern: Kungssportsavenyn, Box 53116, 400 15 Gothenburg.

PRINCIPAL ORCHESTRAS

Stockholm Philharmonic Orchestra (Stockholm Concert Hall Foundation): Konserthuset, Hötorget 8, P.O.B. 40083, 103 42 Stockholm; f. 1902; Pres. BENGT OLOF ENGSTRÖM; Chief Conductor (vacant).

Swedish Radio Symphony Orchestra: Radiohuset, Oxenstiernsgatan 20, 105 10 Stockholm; f. 1943; Chief Conductor HERBERT BLOMSTEDT; Permanent Conductor STIG WESTERBERG.

ATOMIC ENERGY

Statens kärnkraftinspektion (Swedish Nuclear Power Inspectorate): Box 27 106, 102 52 Stockholm; Chair. GÖSTA NETZEN; Chief Man. ARNE HEDGRAN.

The Board is the body entrusted with control and inspection of atomic installations and atomic fuel.

Naturvetenskapliga forskningsrådet (The Natural Science Research Council): Box 23 136, 104 35 Stockholm; f. 1945; Pres. MATS LEMNE; Sec.-Gen. Prof. INGVAR LINDQVIST.

The Swedish Atomic Research Council and the Swedish Natural Science Research Council have combined into the Natural Science Research Council. The Council, under the Ministry of Education, allocates the funds provided by the Government for fundamental research in natural science including nuclear physics, nuclear chemistry, radiation chemistry, radiation physics and radiation biology.

The Council also acts as an advisory body to the Swedish Government and to Swedish authorities within the field of atomic research.

The Council represents Sweden in CERN (European Organization for Nuclear Research) and in NORDITA (Nordic Institute for Theoretical Atomic Physics).

AB Atomenergi (The Swedish Atomic Energy Company): Studsvik, Fack, 611 01 Nyköping; Man. Dir. BO ALER; Dir. of Admin. JAN-ERIC ÖSTERLUND.

The company, formed in 1947, is state owned. It is a development corporation, a national laboratory for Swedish applied research in nuclear as well as other energy fields. The staff of the company is about 1,000.

Studsvik, the company's research station, is equipped with comprehensive research facilities. Plans for full-scale uranium milling are being studied at the Ranstad pilot mill.

Statens Vattenfallsverk (State Power Board): Fack 162 87 Vällingby; is building seven light-water power reactors (Ringhals I-IV and Forsmark I-III), one of 760 MW, one of 820 MW, four of 900 MW and one of 1000 MW, becoming operational between 1974 and 1983.

Forskningsinstitutet för Atomfysik (Research Institute for Physics): Roslagsvägen 100, 104 05 Stockholm 50; f. 1964; Dir. Prof. INGMAR BERGSTRÖM.

The Gustaf Werner Institute, University of Uppsala (Institute for High Energy Physics and Physical Biology): Box 531, 751 21 Uppsala.

CO-OPERATION

Sweden is a member of the International Atomic Energy Agency, the Centre Européen de Recherches Nucléaires and NORDITA (Nordic Institute for Theoretical Atomic Physics). Agreements were concluded with the U.S.A. in 1956 and with the United Kingdom in 1957 and 1964.

UNIVERSITIES

Chalmers Tekniska Högskola (Chalmers University of Technology): Göteborg; 273 teachers, 4,400 students.

Göteborgs Universitet (Göteborg University): Göteborg; 131 professors, 22,000 students.

Högskolan i Karlstad (University of Karlstad): Karlstad; 120 teachers, 2,400 students.

Kungliga Tekniska Högskolan (Royal Institute of Technology): Stockholm; 1,500 teachers, 6,800 students.

Universitet i Linköping (University of Linköping): Linköping; 650 teachers, 6,000 students.

Högskolan i Luleå (Technical University of Northern Sweden): Luleå; 300 teachers, 2,500 students.

Lunds Universitet (University of Lund): Lund; 1,894 teachers, c. 22,000 students.

SWITZERLAND

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Switzerland lies in central Europe, bounded to the north by Germany, to the east by Austria, to the south by Italy, and to the west by France. The climate is generally temperate, although wide and sudden variations in weather frequently occur due to differences of altitude, aspect and gradient. There are three official languages—German, French and Italian, spoken by 64.9, 18.1 and 11.9 per cent of the population respectively (1970). A fourth language, Romansch, is spoken by 0.8 per cent. About 48 per cent of the population are Protestants and 49.4 per cent Roman Catholic. The Federal flag, which is square, consists of a white cross on a red background. The capital is Berne.

Recent History

Although Switzerland has long been the headquarters of many international organizations, it has not yet joined the UN for fear of compromising its neutrality, which was recognized in 1815. However, it maintains a Permanent Observer at the UN and has joined several of the UN specialized non-political agencies. In 1977 the Federal Council's third report on whether Switzerland should join the UN recommended that it should become a member and that a national referendum should be held on the issue. Switzerland was a founder member of EFTA in 1960 and joined the Council of Europe in 1963. In July 1972 a special agreement was concluded with the EEC.

The main federal body is the Federal Council. It is organized on a collegial system, and since 1959 government posts have been divided between the Social Democrats, the Radical Democrats, the Christian Democrats and the People's Party. This coalition has over four-fifths of the seats in the National Council, and an even larger majority in the Council of States. In the elections of October 1975 it gained seven seats in the National Council and one in the Council of States. The Social Democrats regained their position as the strongest single party. Their programme has been concerned with increasing social benefits and reducing unemployment. Their advances in the election may open the way to more state intervention to deal with economic difficulties.

The restricted powers of the Federal Council cause referenda and initiatives to become the main foci of political debate. Women were given the right to vote in national elections by a government-instigated referendum in 1971. Following three referenda in the canton of Berne in 1974 and 1975 it was concluded that the northern, mostly French-speaking area should form a 26th canton, known as Jura. Its constitution has been drawn up and is expected to become part of Confederation statute in 1978. In national referenda held in 1977 the Swiss rejected proposals for a 40-hour week; for the legalization of abortions undertaken within the first 12 weeks of pregnancy; and for the reform of taxes on higher incomes.

Government

The Swiss Confederation, composed of 19 cantons and 6 half-cantons, has a republican federal constitution.

Legislative power is held by the bicameral Federal Assembly: a Council of States with 44 members representing the cantons (two for each canton and one for each half-canton), elected for three to four years; and the National Council with 200 members directly elected by universal adult suffrage for four years, using proportional representation. Executive power is held by the Federal Council, which has seven members elected for four years by a joint session of the Federal Assembly. The Council elects one of its number to be President of the Confederation for one year at a time.

National policy is the prerogative of the Federal Government, but considerable power is vested in the cantons. The Swiss citizen shares three distinct allegiances—communal, cantonal and national. Direct participation is very important in communal government, and all members may take part in the communal assemblies or referenda which decide upon local affairs. Each canton has its own written constitution, government and assembly. The referendum, which can be on a communal, cantonal or national scale, further ensures the possibility of direct public participation in decision taking.

Defence

National defence is based on compulsory military service. Switzerland maintains no standing army except for a small permanent personnel of commissioned and non-commissioned officers primarily concerned with training. Military service consists of 17 weeks' recruit training followed by reservist refresher training of varying lengths according to age. Service totals about one year between the ages of 20 and 50. Each soldier keeps his equipment, assault rifle, ammunition and gas mask in his own home, and receives compulsory marksmanship training between periods of service. The total strength of the armed forces when mobilized is about 625,000. The Confederation belongs to no foreign defence organizations, and the strategy of the army and air force is defensive. The allocation for defence in the 1977 Federal budget was 2,986 million Swiss francs, but some expenses are borne by the cantons.

Economic Affairs

In spite of the country's mountainous terrain, agriculture is an important part of the Swiss economy. Three quarters of the land surface is agricultural or forest land and over 7 per cent of the total labour force is employed in farming. Farms are small and the emphasis has been on dairy production, although, because of over-production of milk and milk-products, the authorities are encouraging meat production. Cheese is the only product sold in quantity abroad.

Switzerland's main natural resource is the water power which has been used in the production of hydro-electric power. Some of this has been exported but recently reserves of power have been running low and Switzerland is turning towards nuclear power. The lack of natural resources has meant that industry has been developed over a wide base. The Swiss aptitude for precision engineering, especially in clocks and watches, has long been famous; other important industries include heavy engineering, textiles, footwear, chemicals, wood-working and printing. Other important sources of foreign revenue are banking and insurance, and the tourist industry which attracts visitors to Switzerland all the year round.

Since the war the Swiss economy has been expanding and the population enjoys a very high standard of living. With consumer prices increasing by only 1 per cent a year, Switzerland has the lowest rate of inflation in Europe and has been protected from world rates of inflation by the appreciation of the currency. The Swiss franc was revalued in May 1971, the first change in its parity since 1936. By December 1977 the franc had appreciated by 105 per cent against the U.S. dollar. The inflow of funds through the international activities of the banks, which formerly had an inflationary effect, was checked by the introduction of negative interest rates in 1975. Restrictions placed on bank lending in 1971, to curb growth in demand, reversed the increase of foreign banks, and checked monetary growth. The bank rate was reduced to 2 per cent in June 1976 and to 1.5 per cent in July 1977.

The economy has depended on foreign labour: resident aliens, seasonal workers and workers who commute from neighbouring countries. However, in 1975, because of unemployment, restrictions on immigration and the number of seasonal workers permitted were introduced. Over 200,000 foreigners have left the country, and unemployment, which reached a peak of 32,000 in February 1976, had fallen to under 9,000 (0.3 per cent) in September 1977.

The country was first affected by recession in 1974, with growth in G.N.P. estimated at only 0.2 per cent in real terms. In 1975 G.N.P. dropped by 7.9 per cent, the inflation rate was 3.4 per cent and industrial production fell by 13 per cent. Increases in federal taxes and reductions in government spending were approved in a referendum in June 1975 and the resulting reduction in investment and in private consumption had a deflationary effect. In 1976 G.N.P. grew by 0.5 per cent and the inflation rate was 1.3 per cent. G.N.P. was expected to grow by about 3 per cent in 1977.

A proposal to introduce V.A.T. in place of the existing sales taxes was rejected in a national referendum in June 1977. The Confederation relies for more than half its receipts on indirect taxes, above all on a turnover tax (levied on goods but not on services) and on customs duties (levied on weight rather than value). A government savings programme, which includes increases in turnover tax rates and cantonal income tax rates and cuts in butter and bread subsidies, is due to go to referendum in June 1978. The 1978 budget envisaged moderate government spending and a deficit of 636 million francs less than that for 1977.

Within the context of EFTA Switzerland negotiated a free trade agreement with the enlarged EEC, which came into force in January 1973. In 1976 EEC countries took 45 per cent of Swiss exports and contributed 66.5 per cent of imports. A trade surplus of 173.6 million francs in 1976 was the first surplus Switzerland had achieved since 1953.

Transport and Communications

The Swiss Federal Railways (2,917 km.) are almost wholly electrified and amongst the most efficient in the world. The many small private railways chiefly cover short mountain routes. There are more than 18,150 km. of main roads and a comprehensive programme of motorway construction is scheduled to be completed by 1988. In 1975 there was an ocean-going merchant fleet of 27 ships and 473 Rhine barges based on the port of Basel. Swissair is the national airline and Zürich, Geneva and Basel-Mulhouse are the principal airports.

Social Welfare

Almost all Swiss citizens are insured against illness by the Federal Insurance Law of 1911. This insurance is not yet universally compulsory. There is compulsory unemployment insurance for all salaried employees, many of whom are also compulsorily insured against professional and non-professional accidents. There is a compulsory system of old age, widows', widowers' and invalids' insurance.

Education

Education is under cantonal and communal control with the result that there are twenty-five different systems in operation. Education has been compulsory for children between the ages of 7 and 14 since 1874, and in most cantons a further two years of compulsory education are required. After this primary education some 10 per cent of the pupils enter a "non-vocational continuation school" for a period of one to four years. The greater proportion, however, enter either a "lower secondary school" or a "higher secondary school" (Gymnasium, Collège). A school-leaving certificate from the latter qualifies the pupil for admission to an institution of higher education. There are seven universities, two technical colleges of university standing and a college of economics and social science. There are numerous private schools and many foreign children receive part of their education in Switzerland.

Tourism

Switzerland is the classic land of tourism. The principal attractions are the lakes and lake resorts and the mountains. Walking, mountaineering and winter sports are the chief pastimes. Receipts from tourism totalled 5,500 million francs in 1976, and foreign visitors spent 31.1 million nights in Swiss hotels, etc.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter Switzerland: Algeria, Australia, Brunei, Cyprus, Fiji, Finland, Greece, Iceland, Israel, Japan, Malaysia, Malta, Morocco, New Zealand, Rhodesia, Singapore, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey, Yugoslavia, all Western European countries and all American countries except Chile.

Sport

Skiing, skating, mountaineering and orienteering, football and cycling are the most popular sports.

Public Holidays

1978: March 24th (Good Friday), March 27th (Easter Monday), May 4th (Ascension Day), May 15th (Whit Monday), December 25th–26th (Christmas).

1979: January 1st (New Year).

Coins: 1, 2, 5, 10, 20 and 50 centimes; 1, 2 and 5 francs.

Notes: 10, 20, 50, 100, 500 and 1,000 francs.

Exchange rates (October 1977): £1 sterling = 3.97 francs; U.S.$1 = 2.23 francs.

100 Swiss francs = £25.20 = $44.78.

Note: Before May 1971 the official exchange rate was U.S.$1 = 4.373 Swiss francs, though external trade figures were based on the conversion factor of $1 = 4.297 francs (1 Swiss franc = 23.27 U.S. cents). From December 1971 to January 1973 the central exchange rate was $1 = 3.84 Swiss francs. In terms of sterling, the official rate was £1 = 10.495 Swiss francs from November 1967 to May 1971; and £1 = 10.006 Swiss francs from December 1971 to June 1972. Since January 1973 the Swiss franc has been allowed to "float". The average exchange rate (Swiss francs per U.S. dollar) was: 3.1665 in 1973; 2.9793 in 1974; 2.5813 in 1975; 2.4998 in 1976.

THE CONSTITUTION

The Constitution dates from 1874.

The twenty-two federated Cantons (often referred to as the twenty-five States, because three of the Cantons are sub-divided) have sovereign authority except where the constitutional pact has defined limits to their powers, and all undelegated powers are theirs. Cantonal feeling still makes for marked disapproval of any increase in Federal authority, which has been greatly extended since 1874 in the economic and social spheres of legislation.

Principally, the Federal authority is responsible for civil, penal and commercial law, legislation concerning marriage, residence and settlement, export and import duties, defence, postal, telephone and telegraph services, the mint, forestry, hunting and fishing, hydro-electric power, the economy, railways, important roads and bridges, social insurance, and international affairs. Administration is largely in the hands of the Cantons, partly in the mixed management of Federal authorities and Cantons. The Cantons derive their revenue from direct taxation. The Federal authority draws its revenue from direct and indirect taxation, and Federal direct taxes, such as the defence tax, are becoming increasingly important. The profits from State enterprises and customs duties are received by the Federal authorities.

THE COMMUNES

Each of the more than 3,000 communes of Switzerland has local autonomy over such matters as public utilities, education and roads, and grants primary citizenship. Decisions are made by communal assemblies which all citizens can attend, except in the urban communes where referenda are necessary. The smallest communes have only about 20 inhabitants, the largest, Zürich, nearly 400,000.

THE CANTONS

The 25 cantons and half-cantons of the Swiss Confederation each have their own constitutions and their own methods of choosing the members of the cantonal assembly and cantonal government and the States Councillors who represent them at the federal level. Five cantons, Glarus, Appenzell Ausserrhoden and Innerrhoden, Obwalden and Nidwalden, retain the Landsgemeinde, an assembly of all citizens of the canton held annually, as their decision-making authority. Elsewhere, democracy is less direct, the secret ballot and the referendum having replaced the mass assembly. Women have recently gained full political rights in almost all the cantons.

THE FEDERAL ASSEMBLY

The Federal Assembly is composed of two bodies, the National Council and the Council of States, which can deliberate either together or separately. The 200 members of the National Council are elected directly, by proportional representation, every four years. The Council of States represents the cantons, each of which sends two councillors, elected in varying ways according to the cantonal constitutions. The Federal Assembly is the supreme governing body of the Confederation. Both houses have to accept legislative and fiscal measures, and the Federal Assembly supervises the army, the civil service and the application of the law, exercises the right of pardon and elects the Federal Supreme Court, the Federal Insurance Court, the General who commands the army in times of crisis, and the Federal Council.

THE FEDERAL COUNCIL

Executive authority is vested in the Federal Council, whose seven members are the heads of the Federal ministries. Each year the Federal Assembly chooses the President and Vice-President of the Confederation from among the Federal Councillors. Generally, the Councillors are chosen from the members of the Federal Assembly, for a term of four years, which is often extended for so long as they are willing to serve. The Radical Democrats, the Social Democrats and the Christian Democrats each take two of the seats on the Council, the remaining place going to the People's Party. There has been some criticism of the constraints this system places on the choice of

The Constitution, The Government, Federal Assembly

Councillors, and also of the lack of representation given to the Social Democrats in the Council of States.

REFERENDA AND INITIATIVES

Referenda are held on both cantonal and federal levels. In many cantons all legislation has to be accepted by a majority of the voters, and in some cantons major financial matters have to be submitted to the popular vote. In federal affairs, a referendum is compulsory and the consent of a majority of the voters and of the cantons must be obtained for amendments to the Federal Constitution, but referenda are optional for other legislation. A petition from 50,000 voters is needed to bring about a national referendum, which can accept or reject any proposed legislation or international treaties concluded for a period of more than 15 years. The initiative gives voters in many cantons the right to propose a law or a legislative amendment and to demand a popular vote on it. A petition by 100,000 voters is needed to initiate a vote on an amendment to the Federal Constitution, but as federal laws cannot be proposed by means of an initiative, many constitutional amendments introduced in this manner concern relatively unimportant matters. The initiative is also used by the political opposition to bring about changes in government policy.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Switzerland has possessed a common Civil Code since 1912, but the Penal Code was only unified in 1942. Under the Code capital punishment was abolished by the few Cantons which still retained it. The individual Cantons continue to elect and maintain their own magistracy, and retain certain variations in procedure. Apart from military courts, there are only two Federal judicial authorities, the Federal Tribunal and the Federal Tribunal of Insurance. The Penal and Civil Procedure in the Canton of Zürich is described as an example.

CANTON OF ZÜRICH

CIVIL LAW

(a) District Courts (Bezirksgerichte).

Presidents or Vice-Presidents, who generally have a university degree in law, are competent as sole judges (Einzelrichter) if the value of the case is between 200 and 3,000 frs. (values below 200 frs. are decided without appeal by judges of the peace (Friedensrichter), who need not be lawyers—normally there is one for each commune). The Presidents or Vice-Presidents also deal with specified claims in bankruptcy proceedings without any limitation of the importance of the case; they are also competent to deal in summary and ex-parte proceedings.

The District Courts consist of three or five members. They settle civil matters between 3,000 frs. and 5,000 frs. value, and decide most other civil matters in the first instance if the plaintiff or both parties do not ask for an exception (see below for commercial matters and cases of over frs. 8,000 value).

(b) Labour Courts (Arbeitsgerichte).

Suits between employers and employees arising from terms of employment can be decided at Industrial Courts which cover one or more communes. Representatives of each side participate as judges.

(c) Courts for Tenancy Matters.

Each District has a Court for tenancy matters which settles disputes between landlords and tenants of apartments and business premises on the extension of tenancy after notice has been served. Representatives of each side participate as judges.

(d) Appeal Court (Obergericht).

Each Canton has an Appeal Court, which in Zürich consists of different specialized benches (Kammern) of three or five members.

The Appeal Court decides appeals, recourses and pleas of nullity, as granted by law, against decisions of Labour Courts, Courts for tenancy matters, District Courts and Courts of Arbitration as well as against decisions emanating from sole judges of District and Labour Courts. If both parties agree, cases of more than 8,000 frs. value may be brought directly before the Appeal Court to avoid District Courts.

A sub-branch of the Appeal Court is the Commercial Court (Handelsgericht). Each case is assigned for decision to two members of the Appeal Court and three commercial judges chosen by the President from a list of qualified merchants. They decide cases of more than 8,000 frs. value if of a commercial character, when either both parties or the defendant are registered merchants. Further, this Court decides some special matters like patents and trade marks.

(e) Cassation Court (Kassationsgericht).

This is a special Cantonal Court deciding pleas of nullity against decisions of the Appeal Court, Jury Court and Commercial Court, when there has been a serious infraction by the lower court, particularly concerning procedure.

PENAL LAW

Matters of Penal Law are decided partly by the same courts as matters of Civil Law.

In the Canton of Zürich, the more important cases are tried by the Jury Court (Geschworenengericht) when the accused pleads "not guilty", by the Appeal Court when the plea is "guilty". The Jury Court consists of three judges, of whom at least the President is a member of the Appeal Court, and a jury of nine members. The judges and jury decide the case together in secret session. Eight affirming votes are required for a defendant to be found guilty.

Less important cases are tried by the District Courts, or sole judges, in the first instance, and by the Appeal Court in the second instance. In certain minor cases, no appeal is possible.

The Public Attorney has the right to support the written accusation before any court. He is bound to assist only in important cases when the accused pleads "not guilty".

Witnesses and experts are examined by the Public Attorney and sign written statements, which are joined to the written accusation of the Public Attorney. The defence is allowed to question them; they are seldom called again. As a rule, they appear in person only before Jury Courts and make their deposition a second time.

THE FEDERAL TRIBUNAL

1000 Lausanne 14.

President: ANDRÉ GRISEL.

Vice-President: PAUL LEMP.

The Federal Tribunal (Bundesgericht, Tribunal fédéral, or Tribunale Federale) consisting, in all, of 28 members, sits at Lausanne. There are 15 supplementary judges. Both judges and supplementary judges are appointed by the Federal Assembly for six years and may be re-elected. The President and Vice-President are elected for two years.

In matters of Federal Law, the Tribunal decides non-financial civil cases and financial civil cases involving more than 8,000 frs. value. It gives final decisions on civil matters if both parties apply to it rather than to the cantonal courts, in cases involving more than 20,000 frs.

In penal cases the Tribunal acts mainly as a court of cassation, examining the decisions of cantonal courts for violations of federal law. It cannot change a lower court's finding on facts.

The Tribunal also decides civil cases between Cantons, between Cantons and the Confederation and claims by individuals or corporations against the Confederation involving over 8,000 frs. It gives final decisions on execution and bankruptcy proceedings and on the application of administrative law by federal and cantonal administrative and legal authorities, and acts as a constitutional court, deciding appeals concerning the violation of citizens' rights.

The Tribunal consists of the following sections:

- (a) Court of Public and Administrative Law (Staats- und Verwaltungsrechtliche Abteilung, Cour de droit public et de droit administratif, Corte di diritto pubblico e di diritto amministrativo).
- (b) Two Civil Courts (Zivilabteilungen, Cours civiles, Corti civili).
- (c) Bankruptcy Court (Schuldbetreibungs- und Konkurskammer, Chambre des poursuites et des faillites, Camera di esecuzione e dei fallimenti).
- (d) Court of Penal Cassation (Kassationshof, Cour de cassation pénale, Corte di cassazione penale).
- (e) Court of Arraignment (Anklagekammer, Chambre d'accusation, Camera d'accusa).
- (f) Criminal Court (Kriminalkammer, Chambre criminelle, Camera criminale).
- (g) Federal Penal Court (Bundesstrafgericht, Cour pénale fédérale, Corte penale federale).

FEDERAL TRIBUNAL OF INSURANCE

President: ARTUR WINZELER.

Vice-President: JEAN-DANIEL DU CÔMMUN.

The Tribunal was founded in 1918 and consists of seven members. It sits at Lucerne. Since 1969 it has been considered as the Court of Social Insurance (Sozialversicherungsabteilung, Cour des assurances sociales, Corte delle assicurazioni sociali) of the Federal Tribunal.

RELIGION

According to the 1970 Census, the religious adherence per 1,000 of the population was as follows: Protestant 478, Roman Catholic 494, Old Catholic 3, Jewish 3, other denominations (or without religion) 22.

CATHOLIC

In 1976 there were 3,144,225 Catholics in Switzerland.

Roman Catholic Church: The Church in Switzerland and Liechtenstein is divided into 6 dioceses and the abbeys of Maria Einsiedeln and St.-Maurice, each directly subordinate to the Holy See.

PROTESTANT

Federation of the Protestant Churches of Switzerland

(Schweizerischer Evangelischer Kirchenbund, Fédération des Eglises protestantes de la Suisse): Sulgenauweg 26, 3007 Berne; f. 1920. The Protestant Churches of Switzerland are grouped in this Federation of which the executive organ is the Council of the Federation (Vorstand des Schweizerischen Evangelischen Kirchenbundes, Conseil de la Fédération); Pres. Pastor W. SIGRIST (Berne); Vice-Pres. Pastor CH. BAUER (Le Locle); Sec. W. PROBST (Berne).

The eighteen reformed churches of Aargau, Appenzell, Basel-Stadt, Basel-Land, Berne, Fribourg, Geneva, Glarus, Graubünden, Neuchâtel, St. Gallen, Schaffhausen, Solothurn, Tessin, Thurgau, Valais, Vaud, Zürich, the Kirchenverband Zentralschweiz, the Eglise évangélique libre de Genève and the Evangelisch-methodistische Kirche, form part of this federation, as well as the Swiss churches abroad.

THE PRESS

Freedom of the Press in Switzerland is guaranteed by Article 55 of the amended 1874 Constitution, and the only formal restrictions on the press are the legal restraints concerned with abuses of this freedom. A federal law, enacted in October 1968, protects the right of journalists to refuse to reveal their sources of information, except in cases where the security of the state is involved.

The Swiss combination of a high literacy rate and a strong interest in local news, the political autonomy of communes and cantons, direct democracy, the federal constitutional structure and the coexistence of diverse languages and religions have tended to produce a decentralized press, fragmented into numerous local papers, often with very low circulations. In 1974, as well as the 170 feuilles d'avis and feuilles d'annonces, there were 497 newspapers. Of these, 356 were in German, 113 in French, 24 in Italian, 3 in Romansch and 1 in Spanish. Eighty-six per cent of these papers printed fewer than 15,000 copies, only 3 per cent more than 50,000.

Of the 497 Swiss newspapers, 144 were dailies, appearing six or seven times a week, with a total circulation of 2,633,000. For every 1,000 adults in Switzerland, 370 daily papers were sold. The presence of immigrant workers and the Swiss interest in foreign news has led to the importation of 100,000 copies of French, German, Italian and Spanish newspapers every day.

24 Heures Lausanne (formerly Feuille d'Avis de Lausanne), dating from 1762, is the oldest Swiss paper. Blick (270,000) and Tages Anzeiger Zürich (246,900) have easily the largest circulations, followed by Neue Zürcher Zeitung (102,000), 24 Heures Lausanne (101,000) and National-Zeitung (95,400). The two most respected dailies are Neue Zürcher Zeitung, founded in 1780, and the French-language Journal de Genève, established nearly fifty years later. Both papers, tabloid in format with few illustrations, carry an exceptionally high proportion of foreign news, and have an influential readership abroad.

The Swiss Broadcasting Corporation (SBC) is a private company which fulfils a public duty on the basis of a licence granted to it by the Swiss Federal Council. This gives the SBC the right to use the electrical and radio-electrical installations of the Swiss Postal and Telecommunications undertaking (PTT) for public broadcasting of radio and television programmes. It specifies that the SBC is responsible for the programme services, whilst the PTT is responsible for all technical aspects of transmission. Receiver licence fees are collected by the PTT, which takes 30 per cent of them, the remaining 70 per cent going to the SBC.

The SBC is composed of the following regional and member societies:

Société de Radiodiffusion et de Télévision de la Suisse Romande (SRTR): 6 ave. de la Gare, 1001 Lausanne; Dir. of radio and television RENÉ SCHENKER; Programme Dirs.: Radio: BERNARD NICOD, Maison de la Radio, 1010 Lausanne; Television: ALEX-ANDRE BURGER, 20 Quai Ernest Ansermet, 1211 Geneva 8.

RADIO

In July 1977 there were five medium-wave transmitters

(including the three national ones at Beromünster, Sottens and Monte Ceneri), 196 VHF transmitters and 12 short-wave transmitters. Two different programmes for each linguistic region, regular programmes in Romansch and local programmes for German-speaking Switzerland are transmitted on medium-wave and VHF. The Swiss Short-wave Service, known as the SBC's European and Overseas Services, broadcasts in nine languages. The Swiss Wire Network Service, which broadcasts radio programmes on the telephone cable network of the PTT, comes under the same directorship as the Short-wave Service. It provides six programmes to over 400,000 subscribers. Paid advertising is forbidden on radio.

On June 30th, 1977, the total number of radio licences was 2,120,553.

INTERNATIONAL SERVICE

European and Overseas Services of the Swiss Broadcasting Corporation: Giacomettistrasse 1, 3000 Berne 15; programmes in French, German, Italian, Romansch, English, Spanish, Portuguese, Esperanto and Arabic to all parts of the world. Twelve short-wave transmitters are situated at Schwarzenburg, Beromünster, Lenk, Sarnen and Sottens; Dir. JOËL CHURCHOD.

TELEVISION

In July 1977 there were 855 transmitters and boosters in operation. A complete TV programme service for each linguistic region and regular broadcasts in Romansch are provided on the 1st (VHF) channel. The 2nd and 3rd (UHF) channels are used in each linguistic region for transmitting programmes of the other two linguistic regions. Limited direct advertising (20 minutes on week-days) is allowed.

On June 30th, 1977, there were 1,831,771 TV licences in Switzerland.

FINANCE

(cap.=capital; p.u.=paid up; dep.=deposits; res.=reserves; m.=million; all values are in Swiss francs)

Switzerland's importance as a financial centre stems from many historical and geographical factors. It is a small nation with scant natural resources situated in the centre of Europe with a tradition of political neutrality and a trilingual population.

Switzerland's neutrality during the First World War and its aftermath helped to develop the reputation of the Swiss banks as a secure repository for foreign capital. The Swiss Bank Secrecy Law enacted in 1934 made it a penal offence for a bank to provide information about its clients without their explicit authorization, unless a court has ordered otherwise. When foreign authorities wish to investigate Swiss accounts, criminal charges must have been made in a foreign court and accepted as valid by Switzerland. The system of numbered accounts has also kept depositors' shares free from investigation. However, the abuse of bank secrecy by organized crime led Switzerland and the U.S.A. to sign a treaty in May 1973, under which Swiss banks allow their clients' accounts to be inspected where there is "a reasonable suspicion" of certain crimes. Drug trafficking, air piracy, illicit gambling, prostitution and counterfeiting related to international criminal organizations are covered by the treaty; such offences as tax evasion, anti-trust law infringements and political and military charges are still immune from investigation. An agreement concluded by the Swiss National Bank and the Swiss Bankers' Association in June 1977 established a code of conduct on the Swiss banks' handling of foreign funds. The code, which came into operation for new accounts in July 1977, has made the opening of numbered accounts subject to closer scrutiny.

The anti-inflation measures of the Swiss Government have also introduced some limitations on the banks' freedom of action. The extension of domestic credit is restricted, and the ban on foreign purchases of Swiss land and the discouragement of foreign capital inflow have harmed the banks' profitability, in the interest of the whole Swiss economy, overheated by the inflow of "hot money".

At the end of 1974 there were 4,789 bank branches in Switzerland, owned by 461 banks, 32 private banks, 15 Swiss offices of foreign banks, two loan-office associations and 62 finance companies. Swiss banking is dominated by the Big Five banks (Union Bank of Switzerland, Swiss Bank Corporation, Swiss Credit Bank, Swiss Volksbank and Bank Leu), with 670 branches and 44 per cent of the total 286,676.1m. francs bank balances. Much of their share comes from foreign business. Foreign banks have become increasingly important; in 1974, 85 foreign-controlled banks and 15 branches of foreign banks held nearly 11 per cent of all Swiss banking assets.

The Swiss National Bank was created in 1906 and obtained a monopoly of the issue of bank-notes in 1910. It has remained a private concern with more than 50 per cent of its shares held by public-law corporations and institutions, and the rest by private shareholders. A new law regulating mutual funds was passed in 1967 by which control was introduced to correct unsound developments which had taken place in this sector. Foreign mutual funds which sell their shares in Switzerland now require a Swiss representative bank and must conform to the demands of the new law.

Linked with banking is the insurance sector, which is an integral and vital element in the Swiss financial structure. It collects some 10,000 million Swiss francs annually in premiums and contributions, to which a considerable income from its substantial international activities must be added. Financial and industrial holding companies have quadrupled in the last 12 years and their capital now amounts to some 8,000 million Swiss francs. The Zürich Stock Exchange ranks as one of the most important in Europe in terms of value and total transactions. Foreign securities, particularly American, represent more than 25 per cent of the approximately 1,000 issues quoted, a proportion which is probably not exceeded by any other market.

TURKEY

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The European and Asian parts of the Republic of Turkey (Thrace and Anatolia, respectively) are separated by the Straits of the Bosphorus which link the Black Sea and the Mediterranean. Most of Turkey lies in Asia, the vast Anatolian peninsula being bordered to the east by the U.S.S.R. and Iran and to the south by Iraq and Syria. The small European part of the country abuts upon Greece and Bulgaria. In the Asian interior the climate is one of great extremes. On the Mediterranean coast it is more equable with mild winters and warm summers. The principal language is Turkish, Kurdish and Arabic being spoken along the frontiers of Iraq and Syria. In 1928 the Arabic characters of the written language were superseded by Western-style script. Islam is the religion of 98.2 per cent of the population. The national flag (proportions 3 by 2) consists of a white crescent and five-pointed star on a red background. The capital is Ankara.

Recent History

The Republic of Turkey was declared in 1923 and, under the leadership of Kemal Atatürk, made great progress away from the traditions of the Ottoman Empire and towards European modernity. Atatürk created a secular state which looked to Europe for its institutions and technology, based on the principles of republicanism, nationalism, populism and state control. Neutral during the Second World War, Turkey was driven by Soviet threats into joining NATO in 1952 and CENTO in 1955. Turkey belongs to the Council of Europe, and has established links with the EEC.

In May 1960 a military coup overthrew the government of Adnan Menderes, and political activities were suspended until January 1961. A new constitution was approved by referendum in June and took effect in October 1961. From 1961 to 1965 İsmet İnönü led a succession of coalition governments. The elections of 1965 brought the Justice Party to power, with Süleyman Demirel, İnönü's successor, as Prime Minister. This conservative government lasted until March 1971, when a wave of strikes and student and labour unrest caused the armed forces to demand their resignation. "Guided democracy", under military supervision, continued until October 1973, with a succession of right-wing cabinets, martial law and the rigorous suppression of all left-wing activities. The return to civilian rule began when the Grand National Assembly chose Fahri Korutürk as President, in preference to a candidate backed by the armed forces. During 1973 the senior military commanders were replaced by non-political officers, and military participation in government was ended by the elections of October 1973. No party had a majority sufficient to form a government, and negotiations on the formation of a coalition continued until January 1974 when Bülent Ecevit, the Republican People's Party (RPP) leader, became Prime Minister, having negotiated a coalition with the National Salvation Party (NSP). The discovery of oil in the Aegean led to a dispute with Greece over the extent of territorial rights, which was overshadowed in July 1974 by the Greek-backed coup in Cyprus (q.v.) when the Turkish army invaded northern Cyprus.

In September 1974 Ecevit resigned the premiership and at the President's invitation Professor Sadi İrmak formed a minority government in November. This caretaker administration survived until March 1975, when Süleyman Demirel formed a Nationalist Front coalition government, comprising members of the Justice, National Salvation, Republican Reliance and National Action Parties.

As a result of mounting political violence and the inability of the coalition to take decisive action to deal with the many problems facing Turkey, Demirel called an early general election for June 1977. The election results gave no party an overall majority in the National Assembly, but the RPP was the largest single party and Ecevit was invited to form a Government. However, his minority Government was defeated in a vote of no confidence in July and Demirel was asked to return as Prime Minister. A coalition Government, almost identical to the former Nationalist Front, was approved by the President and its programme given a vote of confidence by the National Assembly in August. In December defections from the Justice Party left the coalition without an overall majority and the Government fell. Ecevit was designated Prime Minister and, in January 1978, formed a Government with support from the Republican Reliance and the Democratic Parties and independents.

Turkey's former close relations with the U.S.A. and Western Europe were under strain in 1975 and 1976. In 1975 an arms embargo, imposed by the U.S.A. on Turkey as a result of its invasion of Cyprus, led to the closure of all U.S. bases in Turkey by the Demirel Government. During 1976, in spite of the partial lifting of the embargo and the signing of a new arms agreement in March 1976, relations between the two countries remained strained and Turkey refused to reopen the bases until the U.S. Congress would ratify the new agreement. Relations with Greece saw little improvement by the end of 1977; the Cyprus question remained unresolved and talks between the two countries on offshore rights in the Aegean ran into difficulties in May 1977. The progress of Greece's application for full membership of the EEC in 1977 resulted in a deterioration of Turkey's relations with the Community.

Government

Turkey is a democratic republic. Legislative power is vested in the bicameral Grand National Assembly, comprising the Senate with 184 members, 150 of whom are elected by universal suffrage for staggered six-year terms, and the National Assembly, with 450 members elected by universal adult suffrage for four years. The Grand National Assembly elects one of its members to be President of the Republic for a seven-year term. The President appoints the Prime Minister from among the members of the legislature, giving full consideration to the party with the majority. The Prime Minister appoints the Council of Ministers. The President has the power of veto but can be over-ruled by a majority decision of the Assembly. Turkey is composed of 67 provinces.

Defence

Turkey joined the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) in 1952. Military service in the army lasts for twenty months. The total strength of the armed forces in 1977 was 465,000: army of 375,000, navy of 43,000 and air force of 47,000; there is a gendarmerie numbering 75,000. Defence expenditure estimates for 1977/78 amounted to TL46,420 million (U.S. $2,650 m.).

Economic Affairs

Agriculture, the most important sector of the Turkish economy, employed 64 per cent of the working population in 1975 and accounted for 63 per cent of total export earnings and 29 per cent of the G.N.P. in 1975. Government investment policy concentrates on industry rather than agriculture, and while industrial crops such as cotton and tobacco have gained in importance, wheat and rice have had to be imported as domestic production falls behind demand. With the exception of cotton, agriculture remains largely underdeveloped, as do livestock production and forestry.

Turkey's production of chromium, copper and borax is internationally significant, and coal and bauxite are also mined. Mining is dominated by state-owned companies, and the Government plans considerable investments in exploration and exploitation. Petroleum production in 1976 amounted to an estimated 2.6 million tons, about 18 per cent of Turkey's domestic requirements. Cheap locally available cotton and low wages have made textiles Turkey's biggest industrial growth sector, despite low labour productivity. The chemical industry is another area of rapid expansion. The 1973-77 five-year plan placed emphasis on industrial development, with almost 45 per cent of the total investment allocated to the mining and manufacturing industries. Priority was given to providing a modern heavy industry base to promote export opportunities and import substitution. The plan aimed at achieving an average annual rate of growth in G.N.P. of 7.9 per cent. Up to 1976 an average rate of 6.9 per cent had been realized and in 1976 a rate of 8.1 per cent was achieved in line with plan targets. Growth in the industrial sector was below the planned level of 11.2 per cent at 10.3 per cent. However, a growth in agricultural production of 9.2 per cent was well above the planned 3.7 per cent. In the industrial sector mining and manufacturing production fell below plan targets while energy production exceeded them.

The demands of Turkey's economic development have resulted in a growing trade deficit which reached a record U.S. $3,337.5 million in 1975, falling slightly to $3,168.4 million in 1976. Heavy reliance is placed on remittances from Turkish workers abroad as a source of foreign exchange. The fall in the level of these remittances from $1,312 million in 1975 to $983 million in 1976, combined with an increase in foreign debt servicing, resulted in an increase in the current account deficit from $1,880 million in 1975 to $2,286 million in 1976. These factors contributed to serious demands being made on Turkey's foreign currency reserves in the first half of 1977, necessitating the imposition of severe restrictions on imports and the devaluation of the Turkish lira.

Massive emigration helps to disguise the problem of unemployment in a country where the population is growing annually by about 2.6 per cent. By April 1977 there were over three million unemployed. Remittances from Turks abroad and drastic rises in export prices for agricultural products, particularly cotton, contributed to inflation in 1974 and 1975. Wholesale prices rose 10.4 per cent in the year to December 1975 and in the year to December 1976, 19.1 per cent. Retail prices rose by 25.3 per cent in the year to June 1977.

Transport and Communications

The length of railway track in 1976 was 10,125 km. The total length of the highway network is approximately 140,000 km. (1976). The Turkish Maritime Lines, a state corporation, operates passenger and cargo lines with a fleet of 19 ships and 68 ferries. Private shipping companies operate tankers and cargo vessels totalling 488,062 tons. Turkish Airlines have an internal air service and flights to the Middle East and all the major cities in Europe.

Social Welfare

Social insurance for wage-earners is provided by the Workers' Social Insurance Institution of the Ministry of Labour. In 1972, 1,443,600 workers and employees were covered by social insurance, including free medical care. It is planned to extend socialized health services to the whole population.

Education

Education has made big advances in Turkey since before the war. Although literacy is now estimated at 65 per cent in towns, it is still much lower in the villages. Education is compulsory between the ages of 7 and 12. All state education up to University or Higher Institute level is co-educational and free. The number of primary schools reached 42,009 in 1975/76, compared with 12,511 in 1950, and in 1975/76 over 5.5 million children were attending primary schools. The six years of secondary education are divided into two stages. The Middle School period lasts for three years after which students may proceed to the Lycées for a further three years. A state examination must be passed by those students wishing to proceed to University or to an Institute of Higher Education. There are 18 universities. Budget expenditure for education was set at TL21,662 million for 1976/77.

Tourism

Tourism is being stimulated by the Government, and the industry is now experiencing a remarkable growth. 1,676,000 tourists visited Turkey in 1976.

Visas are not required, for stays up to three months, by nationals of the following countries: Australia, Austria, Barbados, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Fiji, Finland, France, The Gambia, the Federal Republic of Germany, Iceland, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Mauritius, Malta, Monaco, Morocco, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, the United Kingdom and the U.S.A.

Nationals of Afghanistan, the Republic of Korea, Portugal, Romania and Yugoslavia may stay for up to two months without a visa.

TURKEY

Sport

The most popular sport is football, and many teams have large followings. There is skiing in winter, and sailing, tennis and basketball are popular in summer. Wrestling is a traditional Turkish sport.

Public Holidays

1978: April 23rd (National Sovereignty and Children's Day), May 1st (Spring Day), May 18th (half day) and 19th (Youth and Sports Day), May 26th (half day) and 27th (Freedom and Constitution Day), August 30th (Victory Day), September 4th-6th (Şeker Bayram—End of Ramadan), October 28th (half day)-30th (Republic Day), November 11th-14th (Kurban Bayram—Feast of the Sacrifice).

1979: January 1st (New Year's Day).

Note: Between June 1947 and August 1960 the exchange rate was U.S. $1=2.80 liras (1 lira=35.71 U.S. cents). From August 1960 to August 1970 the rate was $1=9.00 liras (1 lira=11.11 U.S. cents). Between August 1970 and December 1971 the mid-point rate was $1=15.00 liras (1 lira=6.67 U.S. cents), with an export (buying) rate of $1=14.85 liras and an import (selling) rate of $1=15.15 liras. From December 1971 to May 1974 the export rate was $1=14.00 liras (1 lira=7.14 U.S. cents) and the import rate was $1=14.30 liras. Since May 1974 the rates have been adjusted frequently. The average mid-point rate (liras per U.S. $) was 13.927 in 1974; 14.442 in 1975; 16.053 in 1976. In terms of sterling, the exchange rate between November 1967 and August 1970 was £1=21.60 liras; from August 1970 to December 1971 the mid-point rate was £1=36.00 liras; from December 1971 to June 1972 the export rate was £1=36.48 liras and the import rate £1=37.26 liras. Since June 1972, when sterling was allowed to "float", the exchange rates have been adjusted frequently.

THE CONSTITUTION

The main provisions of the Constitution promulgated on October 25th, 1961 are summarized below.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

The Turkish Republic is a nationalistic, democratic, secular and social State governed by the rule of law, based on human rights. The State is an indivisible whole comprising the territory and people. Its official language is Turkish. Its capital is the city of Ankara.

Sovereignty is vested in the nation without reservation and condition. Legislative power is vested in the Turkish Grand National Assembly. The right to exercise such sovereignty is not delegated to any one person, group or class.

The executive function is exercised by the President of the Republic and the Council of Ministers within the framework of law.

Judicial power is exercised by independent courts on behalf of the Turkish Nation. Laws may not be in conflict with the Constitution.

The provision of the Constitution establishing the form of the State as a republic shall not be amended.

RIGHTS OF INDIVIDUALS

Every individual is entitled, in virtue of his existence as a human being, to fundamental rights and freedoms, which cannot be usurped, transferred or relinquished. All individuals are equal before the law irrespective of language, race, sex, political opinion, philosophical views, or religion or religious sect. There are provisions regulating the status of aliens, personal immunities, freedom of communication, travel, residence, thought, belief, press and publications.

All citizens have the right to controvert and rebut, to congregate, demonstrate and form associations.

GRAND NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

The Grand National Assembly of Turkey is composed of the National Assembly and the Senate of the Republic. The two bodies meet in joint session in such instances as are provided in the Constitution. The Grand National Assembly is empowered to enact, amend and repeal laws, to debate and adopt the bills on the State budget and final accounts, to pass resolutions in regard to minting currency, proclaiming pardons and amnesties, and to the carrying out of definitive death sentences passed by courts.

National Assembly

The National Assembly is composed of 450 deputies elected by direct general ballot. Elections are held every four years. The Assembly may hold new elections before the end of the four-year period.

The Senate

The Senate is composed of 150 members elected by general ballot and 15 members appointed by the President of the Republic. There are also a number of Life Senators. The term of office is six years. One-third of members are re-elected every two years.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE REPUBLIC

The President of the Republic is the Head of the State. In this capacity he represents the Turkish Republic and the integrity of the Turkish Nation.

TURKEY

The President is elected for a term of seven years from among those members of the Grand National Assembly who have completed their fortieth year and received higher education; election is by secret ballot, and by a two-thirds majority of the plenary session. In case this majority is not obtained in the first two ballots, an absolute majority is sufficient. The President is not eligible for re-election.

The President elect must dissociate himself from his party, and his status as a regular member of the Grand National Assembly is terminated.

The President presides over the Council of Ministers whenever he deems it necessary, dispatches the representatives of the Turkish State to foreign states, receives the representatives of foreign states, ratifies and promulgates international conventions and treaties and may commute or pardon on grounds of chronic illness, infirmity or old age the sentences of convicted individuals. The President of the Republic is not accountable for his actions connected with his duties.

All decrees emanating from the President must be signed by the Prime Minister and the relevant Ministers. The Prime Minister and the Ministers concerned are responsible for the enforcement of these decrees.

The President may be impeached for high treason upon the proposal of one-third of the plenary session of the Turkish Grand National Assembly, and conviction of high treason requires the vote of at least a two-thirds majority of the joint plenary session of both legislative bodies.

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS

The Council of Ministers consists of the Prime Minister and the Ministers. The Prime Minister is designated by the President from among the members of the Grand National Assembly. The ministers are nominated by the Prime Minister and appointed by the President from among the members of the Grand National Assembly, or from among those qualified for election as deputies.

As head of the Council of Ministers, the Prime Minister promotes co-operation among the Ministries, and supervises the implementation of the Government's general policy. The members of the Council of Ministers are jointly and equally responsible for the manner in which this policy is implemented. Each Minister is responsible for the operations in his field of authority and for the acts and activities of his subordinates. The Ministers are subject to the same immunities and liabilities as the members of the Turkish Grand National Assembly.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

The office of the Commander-in-Chief is integrated in spirit in the Turkish Grand National Assembly and is represented by the President of the Republic.

The Council of Ministers is responsible to the Grand National Assembly for ensuring national security and preparing the armed forces for war. The Chief of the General Staff is the Commander of the armed forces. The Chief of the General Staff is appointed by the President of the Republic upon his nomination by the Council of Ministers, and his duties and powers are regulated by law. The Chief of the General Staff is responsible to the Prime Minister in the exercise of his duties and powers.

The National Security Council consists of the Ministers as provided by law, the Chief of the General Staff, and representatives of the armed forces. It is presided over by the President of the Republic and, in his absence, by the Prime Minister.

THE JUDICIARY

Judges are independent in the discharge of their duties and pass judgment in accordance with the Constitution, law, justice and their personal convictions. No organ, office, agency or individual may give orders or instructions to courts or judges in connection with the discharge of their judicial duty, send them circulars or make recommendations or suggestions. No questions may be raised, debates held, or statements issued in legislative bodies in connection with the discharge of judicial power concerning a case on trial. Legislative and executive organs, and the administration are under obligation to comply with ruling of the courts. Such organs and the administration may in no manner whatsoever alter court rulings or delay their execution.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Until the foundation of the new Turkish Republic, a large part of the Turkish civil law—the laws affecting the family, inheritance, property, obligations, etc.—was based on the Koran, and this holy law was administered by special religious (Sharia) courts. The legal reform of 1926 was not only a process of secularization, but also a radical change of the legal system. The Swiss Civil Code and the Code of Obligation, the Italian Penal Code, and the Neuchâtel (Cantonal) Code of Civil Procedure were adopted and modified to fit Turkish customs and traditions.

Constitutional Court: Consists of fifteen regular and five alternate members. Reviews the constitutionality of laws passed by the Turkish Grand National Assembly. Sits as a High Council empowered to try senior members of state. The rulings of the Constitutional Court are final. Decisions of the Court are published immediately in the Official Gazette, and shall be binding on the legislative, executive, and judicial organs of the State.

Court of Cassation: The court of the last instance for reviewing the decisions and verdicts rendered by courts of law. It has original and final jurisdiction in specific cases defined by law. Members are elected by the Supreme Council of Judges.

Council of State: An administrative court of the first instance in matters not referred by law to other administrative courts, and an administrative court of the last instance in general. Hears and settles administrative disputes and expresses opinions on draft laws submitted by the Council of Ministers.

High Military Administrative Court: A military court for the judicial control of administrative acts concerning military personnel.

Military Court of Cassation: A court of the last instance to review decisions and verdicts rendered by military courts.

Court of Jurisdictional Disputes: Settles disputes among civil, administrative and military courts arising from disagreements on jurisdictional matters and verdicts.

Supreme Council of Judges: Consists of eighteen regular and five alternate members. Decides all personnel matters relating to judges.

Public Prosecutor: The law shall make provision for the tenure of public prosecutors and attorneys of the Council of State and their functions.

The Chief Prosecutor of the Republic, the Chief Attorney of the Council of State and the Chief Prosecutor of the Military Court of Cassation are subject to the provisions applicable to judges of higher courts.

Military Trial: Military trials are conducted by military and disciplinary courts. These courts are entitled to try the military offences of military personnel and those offences committed against military personnel or in military areas, or offences connected with military service and duties. Military courts may try non-military persons only for military offences prescribed by special laws.

RELIGION

ISLAM

Diyanet İşleri Reisi (Head of the Muslim Faith in Turkey): SÜLEYMAN ATEŞ (ad interim).

Over 98 per cent of the Turkish people are Muslims, mainly Sunnis. Under the Republic, from 1923 onwards, action was taken to reduce the influence of religion on state affairs: e.g., its association with the schools was curtailed, mosques and churches were sometimes closed and facilities denied to their adherents, both Muslim and Christian. The Muslim faith was also disestablished. After 1950 there was a change, and religious life was to a certain extent revived. The revolution of 1960 brought about a return to the more secular republic of Atatürk but recent Governments have once again established links between church and state.

THE PRESS

Under the Constitution of 1961, "the press is free within the limits of the law". Provision is made for recourse to a constitutional court in issues involving laws affecting the Press.

It is almost impossible to produce a correct list of the numerous provincial newspapers, which tend to be small in circulation and rather short-lived. In all, there are about 370 daily papers, 260 weeklies and magazines, over 200 fortnightly and monthly and about 25 quarterly, six-monthly and annually published magazines. The estimated total circulation of all the daily papers is 1,353,000.

Almost all Istanbul papers are also printed in Ankara and Izmir on the same day, and some in Adana. Among the most serious and influential papers are the dailies Milliyet and Cumhuriyet. Akbaba is noted for its political satire. The most popular dailies are the Istanbul papers Hürriyet, Milliyet, Tercüman, Son Havadis, Günaydın and Cumhuriyet; Yeni Asir, published in Izmir, is the best selling quality daily of the Aegean region. A major popular weekly is the illustrated magazine Hayat.

FINANCE

The Central Bank of the Republic of Turkey was originally founded in 1931, and constituted in its present form in 1970. The Central Bank is the bank of issue and is also responsible for the execution of monetary and credit policies, the regulation of the foreign and domestic value of the Turkish lira jointly with the Government, and the supervision of the credit system.

There are some 41 other banks functioning in Turkey. Thirteen were created by special laws to fulfil specialized services for particular industries. The Sümerbank directs the operation of a number of state-owned factories; Etibank operates primarily in the extractive industries and electric power industries; the Agricultural Bank makes loans for agriculture; the Maritime Bank operates government-owned port facilities, the merchant marine and its own fleet of ships; the Real Estate Credit Bank participates in industrial undertakings and the construction of all types of building. Other specialized banks deal with tourism, municipalities and mortgages, etc.

The largest of the private sector Turkish banks is the Türkiye İş Bankası which operates over 700 branches.

The private banks borrow at medium- and long-term mainly from the State Investment Bank.

There are several other credit institutions in Turkey, including the Industrial Development Bank of Turkey, which encourages private investment in industry by acting as underwriter in the issue of share capital. The Türkiye Sınai Kalkınma Bankası founded in 1950 with the assistance of the World Bank to stimulate industrial growth in the private sector.

There are numerous co-operative organizations, and in the rural areas there are Agricultural Sale Co-operatives and Agricultural Co-operatives. There are also a number of savings institutions.

UNION OF SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLICS

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics extends from the Baltic to the Pacific Ocean, and for 3,000 miles from north to south. It is the largest country in the world. Its western frontier, running from the Arctic Ocean in the north to the Black Sea in the south, is bordered by Norway, Finland, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Romania. The southern frontier, running from west to east, is bordered by Turkey, Iran, Afghanistan, China, Mongolia and Korea. The climate of this area is continental and has extreme variations. In winter, temperatures can fall to -70°C (-94°F) in north-east Siberia, and in summer it can reach 50°C (122°F) in Central Asia, part of which is desert. Some 120 languages are spoken in the U.S.S.R.; Russian is the mother tongue of 58 per cent of the people. The Russian Orthodox faith is the traditional belief of Russians and there are other Christian and also Jewish and Muslim communities. The national flag (proportions 2 by 1) is red with a gold hammer and sickle surmounted by a five-pointed gold-edged red star in the upper left part. The capital is Moscow.

Recent History

The Second World War inflicted immense losses upon the Soviet Union in damage to industry, agriculture and population. About 20 million Soviet citizens were killed. At the end of the war the Soviet Union made certain territorial gains, most notably the annexation of part of East Prussia as war reparation.

During the post-war years 1948-49 the Soviet Union played a decisive role in the establishment of governments dominated by communists in a number of European and Asian countries.

Much of the devastation and destruction of the War had disappeared by the time of Stalin's death in 1953, and due to the Five-Year Plans the economy, particularly in the field of heavy industry, had made considerable progress. In September 1953, Nikita Khrushchev was nominated First Secretary of the Communist Party by the Central Committee, and in February 1958 he became Chairman of the Council of Ministers. Under his leadership, certain reforms were introduced into the political life of the Soviet Union, and the principle of peaceful coexistence with the West was developed. However, relations with the People's Republic of China deteriorated sharply from the early 1960s. In 1964 Khrushchev was replaced as Chairman of the Council of Ministers by Alexei Kosygin and as First (subsequently General) Secretary of the Communist Party Central Committee by Leonid Brezhnev.

The Soviet Union plays a leading part in the economic and military groupings of the East European socialist countries, the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (COMECON) and the Warsaw Treaty organization. It has intervened in political crises in several of the Eastern European countries, notably in Hungary in 1956 and Czechoslovakia in 1968.

From the early 1970s relations with Western countries began to improve and by 1975 trade with the West accounted for almost a third of Soviet trade. Slowly improving relations with the U.S.A. stagnated after January 1975 when the Soviet Union repudiated a trade agreement because the U.S.A. had made the relaxation of restrictions on emigration, particularly for Jews, a condition for economic concessions. However, heavy Soviet buying of grain later boosted trade.

During the first half of the 1970s Soviet influence in the Middle East declined, but its influence and involvement in southern Africa increased considerably, notably with its support of the successful faction bidding for power in the former Portuguese colonies of Angola and Mozambique.

Hostility towards China continued in the early 1970s, and the death in 1976 of China's leader, Chairman Mao Tse-tung, did not result in the expected improvement in relations. Elsewhere in Asia, Soviet influence increased with the withdrawal of the U.S.A. from, particularly, Indo-China.

In May 1977 Nikolai Podgorny was removed from the Politburo of the Communist Party, and replaced as Chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet (Head of State) by Leonid Brezhnev, who retained the post of General Secretary of the Party Central Committee. The creation of the post of First Vice-President of the Presidium (a provision of the new constitution, adopted in October) further enhanced Brezhnev's position.

During the first half of the 1970s the economy failed to improve as forecast, particularly in agriculture, the most significant sector, and in 1975 a drastic failure of the harvest severely hampered the economy. The Five-Year Plan for 1976-80 reflected these failures with more modest targets and a shift of resources to agriculture.

Government

Under the 1977 Constitution, the Soviet Union is formally a federal state comprising 15 Union (constituent) Republics of equal status, voluntarily linked and having the right to secede. Some Union Republics contain Autonomous Republics and Autonomous Regions. The Russian Soviet Federative Socialist Republic (R.S.F.S.R.) also includes 10 National Areas.

The highest organ of state power is the bicameral legislature, the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., comprising the Soviet (Council) of the Union, with 767 members elected from constituencies, and the Soviet of Nationalities, with 750 members (32 from each of the Union Republics; 11 from each of the 20 Autonomous Republics; five from each of the eight Autonomous Regions; one from each of the 10 National Areas). Both houses have equal rights and powers and their terms run concurrently. Members are directly elected (from a single list of candidates) by universal adult suffrage and serve four-year terms. At a joint session the members elect the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet (39 members) to be the legislature's permanent organ. The Chairman of the Presidium is the country's Head of State. The Supreme Soviet also appoints the Council of Ministers, headed by a Chairman, to form the executive and administrative branch of government, responsible to the Supreme Soviet.

Each of the 15 Union Republics has a constitution and state structure on the same pattern as the central government, with a unicameral Supreme Soviet and a Council of Ministers to deal with internal affairs.

Political power is held by the highly centralized Communist Party of the Soviet Union (CPSU), described in the constitution as "the leading and guiding force of Soviet society". The CPSU is the only legal party, has an absolute monopoly of power in all political affairs and controls government at all levels. The CPSU's highest authority is the Party Congress, which should be convened every five years. The Congress elects the Central Committee (287 full members and 139 alternate members were chosen in March 1976) which supervises Party work and directs state policy. The Committee, which meets twice a year, elects a Political Bureau (Politburo), which is the Party's most powerful policy-making body. In 1977 the Politburo had 14 full members (including the General Secretary) and six candidate members.

Apart from the R.S.F.S.R., each Union Republic has its own Communist Party, with a Central Committee led by a First Secretary, but these parties are subsidiary to, and subject to direction from, the CPSU.

Defence

The Soviet Union is a nuclear power armed with long-range rockets and is a member of the Warsaw Pact Alliance. Military service is compulsory and lasts for two years in the army and air force and three years in the navy and in the border force. The total strength of the armed forces was estimated at 3,675,000 in 1977: army 1,825,000, air force 475,000, navy 450,000 (including naval air force), and air defence forces of 550,000. Paramilitary forces number about 450,000, made up of 250,000 security troops and 200,000 border troops. Estimated defence expenditure for 1976 was between 52,000 million and 84,000 million roubles. Army divisions are stationed in Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland and the German Democratic Republic.

Economic Affairs

The U.S.S.R. has the largest and strongest economy in the world after the U.S.A. and is the world leader in petroleum production, coal mining, iron ore, mineral fertilizers, cement and steel.

The economy is centrally planned, based on state ownership, with production targets fitted into the framework of a development plan. Between 1919 and 1928 plans were drawn up annually, until in 1929 Stalin introduced the first Five-Year Plan.

The eighth Five-Year Plan (1966-70) was successfully completed and in many cases, particularly in the oil, non-ferrous metal, automation and mineral industries, targets were exceeded. National income rose by 41 per cent between 1966 and 1970, and industrial production by 50 per cent; real incomes increased by a third. During the 1971-75 Plan there was growth in most sectors except agriculture, but the objectives of the Plan as established in 1971 were not achieved in growth of national income, industrial production, consumer goods and real incomes.

The tenth Five-Year Plan (1976-80) and the targets for 1976 were more modest and realistic; the most significant feature of the Five-Year Plan was a shift of resources to agriculture, with over a quarter of investment during the five years allocated to agriculture. The unfulfilled promise of the 1971-75 Plan that consumer goods' production would increase faster than that of producer goods was not repeated. The main goals of the tenth Plan were a growth of 24 to 28 per cent in national income, compared with a target of 39 and an achievement of 29 per cent for 1971-75; a 35 to 39 per cent increase in industrial production, compared with a 42 per cent target and 37 per cent achievement for 1971-75; 30 to 32 per cent growth in consumer goods, compared with 48.6 and 37 per cent, and a 20 to 22 per cent increase in real incomes, compared with a 30 per cent goal for the ninth Plan.

Heavy industry accounts for more than two-thirds of industrial production. Industry accounts for more than 50 per cent of the national income. In 1975 the U.S.S.R. accounted for about 20 per cent of the world's gross industrial output. There are extensive deposits of iron ore, oil, peat, natural gas and coal. Production of non-ferrous metals includes aluminium, nickel, manganese, lead, copper and zinc. More than 700 million metric tons of coal (including peat) were mined in 1976. The coal basins of the Donetsk near the Black Sea, Kuznetsk in Siberia and Karaganda in Kazakhstan are the main sources. In 1974 the Soviet Union superseded the U.S.A. as the world's leading petroleum producer. Petroleum is produced in the Trans-Caucasian Republic of Azerbaijan, the Western Urals, the Volga region, East and West Siberia, in the south of the Central Asian Republics, Byelorussia and the Ukraine. More than 520 million tons of petroleum were extracted in 1976, almost 20 per cent of world production and a 37 per cent increase since 1971. Petroleum production was one of the few items to fulfil its objectives for 1975 and for the 1971-75 Plan.

The country is the second greatest producer of electrical power and in 1976 generated 1,111,000 million kWh. of electricity. One-third of the total land area is forest, two-thirds of it in Siberia and the far east; the Soviet Union is the world's leading producer of roundwood and sawnwood. The textile and consumer goods industry have been greatly increased in recent years.

Agriculture is large-scale and mechanized, with two main types of farm. The collective farms work slightly more than half of the cultivable land and distribute profits to members. The state farms are owned and operated by the state, the employees receiving a wage. At the end of 1976 there were 27,900 collective farms and 19,636 state farms. In 1976 agricultural enterprises and farms used more than 1,000 million hectares of land, of which 604.2 million hectares were cultivated. The development of the Virgin Lands of West Siberia and Northern Kazakhstan has significantly increased production. The chief grain crops are wheat, rye, oats and maize; other crops are sugar beet, hemp, cotton and oil seeds.

In 1975 the grain harvest (cereals and pulses) was disastrously small; at 140 million metric tons it was less than two-thirds the target and a fall of nearly 40 per cent from the 1973 harvest. Substantial grain imports from the U.S.A., Canada and Australia considerably worsened the trade deficit and caused widespread social and political repercussions. The 1976 harvest was a record one of 224 million tons, but in 1977 the crop fell to 194 million tons.

Trade inside the U.S.S.R. is conducted by state trading establishments, consumers' co-operatives and collective farm markets. Foreign trade is a state monopoly. In 1975 foreign trade increased by 26 per cent over 1974 and showed an overall deficit of 2,637 million roubles; however, the deficit with western countries was 3,564 million roubles, of which a significant sum was accounted for by grain. Trade went up by 10 per cent in 1976, and the overall deficit dropped to 740 million roubles. The deficit with western countries was reduced to 2,992 million roubles. The 1976-80 Five-Year Plan envisaged an increase in trade with the West, which accounted for 32.9 per cent of total Soviet trade in 1976.

Transport and Communications

The vastness of the Soviet Union's territory and the rapid growth of its economy make considerable demands on the transport system. Railway tracks cover 138,500 km. and carry most goods and passenger traffic. 39,700 km. of railway track are electrified, more than one-third of the world's electrified railways. New lines are being built in Siberia, Kazakhstan and Central Asia. By the end of 1976 the total length of roads was 1,405,600 km., including 689,700 km. of hard surface roads. A project is under way for the construction of a dense network of modern hard surface roads. There are about 145,000 km. of inland waterways which play an important role in transporting bulk cargo and timber. Canals navigable by large vessels link the White Sea with the Baltic through the River Volga and the Rivers Moscow and Don with the Caspian, Azov and Black Seas. In 1976 river vessels carried about 145 million passengers. The Soviet merchant marine totalled over 22 million gross tons in 1977, the sixth largest in the world's fleets of ocean vessels. There are 27 major ports, the most important being Leningrad, Arkhangelsk, Riga, Murmansk, Odessa, Baku and Vladivostok. Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, maintains both internal and external services, covering over 800,000 km. of air routes with flights to more than 75 countries. In 1976 there were 58,600 km. of pipelines transporting over 532 million tons of oil, and 130,500 km. of pipelines pumping 309,500 million cu.m. of natural gas.

Social Welfare

In 1977 the State allocated 37,100 million roubles for social insurance and security. Apart from a complete range of social security benefits (disability pensions, loss of breadwinner, student grants, maternity benefits), pensions are paid to retired men at 60 and women at 55 and average 60-70 per cent of their salary prior to retirement. Employees in enterprises where the work conditions are arduous may receive pensions five or ten years earlier than is the norm. In 1977 there were 46 million people receiving retirement, disablement or army pensions in the U.S.S.R. A new social security scheme for old and disabled collective farm workers has been introduced. The centralized fund of the scheme is made up of deductions from the farmers' wages made by the collective farm, and of allocations from the state budget.

There is a streamlined system of public health services providing medical aid for the entire population. The public health services are supervised by the Ministry of Public Health and the Ministries of Public Health of the Union and Autonomous Republics, through regional (territorial), district, and city Boards of Health, under the corresponding Soviets of Working People's Deputies. All medical services and treatment are given free of charge, as are drugs and medicines in hospitals. In 1977 state allocations for public health totalled over 11,900 million roubles. The U.S.S.R. has a total of more than 36,600 clinics of various kinds. Public health institutions (hospitals, special clinics, maternity health centres, etc.) administer free services. By early 1977 there were 119 hospital beds per 10,000 of the population. The number of doctors totalled 862,000 (33.4 per 10,000 of the population). In addition to these hospitals there is a large network of sanatoria and holiday homes, the majority of which come under the jurisdiction of the trade unions. Accommodation for children, and in tuberculosis sanatoria, is free of charge. Working people are generally charged a nominal fee—usually about 30 per cent of the cost. Expectant mothers receive payment for their pre-natal and post-natal vacations (10 weeks before and after childbirth). Infant health centres and children's polyclinics have been set up as part of the public health system in order to watch over the health and proper physical development of all children. At the age of 16 years the child is transferred to an adult polyclinic. There are more than 500,000 hospital beds for children. Workers temporarily unable to work due to sickness receive a sick leave benefit on the basis of a certificate issued by the adult polyclinic. Disabled workers are either transferred to lighter work or given a disability pension. The 1971-75 Five-Year Plan increased spending on social welfare by 40 per cent, and the number of hospital beds to 3 million.

Rents are controlled and on average amount to 4.5 per cent of family expenditure.

Education

Before 1917, 70 per cent of the population was illiterate. According to the 1970 census approximately 48.3 per cent of the population had been or was being educated above primary school level, and 10,500,000 specialists were being educated above secondary school level.

All schools are state-run except a few colleges belonging to co-operatives and public organizations. There is compulsory free education for ten years from the age of seven. Children may attend national schools, where tuition is given in their native language, or Russian schools, according to their choice. Tuition is conducted in nearly 100 languages throughout the Soviet Union.

Secondary education is provided in either general secondary schools or polytechnic schools. In 1959 urban and rural vocational training schools were established, which admit children who have completed the eight-year school. Sixty to 70 per cent of the student's time is taken up with practical work although training also includes theoretical grounding. Upon graduation the successful student is given a job in his chosen trade. Young workers can continue their studies by attending evening schools of secondary general education. In addition to these types of secondary school, there are also specialized schools. These schools provide a general education together with the necessary instruction and practical skills of a profession. The course lasts from two to four years and the students receive a government grant. Graduates are given jobs in their chosen profession. There are also special schools for foreign languages where children start at the age of seven years, and schools for children gifted in subjects such as music.

Secondary education takes students up to university level. Entrance to university is by competitive examination, and the number of new places each year is laid down in the annual economic plan. Each Union Republic has universities and colleges with various forms of training. Tuition is free and students are provided with State stipends and other benefits. Each institution provides specialized education, both practical and theoretical. In the first years students are usually taught general subjects; specialization normally begins with the third year. The curriculum consists of compulsory general and special subjects and subjects which can be chosen by the students themselves. Undergraduate courses are completed when the student has presented his thesis and taken state examinations. Graduates are provided with jobs and living quarters upon completing their studies. About nine million specialists with higher and secondary education were trained in the period 1971-75.

In September 1977, there were over 45 million school children. The budget allocation for education, science and culture in 1977 was 33,800 million roubles.

Tourism

Although foreign tourism is not a major source of income in the Soviet economy, it does contribute a valuable amount of foreign currency. The state organization, Intourist, founded in 1929, assists foreign tourists in the U.S.S.R. and Soviet tourists going abroad. Tours are also organized by the Central Board of Tourism of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, the International Youth Tourism Bureau "Sputnik", the Union of Soviet Societies for Friendship and Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries, and other public bodies. Favourite tourist spots are Moscow, Kiev, Leningrad, Odessa, the Black Sea and Baltic resorts, the Urals and Altai mountains, and the ancient cities of Samarkand and Bukhara in central Asia. There were almost 4 million visitors to the U.S.S.R. in 1976. The Hotel Rossiya in Moscow is the largest in Europe, with accommodation for 5,500 guests.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter the U.S.S.R.: Bulgaria, the People's Republic of China, Czechoslovakia, the German Democratic Republic, Iran, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Mongolia, Poland, Romania and Viet-Nam.

Sport

Physical culture and sport, cultivated on a mass scale, are financed under the public health budget. Additional sums are allocated by local governmental organs, industrial enterprises, collective farms and trade unions. There are more than 219,000 organizations with a total membership of about 50 million. Soviet sports federations are members of 60 world and European organizations. In 1968 a Union Republican State Committee for Physical Culture and Sport was set up by the Government. Athletics, football, volleyball, ice hockey, skiing and many other sports are popular.

Space Research

In 1957 the U.S.S.R. launched the world's first space satellite, following it in 1961 with the first manned space flight. Since then the Soviet Union has carried out an extensive space exploration programme the emphasis of which has tended to rest on unmanned flights. The Luna spacecraft series has made studies of the moon and has succeeded in bringing back samples of lunar soil and rock. In November 1970 Luna 17 landed a vehicle on the moon—Lunokhod 1—equipped with television systems, an X-ray telescope and other scientific instruments. Lunokhod 2 landed on the moon in January 1973. Space probes have been sent to Mars and Venus and in October 1975 Venus 9 and 10 space probes landed on Venus and sent back pictures of the planet. Numerous earth satellites have been sent up in the Kosmos series. The Interkosmos series, run in conjunction with six other East European countries, was launched in 1969. Manned spaceflights have been carried out in the Vostok, Voskhod and Soyuz series, 39 Soviet cosmonauts having orbited the Earth by 1977. In September 1977 Salyut VI, one of a series of orbiting scientific space stations, was launched. By 1977 over 1,100 Soviet spacecraft had been launched.

The U.S.S.R., together with the U.S.A. and the U.K., signed an international treaty in January 1967 prohibiting the use of outer space for military purposes. The Soviet Union co-operated with France in the launch of technological and telecommunications satellites in April 1972, and signed agreements with the U.S.A. on the exchange of moon samples and on a project to link up Soyuz and Apollo craft in space, which was carried out successfully in July 1975.

Public Holidays

1978: March 8th (International Women's Day), May 1st, 2nd (May Day celebrations), May 9th (Victory Day), October 7th (Constitution Day), November 7th, 8th (October Revolution).

1979: January 1st (New Year's Day), February 23rd (Soviet Army Day).

* No recent data are available for the production of certain important commodities, e.g. basic organic chemicals, petroleum products and merchant ships. Also, no official figures have recently been published for the production of non-ferrous metals.

² After undergoing finishing processes.

³ Including sporting footwear (of all types) and orthopaedic shoes.

⁴ Tyres for passenger cars and commercial motor vehicles (excluding motor cycles).

⁵ Production of fertilizers is in terms of (a) nitrogen; (b) phosphoric acid; and (c) potassium oxide. The figures for nitrogenous fertilizers include an unspecified amount of technical nitrogen.

⁶ Gas coke and coke-oven coke (humidity 6 per cent).

⁷ Excluding the production of ferro-alloys in electric furnaces.

⁸ Estimated primary metal production (Source: Bureau of Mines, U.S. Department of the Interior).

¹⁰ Estimated primary metal production (Source: World Metal Statistics, London).

¹¹ Excluding industrial still cameras.

¹² Tractors of 10 horse-power and over, excluding industrial tractors and road tractors for tractor-trailer combinations.

¹³ Including extensions, restorations and conversions.

NATIONAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT PLAN, 1961-80

1. Increase industrial productivity by 300-350 per cent.
2. Total electrification of the country.
3. Expansion of the metals and fuels industries.
4. Comprehensive development of the chemical industry.
5. Development of automation.
6. Development of jet engineering.
7. Rationalization of the distribution of industry.
8. Entire electrification of agriculture.
9. Higher pay for better work and greater material incentives.
10. Higher efficiency on collective farms.

THE CONSTITUTION

(FUNDAMENTAL LAW)

(Adopted at the Seventh (Special) Session of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., Ninth Convocation, on October 7th, 1977.)

Preamble

The Great October Socialist Revolution, made by the workers and peasants of Russia under the leadership of the Communist Party headed by Lenin, overthrew capitalist and landowner rule, broke the fetters of oppression, established the dictatorship of the proletariat, and created the Soviet state, a new type of state, the basic instrument for defending the gains of the revolution and for building socialism and communism. Humanity thereby began the epoch-making turn from capitalism to socialism.

After achieving victory in the Civil War and repulsing imperialist intervention, the Soviet government carried through far-reaching social and economic transformations, and put an end once and for all to exploitation of man by man, antagonisms between classes, and strife between nationalities. The unification of the Soviet Republics in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics multiplied the forces and opportunities of the peoples of the country in the building of socialism. Social ownership of the means of production and genuine democracy for the working masses were established. For the first time in the history of mankind a socialist society was created.

The strength of socialism was vividly demonstrated by the immortal feat of the Soviet people and their Armed Forces in achieving their historic victory in the Great Patriotic War. This victory consolidated the influence and international standing of the Soviet Union and created new opportunities for growth of the forces of socialism, national liberation, democracy, and peace throughout the world.

Continuing their creative endeavours, the working people of the Soviet Union have ensured rapid, all-round development of the country and steady improvement of the socialist system. They have consolidated the alliance of the working class, collective-farm peasantry, and people's intelligentsia, and friendship of the nations and nationalities of the U.S.S.R. Socio-political and ideological unity of Soviet society, in which the working class is the leading force, has been achieved. The aims of the dictatorship of the proletariat having been fulfilled, the Soviet state has become a state of the whole people. The leading role of the Communist Party, the vanguard of all the people, has grown.

In the U.S.S.R. a developed socialist society has been built. At this stage, when socialism is developing on its own foundations, the creative forces of the new system and the advantages of the socialist way of life are becoming increasingly evident, and the working people are more and more widely enjoying the fruits of their great revolutionary gains.

It is a society in which powerful productive forces and progressive science and culture have been created, in which the well-being of the people is constantly rising, and more and more favourable conditions are being provided for the all-round development of the individual.

It is a society of mature socialist social relations, in which, on the basis of the drawing together of all classes and social strata and of the juridical and factual equality of all its nations and nationalities and their fraternal co-operation, a new historical community of people has been formed—the Soviet people.

It is a society of high organizational capacity, ideological commitment, and consciousness of the working people, who are patriots and internationalists.

It is a society in which the law of life is concern of all for the good of each and concern of each for the good of all.

It is a society of true democracy, the political system of which ensures effective management of all public affairs, ever more active participation of the working people in running the state, and the combining of citizens' real rights and freedoms with their obligations and responsibility to society.

Developed socialist society is a natural, logical stage on the road to communism.

The supreme goal of the Soviet state is the building of a classless communist society in which there will be public, communist self-government. The main aims of the people's socialist state are: to lay the material and technical foundation of communism, to perfect socialist social relations and transform them into communist relations, to mould the citizen of communist society, to raise the people's living and cultural standards, to safeguard the country's security, and to further the consolidation of peace and development of international co-operation.

The Soviet people, guided by the ideas of scientific communism and true to their revolutionary traditions, relying on the great social, economic, and political gains of socialism, striving for the further development of socialist democracy, taking into account the international position of the U.S.S.R. as part of the world system of socialism, and conscious of their internationalist responsibility, preserving continuity of the ideas and principles of the first Soviet Constitution of 1918, the 1924 Constitution of the U.S.S.R. and the 1936 Constitution of the U.S.S.R., hereby affirm the principles of the social structure and policy of the U.S.S.R., and define the rights, freedoms and obligations of citizens, and the principles of the organization of the socialist state of the whole people, and its aims, and proclaim these in this Constitution.

I. Principles of the Social Structure and Policy of the U.S.S.R.

CHAPTER I THE POLITICAL SYSTEM

Article 1

The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is a socialist state of the whole people, expressing the will and interests of the workers, peasants, and intelligentsia, the working people of all the nations and nationalities of the country.

Article 2

All power in the U.S.S.R. belongs to the people.

The people exercise state power through Soviets of People's Deputies, which constitute the political foundation of the U.S.S.R.

All other state bodies are under the control of, and accountable to, the Soviets of People's Deputies.

Article 3

The Soviet state is organized and functions on the principle of democratic centralism, namely the electiveness of all bodies of state authority from the lowest to the highest, their accountability to the people, and the obligation of lower bodies to observe the decisions of higher ones. Democratic centralism combines central leadership with local initiative and creative activity and with the responsibility of each state body and official for the work entrusted to them.

Article 4

The Soviet state and all its bodies function on the basis of socialist law, ensure the maintenance of law and order, and safeguard the interests of society and the rights and freedoms of citizens.

State organizations, public organizations and officials shall observe the Constitution of the U.S.S.R. and Soviet laws.

Article 5

Major matters of state shall be submitted to nationwide discussion and put to a popular vote (referendum).

Article 6

The leading and guiding force of Soviet society and the nucleus of its political system, of all state organizations and public organizations, is the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. The C.P.S.U. exists for the people and serves the people.

The Communist Party, armed with Marxism-Leninism, determines the general perspectives of the development of society and the course of the home and foreign policy of the U.S.S.R., directs the great constructive work of the Soviet people, and imparts a planned, systematic and theoretically substantiated character to their struggle for the victory of communism.

All party organizations shall function within the framework of the Constitution of the U.S.S.R.

Article 7

Trade unions, the All-Union Leninist Young Communist League, co-operatives, and other public organizations, participate, in accordance with the aims laid down in their rules, in managing state and public affairs, and in deciding political, economic, and social and cultural matters.

Article 8

Work collectives take part in discussing and deciding state and public affairs, in planning production and social development, in training and placing personnel, and in discussing and deciding matters pertaining to the management of enterprises and institutions, the improvement of working and living conditions, and the use of funds allocated both for developing production and for social and cultural purposes and financial incentives.

Work collectives promote socialist emulation, the spread of progressive methods of work, and the strengthening of production discipline, educate their members in the spirit of communist morality, and strive to enhance their political consciousness and raise their cultural level and skills and qualifications.

Article 9

The principal direction in the development of the political system of Soviet society is the extension of socialist democracy, namely ever broader participation of citizens in managing the affairs of society and the state, continuous improvement of the machinery of state, heightening of the activity of public organizations, strengthening of the system of people's control, consolidation of the legal foundations of the functioning of the state and of public life, greater openness and publicity, and constant responsiveness to public opinion.

CHAPTER 2 THE ECONOMIC SYSTEM

Article 10

The foundation of the economic system of the U.S.S.R. is socialist ownership of the means of production in the form of state property (belonging to all the people), and collective farm-and-co-operative property.

Socialist ownership also embraces the property of trade unions and other public organizations which they require to carry out their purposes under their rules.

The state protects socialist property and provides conditions for its growth.

No one has the right to use socialist property for personal gain or other selfish ends.

Article 11

State property, i.e. the common property of the Soviet people, is the principal form of socialist property.

The land, its minerals, waters, and forests are the exclusive property of the state. The state owns the basic means of production in industry, construction, and agriculture; means of transport and communication; the banks; the property of state-run trade organizations and public utilities, and other state-run undertakings;

most urban housing; and other property necessary for state purposes.

Article 12

The property of collective farms and other co-operative organizations, and of their joint undertakings, comprises the means of production and other assets which they require for the purposes laid down in their rules.

The land held by collective farms is secured to them for their free use in perpetuity.

The state promotes development of collective farm-and-co-operative property and its approximation to state property.

Collective farms, like other land users, are obliged to make effective and thrifty use of the land and to increase its fertility.

Article 13

Earned income forms the basis of the personal property of Soviet citizens. The personal property of citizens of the U.S.S.R. may include articles of everyday use, personal consumption and convenience, the implements and other objects of a small-holding, a house, and earned savings. The personal property of citizens and the right to inherit it are protected by the state.

Citizens may be granted the use of plots of land, in the manner prescribed by law, for a subsidiary small-holding (including the keeping of livestock and poultry), for fruit and vegetable growing or for building an individual dwelling. Citizens are required to make rational use of the land allotted to them. The state, and collective farms provide assistance to citizens in working their small-holdings.

Property owned or used by citizens shall not serve as a means of deriving unearned income or be employed to the detriment of the interests of society.

Article 14

The source of the growth of social wealth and of the well-being of the people, and of each individual, is the labour, free from exploitation, of Soviet people.

The state exercises control over the measure of labour and of consumption in accordance with the principle of socialism: "From each according to his ability, to each according to his work." It fixes the rate of taxation on taxable income.

Socially useful work and its results determine a person's status in society. By combining material and moral incentives and encouraging innovation and a creative attitude to work, the state helps transform labour into the prime vital need of every Soviet citizen.

Article 15

The supreme goal of social production under socialism is the fullest possible satisfaction of the people's growing material, and cultural and intellectual requirements.

Relying on the creative initiative of the working people, socialist emulation, and scientific and technological progress, and by improving the forms and methods of economic management, the state ensures growth of the productivity of labour, raising of the efficiency of production and of the quality of work, and dynamic, planned, proportionate development of the economy.

Article 16

The economy of the U.S.S.R. is an integral economic complex comprising all the elements of social production, distribution, and exchange on its territory.

The economy is managed on the basis of state plans for economic and social development, with due account of the sectoral and territorial principles, and by combining centralized direction with the managerial independence and initiative of individual and amalgamated enterprises and other organizations, for which active use is made of management accounting, profit, cost, and other economic levers and incentives.

Article 17

In the U.S.S.R., the law permits individual labour in handicrafts, farming, the provision of services for the public, and other forms of activity based exclusively on the personal work of individual citizens and members of their families. The state makes regulations for such work to ensure that it serves the interests of society.

Article 18

In the interests of the present and future generations, the necessary steps are taken in the U.S.S.R. to protect and make scientific, rational use of the land and its mineral and water resources, and the plant and animal kingdoms, to preserve the purity of air and water, ensure reproduction of natural wealth, and improve the human environment.

CHAPTER 3

SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT AND CULTURE

Article 19

The social basis of the U.S.S.R. is the unbreakable alliance of the workers, peasants, and intelligentsia.

The state helps enhance the social homogeneity of society, namely the elimination of class differences and of the essential distinctions between town and country and between mental and physical labour, and the all-round development and drawing together of all the nations and nationalities of the U.S.S.R.

Article 20

In accordance with the communist ideal—"The free development of each is the condition of the free development of all"—the state pursues the aim of giving citizens more and more real opportunities to apply their creative energies, abilities, and talents, and to develop their personalities in every way.

Article 21

The state concerns itself with improving working conditions, safety and labour protection and the scientific organization of work, and with reducing and ultimately eliminating all arduous physical labour through comprehensive mechanization and automation of production processes in all branches of the economy.

Article 22

A programme is being consistently implemented in the U.S.S.R. to convert agricultural work into a variety of industrial work, to extend the network of educational, cultural and medical institutions, and of trade, public catering, service and public utility facilities in rural localities, and transform hamlets and villages into well-planned and well-appointed settlements.

Article 23

The state pursues a steady policy of raising people's pay levels and real incomes through increase in productivity.

In order to satisfy the needs of Soviet people more fully social consumption funds are created. The state, with the broad participation of public organizations and work collectives, ensures the growth and just distribution of these funds.

Article 24

In the U.S.S.R., state systems of health protection, social security, trade and public catering, communal services and amenities, and public utilities, operate and are being extended.

The state encourages co-operatives and other public organizations to provide all types of services for the population. It encourages the development of mass physical culture and sport.

Article 25

In the U.S.S.R. there is a uniform system of public education, which is being constantly improved, that provides general education and vocational training for citizens, serves the communist education and intellectual and physical development of the youth, and trains them for work and social activity.

Article 26

In accordance with society's needs the state provides for planned development of science and the training of scientific personnel and organizes introduction of the results of research in the economy and other spheres of life.

Article 27

The state concerns itself with protecting, augmenting and making extensive use of society's cultural wealth for the moral and aesthetic education of the Soviet people, for raising their cultural level.

In the U.S.S.R. development of the professional, amateur and folk arts is encouraged in every way.

CHAPTER 4

FOREIGN POLICY

Article 28

The U.S.S.R. steadfastly pursues a Leninist policy of peace and stands for strengthening of the security of nations and broad international co-operation.

The foreign policy of the U.S.S.R. is aimed at ensuring international conditions favourable for building communism in the U.S.S.R., safeguarding the state interests of the Soviet Union, consolidating the positions of world socialism, supporting the struggle of peoples for national liberation and social progress, preventing wars of aggression, achieving universal and complete disarmament, and consistently implementing the principle of the peaceful coexistence of states with different social systems.

In the U.S.S.R. war propaganda is banned.

Article 29

The U.S.S.R.'s relations with other states are based on observance of the following principles: sovereign equality; mutual renunciation of the use or threat of force; inviolability of frontiers; territorial integrity of states; peaceful settlement of disputes; non-intervention in internal affairs; respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms; the equal rights of peoples and their right to decide their own destiny; co-operation among states; and fulfilment in good faith of obligations arising from the generally recognized principles and rules of international law, and from the international treaties signed by the U.S.S.R.

Article 30

The U.S.S.R., as part of the world system of socialism and of the socialist community, promotes and strengthens friendship, co-operation, and comradely mutual assistance with other socialist countries on the basis of the principle of socialist internationalism, and takes an active part in socialist economic integration and the socialist international division of labour.

CHAPTER 5

DEFENCE OF THE SOCIALIST MOTHERLAND

Article 31

Defence of the Socialist Motherland is one of the most important functions of the state, and is the concern of the whole people.

In order to defend the gains of socialism, the peaceful labour of the Soviet people, and the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the state, the U.S.S.R. maintains armed forces and has instituted universal military service.

The duty of the Armed Forces of the U.S.S.R. to the people is to provide reliable defence of the Socialist Motherland and to be in constant combat readiness, guaranteeing that any aggressor is instantly repulsed.

Article 32

The state ensures the security and defence capability of the country, and supplies the Armed Forces of the U.S.S.R. with everything necessary for that purpose.

The duties of state bodies, public organizations, officials, and citizens in regard to safeguarding the country's security and strengthening its defence capacity are defined by the legislation of the U.S.S.R.

II. The State and the Individual

CHAPTER 6

CITIZENSHIP OF THE U.S.S.R. EQUALITY OF CITIZENS' RIGHTS

Article 33

Uniform federal citizenship is established for the U.S.S.R. Every citizen of a Union Republic is a citizen of the U.S.S.R.

The grounds and procedure for acquiring or forfeiting Soviet citizenship are defined by the Law on Citizenship of the U.S.S.R.

When abroad, citizens of the U.S.S.R. enjoy the protection and assistance of the Soviet state.

Article 34

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. are equal before the law, without distinction of origin, social or property status, race or nationality, sex, education, language, attitude to religion, type and nature of occupation, domicile, or other status.

The equal rights of citizens of the U.S.S.R. are guaranteed in all fields of economic, political, social, and cultural life.

Article 35

Women and men have equal rights in the U.S.S.R.

Exercise of these rights is ensured by according women equal access with men to education and vocational and professional training, equal opportunities in employment, remuneration, and promotion, and in social and political, and cultural activity, and by special labour and health protection measures for women; by providing conditions enabling mothers to work; by legal protection, and material and moral support for mothers and children, including paid leaves and other benefits for expectant mothers and mothers, and gradual reduction of working time for mothers with small children.

Article 36

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. of different races and nationalities have equal rights.

Exercise of these rights is ensured by a policy of all-round development and drawing together of all the nations and nationalities of the U.S.S.R., by educating citizens in the spirit of Soviet patriotism and socialist internationalism, and by the possibility to use their native language and the languages of other peoples of the U.S.S.R.

Any direct or indirect limitation of the rights of citizens or establishment of direct or indirect privileges on grounds of race or nationality, and any advocacy of racial or national exclusiveness, hostility or contempt, are punishable by law.

Article 37

Citizens of other countries and stateless persons in the U.S.S.R. are guaranteed the rights and freedoms provided by law, including the right to apply to a court and other state bodies for the protection of their personal, property, family, and other rights.

Citizens of other countries and stateless persons, when in the U.S.S.R., are obliged to respect the Constitution of the U.S.S.R. and observe Soviet laws.

Article 38

The U.S.S.R. grants the right of asylum to foreigners persecuted for defending the interests of the working people and the cause of peace, or for participation in the revolutionary and national-liberation movement, or for progressive social and political, scientific or other creative activity.

CHAPTER 7

THE BASIC RIGHTS, FREEDOMS, AND DUTIES OF CITIZENS OF THE U.S.S.R.

Article 39

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. enjoy in full the social, economic, political and personal rights and freedoms proclaimed and guaranteed by the Constitution of the U.S.S.R. and by Soviet laws. The socialist system ensures enlargement of the rights and freedoms of citizens and continuous improvement of their living standards as social, economic, and cultural development programmes are fulfilled.

Enjoyment by citizens of their rights and freedoms must not be to the detriment of the interests of society or the state, or infringe the rights of other citizens.

Article 40

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. have the right to work (that is, to guaranteed employment and pay in accordance with the quantity and quality of their work, and not below the state-established minimum), including the right to choose their trade or profession, type of job and work in accordance with their inclinations, abilities, training and education, with due account of the needs of society.

This right is ensured by the socialist economic system, steady growth of the productive forces, free vocational and professional training, improvement of skills, training in new trades or professions, and development of the systems of vocational guidance and job placement.

Article 41

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. have the right to rest and leisure.

This right is ensured by the establishment of a working week not exceeding 41 hours, for workers and other employees, a shorter working day in a number of trades and industries, and shorter hours for night work; by the provision of paid annual holidays, weekly days of rest, extension of the network of cultural, educational and health-building institutions, and the development on a mass scale of sport, physical culture, and camping and tourism; by the provision of neighbourhood recreational facilities, and of other opportunities for rational use of free time.

The length of collective farmers' working and leisure time is established by their collective farms.

Article 42

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. have the right to health protection.

This right is ensured by free, qualified medical care provided by state health institutions; by extension of the network of therapeutic and health-building institutions; by the development and improvement of safety and hygiene in industry; by carrying out broad prophylactic measures; by measures to improve the environment; by special care for the health of the rising generation, including prohibition of child labour, excluding the work done by children as part of the school curriculum; and by developing research to prevent and reduce the incidence of disease and ensure citizens a long and active life.

Article 43

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. have the right to maintenance in old age, in sickness, and in the event of complete or partial disability or loss of the breadwinner.

This right is guaranteed by social insurance of workers and other employees and collective farmers; by allowances for temporary disability; by the provision by the state or by collective farms of retirement pensions, disability pensions, and pensions for loss of the breadwinner; by providing employment for the partially disabled; by care for the elderly and the disabled; and by other forms of social security.

Article 44

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. have the right to housing.

This right is ensured by the development and upkeep of state and socially-owned housing; by assistance for co-operative and individual house building; by fair distribution, under public control, of the housing that becomes available through fulfilment of the programme of building well-appointed dwellings, and by low rents and low charges for utility services. Citizens of the U.S.S.R. shall take good care of the housing allocated to them.

Article 45

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. have the right to education.

This right is ensured by free provision of all forms of education, by the institution of universal, compulsory secondary education, and broad development of vocational, specialized secondary, and higher education, in which instruction is oriented toward practical activity and production; by the development of extramural, correspondence and evening courses; by the provision of state scholarships and grants and privileges for students; by the free issue of school textbooks; by the opportunity to attend a school where teaching is in the native language; and by the provision of facilities for self-education.

Article 46

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. have the right to enjoy cultural benefits.

This right is ensured by broad access to the cultural treasures of their own land and of the world that are preserved in state and other public collections; by the development and fair distribution of cultural and educational institutions throughout the country; by developing television and radio broadcasting and the publishing of books, newspapers and periodicals, and by extending the free library service; and by expanding cultural exchanges with other countries.

Article 47

Citizens of the U.S.S.R., in accordance with the aims of building communism, are guaranteed freedom of scientific, technical, and artistic work. This freedom is ensured by broadening scientific research, encouraging invention and innovation, and developing literature and the arts. The state provides the necessary material conditions for this and support for voluntary societies and unions of workers in the arts, organizes introduction of inventions and innovations in production and other spheres of activity.

The rights of authors, inventors and innovators are protected by the state.

Article 48

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. have the right to take part in the management and administration of state and public affairs and in the discussion and adoption of laws and measures of All-Union and local significance.

This right is ensured by the opportunity to vote and to be elected to Soviets of People's Deputies and other elective state bodies, to take part in nationwide discussions and referendums, in people's control, in the work of state bodies, public organizations, and local community groups, and in meetings at places of work or residence.

Article 49

Every citizen of the U.S.S.R. has the right to submit proposals to state bodies and public organizations for improving their activity, and to criticize shortcomings in their work.

Officials are obliged, within established time-limits, to examine citizens' proposals and requests, to reply to them, and to take appropriate action.

Persecution for criticism is prohibited. Persons guilty of such persecution shall be called to account.

Article 50

In accordance with the interests of the people and in order to strengthen and develop the socialist system, citizens of the U.S.S.R. are guaranteed freedom of speech, of the press, and of assembly, meetings, street processions and demonstrations.

Exercise of these political freedoms is ensured by putting public buildings, streets and squares at the disposal of the working people and their organizations, by broad dissemination of information, and by the opportunity to use the press, television, and radio.

Article 51

In accordance with the aims of building communism, citizens of the U.S.S.R. have the right to associate in public organizations that promote their political activity and initiative and satisfaction of their various interests.

Public organizations are guaranteed conditions for successfully performing the functions defined in their rules.

Article 52

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. are guaranteed freedom of conscience, that is, the right to profess or not to profess any religion, and to conduct religious worship or atheistic propaganda. Incitement of hostility or hatred on religious grounds is prohibited.

In the U.S.S.R., the church is separated from the state, and the school from the church.

Article 53

The family enjoys the protection of the state. Marriage is based on the free consent of the woman and the man; the spouses are completely equal in their family relations.

The state helps the family by providing and developing a broad system of child-care institutions, by organizing and improving communal services and public catering, by paying grants on the birth of a child, by providing children's allowances and benefits for large families, and other forms of family allowances and assistance.

Article 54

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. are guaranteed inviolability of the person. No one may be arrested except by a court decision or on the warrant of a procurator.

Article 55

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. are guaranteed inviolability of the home. No one may, without lawful grounds, enter a home against the will of those residing in it.

Article 56

The privacy of citizens, and of their correspondence, telephone conversations, and telegraphic communications is protected by law.

Article 57

Respect for the individual and protection of the rights and freedoms of citizens are the duty of all state bodies, public organizations, and officials.

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. have the right to protection by the courts against encroachments on their honour and reputation, life and health, and personal freedom and property.

Article 58

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. have the right to lodge a complaint against the actions of officials, state bodies and public bodies. Complaints shall be examined according to the procedure and within the time-limit established by law.

Actions by officials that contravene the law or exceed their powers, and infringe the rights of citizens, may be appealed against in a court in the manner prescribed by law.

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. have the right to compensation for damage resulting from unlawful actions by state organizations and public organizations, or by officials in the performance of their duties.

Article 59

Citizens' exercise of their rights and freedoms is inseparable from the performance of their duties and obligations.

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. are obliged to observe the Constitution of the U.S.S.R. and Soviet laws, comply with the standards of socialist conduct, and uphold the honour and dignity of Soviet citizenship.

Article 60

It is the duty of, and a matter of honour for, every able-bodied citizen of the U.S.S.R. to work conscientiously in his chosen, socially useful occupation, and strictly to observe labour discipline. Evasion of socially useful work is incompatible with the principles of socialist society.

Article 61

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. are obliged to preserve and protect socialist property. It is the duty of a citizen of the U.S.S.R. to combat misappropriation and squandering of state and socially-owned property and to make thrifty use of the people's wealth.

Persons encroaching in any way on socialist property shall be punished according to the law.

Article 62

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. are obliged to safeguard the interests of the Soviet state, and to enhance its power and prestige.

Defence of the Socialist Motherland is the sacred duty of every citizen of the U.S.S.R.

Betrayal of the Motherland is the gravest of crimes against the people.

Article 63

Military service in the ranks of the Armed Forces of the U.S.S.R. is an honourable duty of Soviet citizens.

Article 64

It is the duty of every citizen of the U.S.S.R. to respect the national dignity of other citizens, and to strengthen friendship of the nations and nationalities of the multinational Soviet state.

Article 65

A citizen of the U.S.S.R. is obliged to respect the rights and lawful interests of other persons, to be uncompromising toward anti-social behaviour, and to help maintain public order.

Article 66

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. are obliged to concern themselves with the upbringing of children, to train them for socially useful work, and to raise them as worthy members of socialist society. Children are obliged to care for their parents and help them.

Article 67

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. are obliged to protect nature and conserve its riches.

Article 68

Concern for the preservation of historical monuments and other cultural values is a duty and obligation of citizens of the U.S.S.R.

Article 69

It is the internationalist duty of citizens of the U.S.S.R. to promote friendship and co-operation with peoples of other lands and help maintain and strengthen world peace.

III. The National-State Structure of the U.S.S.R.

CHAPTER 8

THE U.S.S.R.—A FEDERAL STATE

Article 70

The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is an integral, federal, multinational state formed on the principle of socialist federalism as a result of the free self-determination of nations and the voluntary association of equal Soviet Socialist Republics.

The U.S.S.R. embodies the state unity of the Soviet people and draws all its nations and nationalities together for the purpose of jointly building communism.

Article 71

The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics unites:
the Russian Soviet Federative Socialist Republic,

11. control over observance of the Constitution of the U.S.S.R., and ensurance of conformity of the Constitutions of Union Republics to the Constitution of the U.S.S.R.;
12. and settlement of other matters of All-Union importance.

Article 74

The laws of the U.S.S.R. shall have the same force in all Union Republics. In the event of a discrepancy between a Union Republic law and an All-Union law, the law of the U.S.S.R. shall prevail.

Article 75

The territory of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is a single entity and comprises the territories of the Union Republics.

The sovereignty of the U.S.S.R. extends throughout its territory.

CHAPTER 9

THE UNION SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

Article 76

A Union Republic is a sovereign Soviet socialist state that has united with other Soviet Republics in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Outside the spheres listed in Article 73 of the Constitution of the U.S.S.R., a Union Republic exercises independent authority on its territory.

A Union Republic shall have its own Constitution conforming to the Constitution of the U.S.S.R. with the specific features of the Republic being taken into account.

Article 77

Union Republics take part in decision-making in the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., the Government of the U.S.S.R., and other bodies of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in matters that come within the jurisdiction of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

A Union Republic shall ensure comprehensive economic and social development on its territory, facilitate exercise of the powers of the U.S.S.R. on its territory, and implement the decisions of the highest bodies of state authority and administration of the U.S.S.R.

In matters that come within its jurisdiction, a Union Republic shall co-ordinate and control the activity of enterprises, institutions, and organizations subordinate to the Union.

Article 78

The territory of a Union Republic may not be altered without its consent. The boundaries between Union Republics may be altered by mutual agreement of the Republics concerned, subject to ratification by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Article 79

A Union Republic shall determine its division into territories, regions, areas, and districts, and decide other matters relating to its administrative and territorial structure.

Article 80

A Union Republic has the right to enter into relations with other states, conclude treaties with them, exchange diplomatic and consular representatives, and take part in the work of international organizations.

Article 81

The sovereign rights of Union Republics shall be safeguarded by the U.S.S.R.

CHAPTER 10

THE AUTONOMOUS
SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

Article 82

An Autonomous Republic is a constituent part of a Union Republic.

In spheres not within the jurisdiction of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the Union Republic, an Autonomous Republic shall deal independently with matters within its jurisdiction.

An Autonomous Republic shall have its own Constitution conforming to the Constitutions of the U.S.S.R. and the Union Republic with the specific features of the Autonomous Republic being taken into account.

Article 83

An Autonomous Republic takes part in decision-making through the highest bodies of state authority and administration of the U.S.S.R. and of the Union Republic respectively, in matters that come within the jurisdiction of the U.S.S.R. and the Union Republic.

An Autonomous Republic shall ensure comprehensive economic and social development on its territory, facilitate exercise of the powers of the U.S.S.R. and the Union Republic on its territory, and implement decisions of the highest bodies of state authority and administration of the U.S.S.R. and the Union Republic.

In matters within its jurisdiction, an Autonomous Republic shall co-ordinate and control the activity of enterprises, institutions, and organizations subordinate to the Union or the Union Republic.

Article 84

The territory of an Autonomous Republic may not be altered without its consent.

Article 85

The Russian Soviet Federative Socialist Republic includes the Bashkir, Buryat, Dagestan, Kabardin-Balkar, Kalmyk, Karelian, Komi, Mari, Mordovian, North Ossetian, Tatar, Tuva, Udmurt, Chechen-Ingush, Chuvash, and Yakut Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republics.

CHAPTER 11

THE AUTONOMOUS REGION AND AUTONOMOUS AREA

Article 86

An Autonomous Region is a constituent part of a Union Republic or Territory. The Law on an Autonomous Region, upon submission by the Soviet of People's Deputies of the Autonomous Region concerned, shall be adopted by the Supreme Soviet of the Union Republic.

Article 87

The Russian Soviet Federative Socialist Republic includes the Adygei, Gorno-Altai, Jewish, Kharachayevo-Cherkess, and Khakass Autonomous Regions.

The Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic includes the South Ossetian Autonomous Region.

The Azerbaizhan Soviet Socialist Republic includes the Nagorno-Karabakh Autonomous Region.

The Tadzhik Soviet Socialist Republic includes the Gorno-Badakhshan Autonomous Region.

Article 88

An Autonomous Area is a constituent part of a Territory or Region. The Law on an Autonomous Area shall be adopted by the Supreme Soviet of the Union Republic concerned.

IV. Soviets of People's Deputies and Electoral Procedure

CHAPTER 12

THE SYSTEM OF SOVIETS OF PEOPLE'S DEPUTIES AND THE PRINCIPLES OF THEIR WORK

Article 89

The Soviets of People's Deputies, i.e. the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., the Supreme Soviets of Union

Republics, the Supreme Soviets of Autonomous Republics, the Soviets of People's Deputies of Territories and Regions, the Soviets of People's Deputies of Autonomous Regions and Autonomous Areas, and the Soviets of People's Deputies of districts, cities, city districts, settlements and villages shall constitute a single system of bodies of state authority.

Article 90

The term of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., the Supreme Soviets of Union Republics, and the Supreme Soviets of Autonomous Republics shall be five years.

The term of local Soviets of People's Deputies shall be two and a half years.

Elections to Soviets of People's Deputies shall be called not later than two months before the expiry of the term of the Soviet concerned.

Article 91

The most important matters within the jurisdiction of the respective Soviets of People's Deputies shall be considered and settled at their sessions.

Soviets of People's Deputies shall elect standing commissions and form executive-administrative, and other bodies accountable to them.

Article 92

Soviets of People's Deputies shall form people's control bodies combining state control by the working people at enterprises, collective farms, institutions, and organizations.

People's control bodies shall check on the fulfilment of state plans and assignments, combat breaches of state discipline, localistic tendencies, narrow departmental attitudes, mismanagement, extravagance and waste, red tape and bureaucracy, and help improve the working of the state machinery.

Article 93

Soviets of People's Deputies shall direct all sectors of state, economic, and social and cultural development, either directly or through bodies instituted by them, take decisions and ensure their execution, and verify their implementation.

Article 94

Soviets of People's Deputies shall function publicly on the basis of collective, free, constructive discussion and decision-making, of systematic reporting back to them and the people by their executive-administrative and other bodies, and of involving citizens on a broad scale in their work.

Soviets of People's Deputies and the bodies set up by them shall systematically inform the public about their work and the decisions taken by them.

CHAPTER 13

THE ELECTORAL SYSTEM

Article 95

Deputies to all Soviets shall be elected on the basis of universal, equal, and direct suffrage by secret ballot.

Article 96

Elections shall be universal: all citizens of the U.S.S.R. who have reached the age of 18 shall have the right to vote and to be elected, with the exception of persons who have been legally certified insane.

To be eligible for election to the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. a citizen of the U.S.S.R. must have reached the age of 21.

Article 97

Elections shall be equal: each citizen shall have one vote; all voters shall exercise the franchise on an equal footing.

Article 98

Elections shall be direct: deputies to all Soviets of People's Deputies shall be elected by citizens by direct vote.

Article 99

Voting at elections shall be secret: control over voters' exercise of the franchise is inadmissible.

Article 100

The following shall have the right to nominate candidates: branches and organizations of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, trade unions, and the All-Union Leninist Young Communist League; co-operatives and other public organizations; work collectives, and meetings of servicemen in their military units.

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. and public organizations are guaranteed the right to free and all-round discussion of the political and personal qualities and competence of candidates, and the right to campaign for them at meetings, in the press, and on television and radio.

The expenses involved in holding elections to Soviets of People's Deputies shall be met by the state.

Article 101

Deputies to Soviets of People's Deputies shall be elected by constituencies.

A citizen of the U.S.S.R. may not, as a rule, be elected to more than two Soviets of People's Deputies.

Elections to the Soviets shall be conducted by electoral commissions consisting of representatives of public organizations and work collectives, and of meetings of servicemen in military units.

The procedure for holding elections to Soviets of People's Deputies shall be defined by the laws of the U.S.S.R., and of Union and Autonomous Republics.

Article 102

Electors give mandates to their Deputies.

The appropriate Soviets of People's Deputies shall examine electors' mandates, take them into account in drafting economic and social development plans and in drawing up the budget, organize implementation of the mandates, and inform citizens about it.

CHAPTER 14

PEOPLE'S DEPUTIES

Article 103

Deputies are the plenipotentiary representatives of the people in the Soviets of People's Deputies.

In the Soviets, Deputies deal with matters relating to state, economic, and social and cultural development, organize implementation of the decisions of the Soviets, and exercise control over the work of state bodies, enterprises, institutions and organizations.

Deputies shall be guided in their activities by the interests of the state, and shall take the needs of their constituents into account and work to implement their electors' mandates.

Article 104

Deputies shall exercise their powers without discontinuing their regular employment or duties.

During sessions of the Soviet, and so as to exercise their deputy's powers in other cases stipulated by law, Deputies shall be released from their regular employment or duties, with retention of their average earnings at their permanent place of work.

Article 105

A Deputy has the right to address inquiries to the appropriate state bodies and officials, who are obliged to reply to them at a session of the Soviet.

Deputies have the right to approach any state or public body, enterprise, institution, or organization on matters arising from their work as Deputies and to take part in considering the questions raised by them. The heads of the state or public bodies, enterprises, institutions or organizations concerned are obliged to receive Deputies without delay and to consider their proposals within the time-limit established by law.

Article 106

Deputies shall be ensured conditions for the unhampered and effective exercise of their rights and duties.

The immunity of Deputies, and other guarantees of their activity as Deputies, are defined in the Law on the Status of Deputies and other legislative acts of the U.S.S.R. and of Union and Autonomous Republics.

Article 107

Deputies shall report on their work and on that of the Soviet to their constituents, and to the work collectives and public organizations that nominated them.

Deputies who have not justified the confidence of their constituents may be recalled at any time by decision of a majority of the electors in accordance with the procedure established by law.

V. Higher Bodies of State Authority and Administration of the U.S.S.R.

CHAPTER 15THE SUPREME SOVIET OF THE U.S.S.R.Article 108

The highest body of state authority of the U.S.S.R. shall be the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

The Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. is empowered to deal with all matters within the jurisdiction of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, as defined by this Constitution.

The adoption and amendment of the Constitution of the U.S.S.R.; admission of new Republics to the U.S.S.R.; endorsement of the formation of new Autonomous Republics and Autonomous Regions; approval of the state plans for economic and social development, of the Budget of the U.S.S.R., and of reports on their execution; and the institution of bodies of the U.S.S.R. accountable to it, are the exclusive prerogative of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

Laws of the U.S.S.R. shall be enacted by the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. or by a nationwide vote (referendum) held by decision of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

Article 109

The Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. shall consist of two chambers: the Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities.

The two chambers of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. shall have equal rights.

Article 110

The Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities shall have equal numbers of deputies.

The Soviet of the Union shall be elected by constituencies with equal populations.

The Soviet of Nationalities shall be elected on the basis of the following representation: 32 deputies from each Union Republic, 11 deputies from each Autonomous Republic, five deputies from each Autonomous Region, and one deputy from each Autonomous Area.

The Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities, upon submission by the credentials commissions elected by them, shall decide on the validity of Deputies' credentials, and, in cases in which the election law has been violated, shall declare the election of the Deputies concerned null and void.

Article 111

Each chamber of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. shall elect a Chairman and four Vice-Chairmen.

The Chairmen of the Soviet of the Union and of the Soviet of Nationalities shall preside over the sittings of the respective chambers and conduct their affairs.

Joint sittings of the chambers of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. shall be presided over alternately by the Chairman of the Soviet of the Union and the Chairman of the Soviet of Nationalities.

Article 112

Sessions of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. shall be convened twice a year.

Special sessions shall be convened by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. at its discretion or on the proposal of a Union Republic, or of not less than one-third of the Deputies of one of the chambers.

A session of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. shall consist of separate and joint sittings of the chambers, and of meetings of the standing commissions of the chambers or commissions of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. held between the sittings of the chambers. A session may be opened and closed at either separate or joint sittings of the chambers.

Article 113

The right to initiate legislation in the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. is vested in the Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities, the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R., Union Republics through their highest bodies of state authority, commissions of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. and standing commissions of its chambers, Deputies of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R., and the Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R.

The right to initiate legislation is also vested in public organizations through their All-Union bodies.

Article 114

Bills and other matters submitted to the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. shall be debated by its chambers at separate or joint sittings. Where necessary, a bill or other matter may be referred to one or more commissions for preliminary or additional consideration.

A law of the U.S.S.R. shall be deemed adopted when it has been passed in each chamber of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. by a majority of the total number of its Deputies. Decisions and other acts of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. are adopted by a majority of the total number of Deputies of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

Bills and other very important matters of state may be submitted for nationwide discussion by a decision of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. or its Presidium taken on their own initiative or on the proposal of a Union Republic.

Article 115

In the event of disagreement between the Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities, the matter at issue shall be referred for settlement to a conciliation commission formed by the chambers on a parity basis, after which it shall be considered for a second time by the Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities at a joint sitting. If agreement is again not reached, the matter shall be postponed for debate at the next session of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. or submitted by the Supreme Soviet to a nationwide vote (referendum).

Article 116

Laws of the U.S.S.R. and decisions and other acts of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. shall be published in the languages of the Union Republics over the signatures of the Chairman and Secretary of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

Article 117

A Deputy of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. has the right to address inquiries to the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R., and to Ministers and the heads of other bodies formed by the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. The Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R., or the official to whom the inquiry is addressed, is obliged to give a verbal or written reply within three days at the given session of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

Article 118

A Deputy of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. may not be prosecuted, or arrested, or incur a court-imposed penalty, without the sanction of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. or, between its sessions, of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

Article 119

The Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., at a joint sitting of its chambers shall elect a Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., which shall be a standing body of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., accountable to it for all its work and exercising the functions of the highest body of state authority of the U.S.S.R. between sessions of the Supreme Soviet, within the limits prescribed by the Constitution.

Article 120

The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. shall be elected from among the Deputies and shall consist of a Chairman, First Vice-Chairman, 15 Vice-Chairmen (one from each Union Republic), a Secretary, and 21 members.

Article 121

The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. shall:

1. name the date of elections to the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.;
2. convene sessions of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.;
3. co-ordinate the work of the standing commissions of the chambers of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.;
4. ensure observance of the Constitution of the U.S.S.R. and conformity of the Constitutions and laws of Union Republics to the Constitution and laws of the U.S.S.R.;
5. interpret the laws of the U.S.S.R.;
6. ratify and denounce international treaties of the U.S.S.R.;
7. revoke decisions and ordinances of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. and of the Councils of Ministers of Union Republics should they fail to conform to the law;
8. institute military and diplomatic ranks and other special titles; and confer the highest military and diplomatic ranks and other special titles;
9. institute orders and medals of the U.S.S.R., and honorific titles of the U.S.S.R.; award orders and medals of the U.S.S.R.; and confer honorific titles of the U.S.S.R.;

10. grant citizenship of the U.S.S.R., and rule on matters of the renunciation or deprivation of citizenship of the U.S.S.R. and of granting asylum;
11. issue All-Union acts of amnesty and exercise the right of pardon;
12. appoint and recall diplomatic representatives of the U.S.S.R. to other countries and to international organizations;
13. receive the letters of credence and recall of the diplomatic representatives of foreign states accredited to it;
14. form the Council of Defence of the U.S.S.R. and confirm its composition; appoint and dismiss the high command of the Armed Forces of the U.S.S.R.;
15. proclaim martial law in particular localities or throughout the country in the interests of defence of the U.S.S.R.;
16. order general or partial mobilization;
17. between sessions of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., proclaim a state of war in the event of an armed attack on the U.S.S.R., or when it is necessary to meet international treaty obligations relating to mutual defence against aggression;
18. and exercise other powers vested in it by the Constitution and laws of the U.S.S.R.

Article 122

The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., between sessions of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. and subject to submission for its confirmation at the next session, shall:

1. amend existing legislative acts of the U.S.S.R. when necessary;
2. approve changes in the boundaries between Union Republics;
3. form and abolish Ministries and State Committees of the U.S.S.R. on the recommendation of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R.;
4. relieve individual members of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. of their responsibilities and appoint persons to the Council of Ministers on the recommendation of the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R.

Article 123

The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. promulgates decrees and adopts decisions.

Article 124

On expiry of the term of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. shall retain its powers until the newly elected Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. has elected a new Presidium.

The newly elected Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. shall be convened by the outgoing Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. within two months of the elections.

Article 125

The Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities shall elect standing commissions from among the Deputies to make a preliminary review of matters coming within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., to promote execution of the laws of the U.S.S.R. and other acts of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. and its Presidium, and to check on the work of state bodies and organizations. The chambers of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. may also set up joint commissions on a parity basis.

When it deems it necessary, the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. sets up commissions of inquiry and audit, and commissions on any other matter.

All state and public bodies, organizations and officials are obliged to meet the requests of the commissions of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. and of its chambers, and submit the requisite materials and documents to them.

The commissions' recommendations shall be subject to consideration by state and public bodies, institutions and organizations. The commissions shall be informed, within the prescribed time-limit, of the results of such consideration or of the action taken.

Article 126

The Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. shall supervise the work of all state bodies accountable to it.

The Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. shall form a Committee of People's Control of the U.S.S.R. to head the system of people's control.

The organization and procedure of people's control bodies are defined by the Law on People's Control in the U.S.S.R.

Article 127

The procedure of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. and of its bodies shall be defined in the Rules and Regulations of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. and other laws of the U.S.S.R. enacted on the basis of the Constitution of the U.S.S.R.

CHAPTER 16

THE COUNCIL OF MINISTERS OF THE U.S.S.R.

Article 128

The Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R., i.e. the Government of the U.S.S.R., is the highest executive and administrative body of state authority of the U.S.S.R.

Article 129

The Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. shall be formed by the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. at a joint sitting of the Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities, and shall consist of the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R., First Vice-Chairmen and Vice-Chairmen, Ministers of the U.S.S.R., and Chairmen of State Committees of the U.S.S.R.

The Chairmen of the Councils of Ministers of Union Republics shall be ex officio members of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R.

The Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., on the recommendation of the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R., may include in the Government of the U.S.S.R. the heads of other bodies and organizations of the U.S.S.R.

The Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. shall tender its resignation to a newly elected Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. at its first session.

Article 130

The Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. shall be responsible and accountable to the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. and, between sessions of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., to the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

The Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. shall report regularly on its work to the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

Article 131

The Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. is empowered to deal with all matters of state administration within the jurisdiction of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics insofar as, under the Constitution, they do not come within the competence of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. or the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

Within its powers the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. shall:

1. ensure direction of economic, social, and cultural development; draft and implement measures to promote the well-being and cultural development of the people, to develop science and engineering, to ensure rational exploitation and conservation of natural resources, to consolidate the monetary and credit system, to pursue a uniform prices, wages, and social security policy, and to organize state insurance and a uniform system of accounting and statistics; and organize the management of industrial, constructional, and agricultural enterprises and amalgamations, transport and communications undertakings, banks, and other organizations and institutions of All-Union subordination;
2. draft current and long-term state plans, for the economic and social development of the U.S.S.R. and the Budget of the U.S.S.R., and submit them to the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.; take measures to execute the state plans and Budget; and report to the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. on the implementation of the plans and Budget;
3. implement measures to defend the interests of the state, protect socialist property and maintain public order, and guarantee and protect citizens' rights and freedoms;
4. take measures to ensure state security;
5. exercise general direction of the development of the Armed Forces of the U.S.S.R., and determine the annual contingent of citizens to be called up for active military service;
6. provide general direction in regard to relations with other states, foreign trade, and economic, scientific, technical, and cultural co-operation of the U.S.S.R. with other countries; take measures to ensure fulfilment of the U.S.S.R.'s international treaties; and ratify and denounce intergovernmental international agreements;
7. and when necessary, form committees, central boards and other departments under the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. to deal with matters of economic, social and cultural development, and defence.

Article 132

A Presidium of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R., consisting of the Chairman, the First Vice-Chairmen, and Vice-Chairmen of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R., shall function as a standing body of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. to deal with questions relating to guidance of the economy, and with other matters of state administration.

Article 133

The Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R., on the basis of, and in pursuance of, the laws of the U.S.S.R. and other decisions of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. and its Presidium, shall issue decisions and ordinances and verify their execution. The decisions and ordinances of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. shall be binding throughout the U.S.S.R.

Article 134

The Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. has the right, in matters within the jurisdiction of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, to suspend execution of decisions and ordinances of the Councils of Ministers of Union Republics, and to rescind acts of ministries and state committees of the U.S.S.R., and of other bodies subordinate to it

Article 135

The Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. shall co-ordinate and direct the work of All-Union and Union-Republican ministries, state committees of the U.S.S.R., and other bodies subordinate to it.

All-Union ministries and state committees of the U.S.S.R. shall direct the work of the branches of administration entrusted to them, or exercise inter-branch administration, throughout the territory of the U.S.S.R. directly or through bodies set up by them.

Union-Republican ministries and state committees of the U.S.S.R. direct the work of the branches of administration entrusted to them, or exercise inter-branch administration, as a rule, through the corresponding ministries and state committees, and other bodies of Union Republics, and directly administer individual enterprises and amalgamations of Union subordination. The procedure for transferring enterprises and amalgamations from Republic or local subordination to Union subordination shall be defined by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

Ministries and state committees of the U.S.S.R. shall be responsible for the condition and development of the spheres of administration entrusted to them; within their competence, they issue orders and other acts on the basis of, and in execution of, the laws of the U.S.S.R. and other decisions of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. and its Presidium, and of decisions and ordinances of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R., and organize and verify their implementation.

Article 136

The competence of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. and its Presidium, the procedure for their work, relationships between the Council of Ministers and other state bodies, and the list of All-Union and Union-Republican ministries and state committees of the U.S.S.R. are defined, on the basis of the Constitution, in the Law on the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R.

VI. Basic Principles of the Structure of the Bodies of State Authority and Administration in Union Republics

CHAPTER 17

HIGHER BODIES OF STATE AUTHORITY AND ADMINISTRATION OF A UNION REPUBLIC

Article 137

The highest body of state authority of a Union Republic shall be the Supreme Soviet of that Republic.

The Supreme Soviet of a Union Republic is empowered to deal with all matters within the jurisdiction of the Republic under the Constitutions of the U.S.S.R. and the Republic.

Adoption and amendment of the Constitution of a Union Republic; endorsement of state plans for economic and social development; of the Republic's Budget, and of reports on their fulfilment; and the formation of bodies accountable to the Supreme Soviet of the Union Republic are the exclusive prerogative of that Supreme Soviet.

Laws of a Union Republic shall be enacted by the Supreme Soviet of the Union Republic or by a popular vote (referendum) held by decision of the Republic's Supreme Soviet.

Article 138

The Supreme Soviet of a Union Republic shall elect a Presidium, which is a standing body of that Supreme Soviet and accountable to it for all its work. The composition and powers of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of a Union Republic shall be defined in the Constitution of the Union Republic.

Article 139

The Supreme Soviet of a Union Republic shall form a Council of Ministers of the Union Republic, i.e. the Government of that Republic, which shall be the highest executive and administrative body of state authority in the Republic.

The Council of Ministers of a Union Republic shall be responsible and accountable to the Supreme Soviet of that Republic or, between sessions of the Supreme Soviet, to its Presidium.

Article 140

The Council of Ministers of a Union Republic issues decisions and ordinances on the basis of, and in pursuance of, the legislative acts of the U.S.S.R. and of the Union Republic, and of decisions and ordinances of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R., and shall organize and verify their execution.

Article 141

The Council of Ministers of a Union Republic has the right to suspend the execution of decisions and ordinances of the Councils of Ministers of Autonomous Republics, to rescind the decisions and orders of the Executive Committees of Soviets of People's Deputies of Territories, Regions, and cities (i.e. cities under Republic jurisdiction) and of Autonomous Regions, and in Union Republics not divided into regions, of the Executive Committees of district and corresponding city Soviets of People's Deputies.

Article 142

The Council of Ministers of a Union Republic shall co-ordinate and direct the work of the Union-Republican and Republican ministries and of state committees of the Union Republic, and other bodies under its jurisdiction.

The Union-Republican ministries and state committees of a Union Republic shall direct the branches of administration entrusted to them, or exercise inter-branch control, and shall be subordinate to both the Council of Ministers of the Union Republic and the corresponding Union-Republican ministry or state committee of the U.S.S.R.

Republican ministries and state committees shall direct the branches of administration entrusted to them, or exercise inter-branch control, and shall be subordinate to the Council of Ministers of the Union Republic.

CHAPTER 18

HIGHER BODIES OF STATE AUTHORITY AND ADMINISTRATION OF AN AUTONOMOUS REPUBLIC

Article 143

The highest body of state authority of an Autonomous Republic shall be the Supreme Soviet of that Republic.

Adoption and amendment of the Constitution of an Autonomous Republic; endorsement of state plans for economic and social development, and of the Republic's Budget; and the formation of bodies accountable to the Supreme Soviet of the Autonomous Republic are the exclusive prerogative of that Supreme Soviet.

Laws of an Autonomous Republic shall be enacted by the Supreme Soviet of the Autonomous Republic.

Article 144

The Supreme Soviet of an Autonomous Republic shall elect a Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the Autonomous Republic and shall form a Council of Ministers of the Autonomous Republic, i.e. the Government of that Republic.

CHAPTER 19

LOCAL BODIES OF STATE AUTHORITY AND ADMINISTRATION

Article 145

The bodies of state authority in Territories, Regions, Autonomous Regions, Autonomous Areas, districts, cities, city districts, settlements, and rural communities shall be the corresponding Soviets of People's Deputies.

Article 146

Local Soviets of People's Deputies shall deal with all matters of local significance in accordance with the interests of the whole state and of the citizens residing in the area under their jurisdiction, implement decisions of higher bodies of state authority, guide the work of lower Soviets of People's Deputies, take part in the discussion of matters of Republican and All-Union significance, and submit their proposals concerning them.

Local Soviets of People's Deputies shall direct state, economic, social and cultural development within their territory; endorse plans for economic and social development and the local budget; exercise general guidance over state bodies, enterprises, institutions and organizations subordinate to them; ensure observance of the laws, maintenance of law and order, and protection of citizens' rights; and help strengthen the country's defence capacity.

Article 147

Within their powers, local Soviets of People's Deputies shall ensure the comprehensive, all-round economic and social development of their area; exercise control over the observance of legislation by enterprises, institutions and organizations subordinate to higher authorities and located in their area; and co-ordinate and supervise their activity as regards land use, nature conservation, building, employment of manpower, production of consumer goods, and social, cultural, communal and other services and amenities for the public.

Article 148

Local Soviets of People's Deputies shall decide matters within the powers accorded them by the legislation of the U.S.S.R. and of the appropriate Union Republic and Autonomous Republic. Their decisions shall be binding on all enterprises, institutions, and organizations located in their area and on officials and citizens.

Article 149

The executive-administrative bodies of local Soviets shall be the Executive Committees elected by them from among their deputies.

Executive Committees shall report on their work at least once a year to the Soviets that elected them and to meetings of citizens at their places of work or residence.

Article 150

Executive Committees of local Soviets of People's Deputies shall be directly accountable both to the Soviet that elected them and to the higher executive and administrative body.

VII. Justice, Arbitration, and Procurator's Supervision

CHAPTER 20

COURTS AND ARBITRATION

Article 151

In the U.S.S.R. justice is administered only by the courts.

In the U.S.S.R. there are the following courts: the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R., the Supreme Courts of Union Republics, the Supreme Courts of Autonomous Republics, Territorial, Regional, and city courts, courts of Autonomous Regions, courts of Autonomous Areas, district (city) people's courts, and military tribunals in the Armed Forces.

Article 152

All courts in the U.S.S.R. shall be formed on the principle of the electiveness of judges and people's assessors.

People's judges of district (city) people's courts shall be elected for a term of five years by the citizens of the district (city) on the basis of universal, equal and direct suffrage by secret ballot. People's assessors of district (city) people's courts shall be elected for a term of two and a half years at meetings of citizens at their places of work or residence by a show of hands.

Higher courts shall be elected for a term of five years by the corresponding Soviet of People's Deputies.

The judges of military tribunals shall be elected for a term of five years by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. and people's assessors for a term of two and a half years by meetings of servicemen.

Judges and people's assessors are responsible and accountable to their electors or the bodies that elected them, shall report to them, and may be recalled by them in the manner prescribed by law.

Article 153

The Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. is the highest judicial body in the U.S.S.R. and supervises the administration of justice by the courts of the U.S.S.R. and Union Republics within the limits established by law.

The Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. shall be elected by the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. and shall consist of a Chairman, Vice-Chairmen, members, and people's assessors. The Chairmen of the Supreme Courts of Union Republics are ex officio members of the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R.

The organization and procedure of the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. are defined in the Law on the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R.

Article 154

The hearing of civil and criminal cases in all courts is collegial; in courts of first instance cases are heard with the participation of people's assessors. In the administration of justice people's assessors have all the rights of a judge.

Article 155

Judges and people's assessors are independent and subject only to the law.

Article 156

Justice is administered in the U.S.S.R. on the principle of the equality of citizens before the law and the court.

Article 157

Proceedings in all courts shall be open to the public. Hearings in camera are only allowed in cases provided for by law, with observance of all the rules of judicial procedure.

Article 158

A defendant in a criminal action is guaranteed the right to legal assistance.

Article 159

Judicial proceedings shall be conducted in the language of the Union Republic, Autonomous Republic, Autonomous Region, or Autonomous Area, or in the language spoken by the majority of the people in the locality. Persons participating in court proceedings, who do not know the language in which they are being conducted, shall be ensured the right to become fully acquainted with the materials in the case; the services of an interpreter during the proceedings; and the right to address the court in their own language.

Article 160

No one may be adjudged guilty of a crime and subjected to punishment as a criminal except by the sentence of a court and in conformity with the law.

Article 161

Colleges of advocates are available to give legal assistance to citizens and organizations. In cases provided for by legislation citizens shall be given legal assistance free of charge.

The organization and procedure of the bar are determined by legislation of the U.S.S.R. and Union Republics.

Article 162

Representatives of public organizations and of work collectives may take part in civil and criminal proceedings.

Article 163

Economic disputes between enterprises, institutions, and organizations are settled by state arbitration bodies within the limits of their jurisdiction.

The organization and manner of functioning of state arbitration bodies are defined in the Law on State Arbitration in the U.S.S.R.

CHAPTER 21.

THE PROCURATOR'S OFFICE

Article 164

Supreme power of supervision over the strict and uniform observance of laws by all ministries, state committees and departments, enterprises, institutions and organizations, executive-administrative bodies of local Soviets of People's Deputies, collective farms, co-operatives and other public organizations, officials and citizens is vested in the Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R. and procurators subordinate to him.

Article 165

The Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R. is appointed by the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. and is responsible and accountable to it and, between sessions of the Supreme Soviet, to the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

Article 166

The procurators of Union Republics, Autonomous Republics, Territories, Regions and Autonomous Regions are appointed by the Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R.

The procurators of Autonomous Areas and district and city procurators are appointed by the Procurators of Union Republics, subject to confirmation by the Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R.

Article 167

The term of office of the Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R. and all lower-ranking procurators shall be five years.

Article 168

The agencies of the Procurator's Office exercise their powers independently of any local bodies whatsoever, and are subordinate solely to the Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R.

The organization and procedure of the agencies of the Procurator's Office are defined in the Law on the Procurator's Office of the U.S.S.R.

VIII. The Emblem, Flag, Anthem and Capital of the U.S.S.R.

Article 169

The State Emblem of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is a hammer and sickle on a globe depicted in the rays of the sun and framed by ears of wheat, with the inscription "Workers of All Countries, Unite!" in the languages of the Union Republics. At the top of the Emblem is a five-pointed star.

Article 170

The State Flag of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is a rectangle of red cloth with a hammer and sickle depicted in gold in the upper corner next to the staff and with a five-pointed red star edged in gold above them. The ratio of the width of the flag to its length is 1 to 2.

Article 171

The State Anthem of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is confirmed by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

Article 172

The Capital of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is the city of Moscow.

IX. The Legal Force of the Constitution of the U.S.S.R. and Procedure for Amending the Constitution

Article 173

The Constitution of the U.S.S.R. shall have supreme legal force. All laws and other acts of state bodies shall be promulgated on the basis of and in conformity with it.

Article 174

The Constitution of the U.S.S.R. may be amended by a decision of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. adopted by a majority of not less than two-thirds of the total number of Deputies of each of its chambers.

ALL-UNION LEGISLATURE

In the Soviet Union laws are enacted exclusively by the higher government bodies—the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. which passes All-Union laws, and the Supreme Soviets of the Union and Autonomous Republics which pass laws effective in the republics concerned. All acts of government bodies must precisely conform to law and may be abolished or altered only by law. A law is considered valid when adopted by both chambers of the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet, by a simple majority of each chamber (laws on amendments of the articles of the Constitution of the U.S.S.R., are adopted by a qualified majority). Validation of a law is preceded by the introduction of a bill by persons or institutions which have the right of legislative initiative. They are published not later than seven days after adoption and go into effect ten days after their publication, unless the law itself indicates otherwise. If a necessity arises to legislate in the interval between the sessions of the Supreme Soviet, this may be done by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet in the form of a special Decree which is subject to subsequent validation by the Supreme Soviet.

The manner in which laws are passed by the Supreme Soviets of the Union and Autonomous Republics is analogous to that in which they are passed by the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet. Unlike All-Union laws, Republican laws are valid only on the territory of the given republic. In cases of discrepancies between a Republic and an All-Union law, the All-Union law assumes superiority. (See also the Constitution.)

SUPREME SOVIET OF THE U.S.S.R.

The Supreme Soviet adopts and repeals laws, sees that the Soviet Constitution is observed, takes decisions on the most important questions of internal and external policy, forms the leading bodies of the State, controls the work of state bodies and officials. It elects the collegiate President, forms the Soviet Government and Council of Ministers, elects the Supreme Court and appoints the Procurator-General; all these bodies are responsible to the Supreme Soviet. It is elected every four years by all citizens of 18 years and over. There are two constituent Chambers, with equal rights.

The Soviet of the Union.

The Soviet of Nationalities.

The Soviet of the Union represents the common interests of all citizens, irrespective of their nationality. The Soviet of Nationalities represents the specific interests of each nation. These two chambers are vested with equal powers to initiate legislation, have equal terms of office, simultaneous sessions. Approval of both chambers is required for a bill to be passed. They have the following permanent Commissions:

Mandate; Legislative Proposals; Planning and Budget; Foreign Affairs; Industry; Transport and Communications; Construction and Building Materials Industry; Agriculture; Public Health and Social Insurance; Education, Science and Culture; Trade and Communal Services; Youth; Nature Protection; Consumer Goods.

The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet is a permanent body elected by a joint meeting of the Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities. It consists of a Chairman, a First Vice-Chairman, 15 Vice-Chairmen, a Secretary and 21 members. It is fully accountable to the Supreme Soviet; between sessions it considers and settles all the main questions of state administration and controls the work of subordinate bodies. Meetings are convened by the Chairman about every two months.

At elections in June 1974, official figures state that over 99 per cent of the electorate voted.

THE SOVIETS OF WORKING PEOPLE'S DEPUTIES

The Soviets of Working People's Deputies represent all sections of the population. The deputies attend sessions to discuss and adopt legislation, take various decisions and participate regularly in running state and public affairs.

POLITICAL ORGANIZATIONS

THE COMMUNIST PARTY

Kommunisticheskaya Partiya Sovyetskovo Soyuza—KPSS (Communist Party of the Soviet Union—CPSU): Central Committee, Staraya pl. 4, Moscow.

The Communist Party was founded in 1903 by V. I. Lenin following a split in the Russian Social Democratic Labour Party at its London Congress into Bolsheviks (Majority) and Mensheviks (Minority). After the October Socialist Revolution (1917) it became the Russian Communist Party. In 1925, following the creation of the U.S.S.R., the All-Union Communist Party of Bolsheviks was formed, uniting various Communist Parties of the Republics of the U.S.S.R. Since 1952 this has been called the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. The Communist Party creatively develops the doctrine of Marxism-Leninism.

The supreme organ of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is the Party Congress which is convened by the Central Committee at least every five years. Congress elects the Central Committee which supervises all Party activities in the intervals between congresses and directs the work of the central state and public organizations through Party groups in them. The Central Committee elects the Political Bureau of the C.P.S.U., the Secretariat and a general secretary, and organizes a Party Control Committee. The Central Committee sets up different Party organs and institutions and guides their activities, appoints the editorial boards of central Party newspapers and journals, allocates and controls Party funds, represents the Party in relations with other parties. It holds plenary sessions periodically to discuss vital problems of Party policy. The work of the Central Committee between plenary sessions is guided by the Political Bureau of the Committee, while the Secretariat of the Committee is responsible for routine work.

The Central Auditing Commission of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is elected by Party congress, supervises the expeditious and proper handling of affairs by the central bodies of the Party, audits the funds of the Central Committee of the C.P.S.U. and controls the work of its institutions (Party schools, publishing houses, etc.). The number of members of the Party Central Committee and of the Central Auditing Commission is determined by the Congress. The 25th Congress in March 1976 elected 287 members and 139 alternate members of the Central Committee and 85 members of the Central Auditing Commission.

Party organization throughout the Soviet Union follows the country's territorial divisions in the Republics. Each Territory, Region and District has a Party Committee representing all its Branches. The Branch is the basic unit, usually embracing all the Party members in a factory, farm or other sizeable institution or group of institutions. The Branch might comprise all the members of a profession (e.g. writers) in a territory. Each Branch has a committee to lead its work and large Branches usually have full-time secretaries. Each of the fourteen Republican Communist Parties has as the supreme Party organ a Congress which elects a Central Committee. The Central Committee elects a Political Bureau and Secretariat. Each Republican Party is ultimately responsible to the Central Committee and Political Bureau of the C.P.S.U.

The C.P.S.U. exercises control over all branches of the national economy and state administration, over all activity of state bodies and public organizations.

Party members are accepted on an individual basis only.

Membership is confined to Soviet citizens over 18 years old accepting the Programme and Statute of the Party, fulfilling Party decisions, paying Party dues and working in one of the Party organizations. A one year candidature is demanded before admission. Each Party member and candidate is given a card. There are about 16.8 million members and 610,000 candidate members. Workers make up 41.6 per cent of the membership of the Party and collective farmers 13.9 per cent.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

THE SUPREME COURT OF THE U.S.S.R.

Chairman of the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R.: L. N. SMIRNOV.

Vice-Chairman: V. V. KULIKOV, S. G. BANNIKOV.

Chairman of the Collegium for Civil Cases: V. E. PANYUGIN.

Chairman of the Collegium for Criminal Cases: E. A. SMOLENTSEV.

Chairman of the Military Collegium: V. LAPUTIN.

The Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. is the highest judicial organ in the U.S.S.R., exercising supervision of the judicial activities of all the judicial organs in the country. It is elected by the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. for a term of five years. The Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. includes (ex-officio) the Chairmen of the Supreme Courts of the Union Republics. The Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. is composed of the Plenum and three Collegia (civil cases, criminal cases and military). The Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R. attends the sessions of the Plenum.

The judicial collegia examine protests, by way of judicial supervision, against the rulings and verdicts passed by the Supreme Courts in Union Republics. The military collegium examines appeals and protests, by way of judicial supervision, against the verdicts of military tribunals in the military districts and fleets. All collegia examine, as courts of first instance, cases of exceptional importance coming within their purview under the law. The rulings, verdicts and resolutions of the collegia could be protested by the Chairman of the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. or the Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R. by filing a protest to the Plenum of the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. The Plenum examines also the protests against the rulings of the Supreme Courts of the Union Republics, the materials pertaining to the summarization of judicial practice and judicial statistics, issues explanations to the courts on questions of application of judicial practice. The Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. makes appropriate representations to the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. on questions regarding the interpretation of the laws. The Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. has the power of legislative initiative. Cases at the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. are examined by a member of the court and two people's assessors, if the case is heard in the first instance. Appeals and protests are examined by three members of the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R.

Supreme Courts are formed in Union and Autonomous Republics. They are the highest judicial organs of these Republics and exercise supervision of the activities of the judicial bodies in the given Republic. (See also Articles 151-163 of the Constitution.)

PROCURATOR

Procurator. Procurator's Offices supervise the strict observance of law by all ministerial and executive bodies, economic institutions, co-operative and public organizations, officials and individuals, through instituting criminal proceedings against guilty persons and protesting decisions infringing upon law; they exercise supervision over the legality of passing and executing sentences and observance of law in places of detention.

The Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R. and procurators subordinate to him effect prosecutions in courts. They have rights to withdraw a case from the trial for purposes of further examination, to appeal against the decisions and verdicts of courts. The participation of the procurator in court proceedings and the rights he enjoys guarantee the observance of law and the rights of the state and citizens.

Procurator's Offices perform their functions independent of any state bodies, they are subordinated only to the Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R.

The Procurator-General is elected by the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet for a term of five years. Procurators of Union and autonomous republics, territories, regions and autonomous regions are appointed by the Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R. for a term of five years, and procurators of towns, districts and areas are appointed by the Procurator of the Union republic. (See also Articles 164-168 of the Constitution.)

Procurator-General: R. A. RUDENKO.

RELIGION

The Council for Religious Affairs: attached to the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R.; Chair. VLADIMIR KUROYEDOV.

According to Article 52 of the Fundamental Law (Constitution) of the U.S.S.R., citizens are guaranteed freedom of conscience, that is, the right to profess or not to profess any religion, and to conduct religious worship or atheistic propaganda. The Church is separated from the State, and the school from the Church.

A religious sect is recognized when it consists of twenty or more adherents over the age of eighteen. Places of worship, seminaries and other requirements are provided and maintained by the voluntary contributions of the adherents themselves. A considerable number of churches of various faiths have been restored since the end of the war, and there are a number of religious seminaries for the training of priests in the various religions practised in the U.S.S.R.

The existing religious cults are: The Russian Orthodox Church, the Georgian Orthodox Church, the Armenian Gregorian Church, the Roman Catholic Church, the Evangelical Lutheran Church, the Evangelical Christian Baptists, the Protestant Church, the Old Believers, the Methodist Church, Seventh Day Adventists, Jehovah's Witnesses, the Molokani, the Moslem communities, the Jewish Religious Community and the Buddhist Religion.

THE RUSSIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH

The Russian Orthodox Church is the biggest single body among the religious cults, and the Moscow Patriarchate publishes its own monthly magazine.

Moscow Patriarchate: Ul. Kropotkinskaya, Chisty per. 5, Moscow.

Patriarch: PIMEN, Metropolitan of Moscow and all Russia.

Holy Synod consists of seven members, four of whom are permanent—Patriarch PIMEN; the Metropolitans of Krutitsa and Kolomna (SERAFIM), Leningrad and Novgorod (NIKODIM), Kiev and Galitsa (FILARET) and Tallin and Estonia (ALEXIV); The Chairman of the Department for Foreign Ecclesiastic Relations of the Patriarchy; Metropolitan NIKODIM and the Patriarchal Administrator; Metropolitan ALEXIV.

The Church is divided into 76 bishoprics, whose boundaries correspond to those of the territories and republics of the U.S.S.R. It also has three exarchates: West European, Central European and American. It maintains a spiritual mission in Jerusalem and representatives in Austria and Hungary. There is a representative of the Alexandrian Orthodox Church in Odessa, and of the Antioch and Bulgarian Orthodox Churches in Moscow. There are two theological academies (the Moscow and Leningrad Academies) and theological seminaries in Moscow and Leningrad.

THE GEORGIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH

The Georgian Orthodox Church is divided into four bishoprics.

Patriarch-Catholicos of All Georgia: DAVID, Tbilisi, Georgian S.S.R.

MOSLEMS

Moslems make up the second largest religious community in the U.S.S.R. The majority are Sunnites with a small number of Shiites, mostly in Azerbaizhan. They are divided into four boards, according to the geographical and historical conditions and the existence of different sects. The four Boards are located at Tashkent (Uzbek S.S.R.), Ufa (Bashkir A.S.S.R.), Baku (Azerbaizhan S.S.R.) and Buinaksk (Daghestan A.S.S.R.). A theological school is maintained in Bukhara.

Chairman of the Moslem Board of Central Asia and Kazakhstan (the biggest single grouping of Moslems, with headquarters in Tashkent): MUFTI ZIYAUDDIN BABAKHANOV.

Chairman of Moslem Board of European Part of the U.S.S.R. and Siberia: MUFTI SHAKIR HIYALITDINOV.

Chairman of Moslem Board for Transcaucasia: SULEYMAN-ZADE ALI AGA.

Chairman of Moslem Board for North Caucasus and Daghestan: MUFTI MOHAMMED KHADJI KURBANOV.

ROMAN CATHOLICS

The Church has an archdiocese, dioceses and parishes in Lithuania, Latvia and W. Byelorussia and Ukraine. There is no single administrative centre.

Metropolitan See of Riga: Apostolic Administrator: Bishop GIULIANO VAIVODS, Riga 47, Pils Iela 2, Latvia.

THE ARMENIAN GREGORIAN CHURCH

Religious centre of the Church of Armenia in the U.S.S.R.—headed by the Supreme Patriarch VAZGEN I, Catholicos of All Armenians—is the ancient city of Echmiadzin. The Church has 26 bishoprics (20 outside the U.S.S.R.). Its main following is in Armenia, Georgia and Azerbaizhan.

OLD BELIEVERS (THE OLD FAITH)

Divided into three branches: the Belokrinitsky Concord, under the Archbishop of Moscow and All-Russia, the Bezpovovtsi Concord and the Beglopovovtsi Concord. Most of the believers are in the central region of Russia, the Ukraine, Byelorussia, Moldavia and the Baltic republics.

EVANGELICAL CHRISTIAN BAPTIST CHURCH

The All-Union Council of Evangelical Christian Baptists unites the Baptist, Evangelical, Pentecostal and Mennonite churches in the Soviet Union. There is a religious centre in Moscow.

Chairman of the All-Union Council: ALEXEI M. BICHKOV; P.O.B. 520, Moscow.

EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH

An episcopal church, with its greatest following in Latvia and Estonia.

Primate of Estonia: Archbishop A. T. TOOMING.

Primate of Latvia: Archbishop Y. P. MATULIS.

SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS

There are independent religious communities in a number of regions of the Soviet Union.

JUDAISM

There is no administrative centre, but many independent communities exist in Moscow, Kiev, and other parts of the Ukrainian and Byelorussian Republics, particularly in Lvov and Minsk, as well as in the Jewish Autonomous Region (R.S.F.S.R.), which has many Jewish settlers. There is a yeshiva (Orthodox Jewish Seminary) in Moscow.

BUDDHISM

Buddhism is most widespread in the Buryat Autonomous Republic, where the Central Religious Board has its seat, the Tuva Autonomous Republic and the Irkutsk and Chita Regions.

Chairman of the Central Religious Board: Bandido-Khambo Lama Z. D. GAMBOYEY.

THE PRESS

Newspapers and periodicals in the Soviet Union are owned and published by various public or collective organizations, including the Communist Party, the central and local Soviets (district, city and rural councils), trade unions, co-operatives, ministries, planning organizations, cultural bodies, educational and learned institutions of all kinds, and finally, factories and collective farms. These publications cover national, provincial and local interests. Pravda, the largest newspaper in the Soviet Union, is printed in 40 cities; in contrast, the smallest local dailies are no more than bulletins posted on official notice-boards for public reading.

Lenin's dictum that "the Press is the most strong and powerful weapon of the Party" is the basis of the Soviet attitude to its newspapers and periodicals. Lenin believed that the Press is powerful as an organizer of the people, rallying them to the Communist cause. The purpose of the Soviet press is to disseminate the ideas of Marxism-Leninism and to present information on life in the Soviet Union and abroad. It is its duty to encourage a proper attitude to work, an attachment to the Soviet Union and a high sense of social responsibility. In so far as no newspaper is permitted to publish anything harmful to the State or to the Communist cause, a form of censorship exists, but its use is rarely evident since the system provides reliable editors who are Party members, well acquainted with Communist ideology. Senior editors are very well paid.

Owing to the predominantly political nature of the Soviet Press it may appear dull to Western readers. Stories are generally of a serious nature concentrating on international and government affairs; topics outside this sphere are considered trivial. There are very few entertainment features, and personalities are generally played down. Editorials are on serious topics and are given prominent positions. Most reporting has a bias towards the Party line. Newspapers, however, are improving in appearance, with careful layout and an increasing use of photographs.

In general the Soviet Press is remarkably popular and produces about 8,000 newspapers and 6,900 journals and other periodicals. The most influential daily is Pravda (circ. 10,600,000), which is published 365 days a year and has a staff of over 40,000 correspondents. It is the organ of the Central Committee of the Communist Party and is essential reading for all serious Party members. It tends to stress internal matters while Izvestia (circ. 8.6 million), the Government newspaper, is more concerned with foreign affairs. Among the more important periodicals are Ogonyok and Kommunist, devoted mostly to internal problems, Novoye Vremya, Za Rubezhom and Mezhdunarodnaya Zhizn, which deal with international matters, Krokodil, a lively satirical magazine, Novy Mir, the most influential literary journal, and Zhurnalist, published by the Union of Journalists.

The main news agency, TASS, plays an important role in distributing by radio or telegraph foreign and domestic news to newspapers throughout the republics; it also transmits Pravda editorials. Much of the control of the Soviet Press is effected through strict supervision of the news agency.

PUBLISHING

There are 217 publishing houses, all under the control of the State Committee for Publishing, Printing and Bookselling; of these 56 serve the whole Union, 97 serve the Union Republics, 20 serve Autonomous Republics or Regions, and 44 serve the territories and districts. The majority of publishers cover a special field of subject matter, the leading publishers being Nauka which covers all sciences and the humanities; Mir dealing with scientific and technical books; Khudozhestvennaya Literatura publishing fiction; Prosveshchenie educational books; Meditsina, Progress and Detskaya Literatura. Republican and Regional publishers issue books and booklets of local interest.

Publishing houses function under the auspices of trade unions, the Communist Party, Young Communist League, Novosti Press (for distribution mainly for distribution abroad) and Religious organizations and societies also publish their own books. The U.S.S.R. Writers' Union has its own publishing houses, the largest being Sovietshy Pisatel (Soviet Writer). The Union publishes 14 journals and 73 fiction magazines centrally, as well as 60 literary magazines in the national republics and areas. There are no private publishing houses in the U.S.S.R.

All branches of publishing (books, periodicals, newspapers), means of production (printers, paper industry), and means of distribution (bookshops, libraries) are either directly or indirectly supervised by the State Committee. The Committee is composed of three editorial boards dealing with, respectively, social and political literature, fiction, and technical and scientific literature. Subject experts, such as members of the Academy of Sciences, the Union of Soviet Writers, or the Ministry of Higher Education, are consulted on the choice of manuscripts for production, and proposals for publication of certain works often originate from these bodies. The three editorial boards are composed largely of editors from the various publishing houses so that, although all proposed publications must be approved by the State Committee, the publisher still influences choice of material at this level.

Publishers plan their programmes a year in advance, forwarding a list of proposed publications to the State Committee which co-ordinates all the lists to prevent duplication. When a publisher's list has been approved, a sample number of copies is printed and distributed to prospective customers—booksellers, libraries, schools. Customers return an estimate of the number of copies they will require, the books are printed, and distributed by Soyuz Kniga, the state distributive organ, which has a centre in each region of the U.S.S.R.

Most bookshops in the U.S.S.R. belong to Soyuz Kniga with the notable exception of chains controlled by "Nauka" and "Sovietshy Pisatel". Inter-regional fairs are arranged where surplus stock is sold off at full price, the principle being to re-direct the right material to the right customer. There are 14,000 bookshops (selling nothing but books) besides 34,000 book kiosks (controlled by the bookshops) operating in factories, schools, and offices.

Book prices are fixed by government decree according to the type of book; educational and children's books are priced low, adult fiction higher. Most of the Soviet libraries buy their stock from Soyuz Kniga, thus profits gained from a flourishing library market benefit the service given to customers through the bookshops.

An author incurs no expenses involved in publishing his book. He is entitled to royalties dependent on the size, edition and nature of the book and each publishing house signs an appropriate contract with the author. To further cultural co-operation, the U.S.S.R. became party to the Berne Convention or the Universal Copyright Law following a law passed in February 1973. The Soviet Union will now recognize a foreign copyright only if the work is sent abroad "by a procedure established by legislation" and unauthorized foreign publication will be stopped.

The Soviet Union is the largest book producer in the world, accounting for one-quarter of all books produced in the world. During 1971-75 414,000 books were published, in 89 languages spoken in the U.S.S.R. and in 50 foreign languages.

The TV relay system covers an area that includes four-fifths of the country's population. The total telecasting time averages 1,900 hours a day. There are six central TV channels with a total operating time of 46 hours a day.

In 1977 there were 2,000 television stations and transmitters, and 130 television centres. Eighty-one cities have 2 channels, and in 14 capitals of Union republics programmes are presented in national and Russian languages. Moscow has 6 and Leningrad 3 channels. Moscow I operates 12 hours every day. Moscow II operates for 6 hours daily. Moscow III operates 4 hours daily. Moscow IV operates for 3½ hours on weekdays and Moscow V (colour) for 20 hours. Colour television is received in 120 cities.

A new branch of television in the U.S.S.R. is cosmovision through which the flights of Soviet cosmonauts are shown. Communications satellites of Molniya type are used for the exchange of television programmes between Moscow, Vladivostok and other cities. Through this chain, experimental colour programmes are transmitted between Moscow and Paris based on the Soviet-French SECAM colour system.

TRADE UNIONS

In the U.S.S.R. there are 30 branch trade unions with a total membership of over 113.5 million (1977).

The trade unions take an active part in the social and political life of the country. They participate in the elections to organs of state power—they have the right to nominate candidates for election to Soviets; in drafting laws on production, labour, living conditions and culture; they draw broad sections of working people into industrial management, in particular through the establishment of standing production conferences. The unions prevent the violation of labour laws, settle labour disputes, conclude collective agreements with the managements of industrial enterprises, and ensure that these are fulfilled; they help factory and office workers improve their professional skills and organize training facilities for active trade union members.

The trade unions operate the system of state social insurance, the budget of which amounted to 34,600 million roubles in 1975. They keep a check on housing and the allotment of apartments, and concern themselves generally with questions of cultural and day-to-day services for the population.

The trade unions are organized on the industrial principle, i.e. all persons employed at the same factory or office belong to the same union, each trade union comprises the employees of one or several branches of the national economy.

The trade unions have a centralized organization headed by the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions (A.U.C.C.T.U.), which convenes a Congress every five years. The last (16th) Congress took place in March 1977. The Congress elects the Central Council, which exercises authority until the next Congress. In the regions, territories, union republics and cities, the work of trade union organizations is co-ordinated by trade union councils.

TRANSPORT

RAILWAYS

Ministry of Railways: Moscow, Novo-Basmanaya 2; Minister IVAN PAVLOVSKY. Administers the railways through 26 railway boards located in the important towns.

The railway network totals 138,500 km. By the end of 1976 almost all lines were converted to electric and diesel traction. The railways carry 60 per cent of all freight. Electrification has been completed on the 5,500 km. (3,438 miles) line between Moscow and Baikal, on the 3,500 km. (2,125 miles) between Leningrad, Moscow, and Lenakan and on the 1,800 km. (1,125 miles) between Moscow, Gorky and Sverdlovsk. The total freight turnover of the U.S.S.R. amounted to 3,295,000 million ton-km. in 1976 and 3,545 million passengers were carried.

ROADS

Main highways connect Moscow with Kiev, the Crimea, Leningrad, Minsk, Riga and Warsaw, the Caucasus, Kazakhstan, Alma-Ata, Frunze and Tashkent, and with parts of Siberia.

The total length of roads is 1,405,600 km., of which 689,700 km. are hard-surfaced (1976).

INLAND WATERWAYS

Each Republic controls its own waterways: total length about 145,000 km. River transport has always been of great importance to the U.S.S.R., and in those areas where railway lines are few it is essential. In 1976 river vessels carried about 145 million passengers. The main inland waterway systems are those of the Volga, Dnieper, Don, Ob, Yenisei, Lena, Amur and Amu-Darya. The Volga with its tributaries is the largest system and carries nearly half the cargoes; it is linked by canals to the Don and the Black Sea, the Baltic and the White Sea. The main terminal ports on the Volga-Don system are Astrakhan, Rostov-on-Don, Moscow, Perm and Leningrad; the main transfer ports are Volgograd, Saratov, Kuibyshev, Kazan, Gorky and Yaroslavl.

River-ports in Siberia improved under the 1951-55 Plan included Omsk, Novosibirsk and Irkutsk. Kotlas and Pechora, in North Russia, have also been improved.

PRINCIPAL CANALS

Moscow-Volga Canal: 128 km. long; installations include 9 locks, 8 power stations, 5 pumping stations. It was completed in 1937, taking over four years to construct.

White Sea-Baltic Canal: 227 km. long; built in 1933, connecting the two seas.

Dnieper-Bug Canal: 202 km. long; connects the Ukraine and Byelorussia with the Baltic countries.

Kara-Kum Canal: connects the Amu Darya, Tedzhen and Murgab rivers and Ashkhabad; 850 km. long.

North-Crimean Canal: 400 km. long; irrigates the Crimean steppes with water from the Dnieper.

Volga-Baltic Canal: 362 km. long; re-constituted 1964; links five seas: the Baltic, White, Black, Caspian and Azov seas; instead of 39 locks of the old Mariinsky system there are now seven locks.

Volga-Don Canal: 101 km. long; completed May 1952.

Donets-Donbas Canal: in the Ukraine, approx. 120 km. long; completed November 1958; trebles water supply of biggest Soviet industrial area.

Golodnaya Step Canal (Hungry Steppe Canal): in the Uzbek S.S.R., 1,300 km. long; irrigates this largely desert region; first section of 60 km. completed in 1960.

SHIPPING

The Soviet Union has one of the largest merchant fleets in the world. It has 50 steamship lines, each specializing in a particular shipping operation. In 1977 the total displacement of the Soviet fleet reached an estimated 22,067,892 gross tons, making it the sixth largest in the world after Liberia, Japan, the United Kingdom, Norway and Greece.

Soviet companies are full members of a number of freight conferences such as Continent-Australia, Australia-Continent and the United Kingdom, Mediterranean-Canada Westbound Conference, North Atlantic Passenger Conference. In 1973 the U.S.S.R. shipping companies operated 73 regular lines, including 51 international lines. Scheduled shipping reached a total of 19 million tons.

THE UNION REPUBLICS

(R.S.F.S.R.)

INTRODUCTION

The R.S.F.S.R., which was formed on November 7th, 1917, and joined the U.S.S.R. on December 30th, 1922, has an area of 17,075,400 sq. km. extending from the Baltic Sea and the Arctic Ocean in the north to China and Mongolia in the south and the Pacific Ocean in the east. It embraces 16 Autonomous Republics, 5 Autonomous Regions and 10 National Areas; there are also 6 territories (krai) and 49 regions (oblasts). It is the biggest of the Union Republics in size and population. Out of the total population of the R.S.F.S.R. of 135,569,000 (January 1st, 1977), 82.8 per cent are Russians, 3.7 per cent Tartars, 2.6 per cent Ukrainians and 1.3 per cent Chuvash (census 1970). There are over 60 other nationalities in the R.S.F.S.R. Moscow, the capital, has a population of 7,819,000 (1977). Other major towns include the seaports of Leningrad on the Baltic, Archangelsk on the Arctic and Vladivostok on the Sea of Japan.

AGRICULTURE

In 1976 about 10 million people were engaged in agriculture on 12,871 collective farms and 10,624 state farms. The Republic has a diversified agriculture owing to differing conditions over the vast area. The main crops are cultivated everywhere except in the northern area. Sown areas of the R.S.F.S.R. constitute 60 per cent of the sown area of the U.S.S.R. and in 1975 the total yield of grain crops was 58 per cent of that of the U.S.S.R. As for other crops, sugar beet comprised 26 per cent of the total yield in the U.S.S.R., sunflower 50 per cent, flax 40 per cent, potatoes 49 per cent and vegetables 44 per cent. In livestock the R.S.F.S.R. produced 50 per cent of meat, 53 per cent of milk, 58 per cent of eggs and 48 per cent of wool. Bee-keeping, fur farming and reindeer breeding are developed in some regions.

THE ARMENIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

The Armenian Republic was formed on November 29th, 1920 and joined the U.S.S.R. on December 30th, 1922. It has an area of 29,800 sq. km. and a population of 2,894,000 (January 1st, 1977). Of these 88.6 per cent are Armenians, 5.9 per cent Azerbaizhanians, 2.7 per cent Russians and 1.5 per cent Kurds (census 1970). Yerevan, the capital, has a population of 956,000 (1977). Armenia is a country of high mountains and fertile valleys, situated in the southern part of Transcaucasia. To the west, Armenia has a land frontier with Turkey and, to the south, a short frontier with Iran.

THE AZERBAIZHAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

The Azerbaijan Republic was formed on April 20th, 1920 and joined the U.S.S.R. on December 30th, 1922. It has an area of 86,600 sq. km. and a population of 5,786,000 (January 1st, 1977). Of these, 73.8 per cent are Azerbaijanians, 10 per cent Russians and 10 per cent Armenians. Baku, the capital, has a population of 1,435,000 (1977). The Republic includes Nakhichevan Autonomous Republic and Nagorno-Karabakhskaya Autonomous oblast.

The Azerbaijan Republic occupies the eastern part of Transcaucasia facing the Caspian Sea. The greater part of the Republic includes the lowlands of the River Kura and the lower reaches of its tributary, the Araks. The Republic juts out into the Caspian Sea, forming the oil-rich Apsheron Peninsula. To the south is a frontier with Iran.

THE GEORGIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

The Georgian Republic was formed on February 25th, 1921 and joined the U.S.S.R. on December 30th, 1922. It has an area of 69,700 sq. km. and a population of 4,999,000 (January 1st, 1977). Of these, 66.8 per cent are Georgians, 9.7 per cent Armenians, 8.5 per cent Russians, 4.6 per cent Azerbaijanians, 3.2 per cent Ossetians and 1.7 per cent Abkhazians (census 1970). Tbilisi, the capital, has a population of 1,042,000 (1977). The Georgian Republic includes the Abkhazian Autonomous Republic (capital Sukhumi), the Adzharian Autonomous Republic (Batumi), and the South-Ossetian Autonomous Region (Tskhinvali). The Republic is situated in West Transcaucasia on both sides of the Suram range. A humid sub-tropical zone with luxuriant evergreen vegetation stretches along the Black Sea coast. There is a short frontier with Turkey in the south.

AGRICULTURE

Georgia's main crop is tea, accounting for 95 per cent of the Soviet Union's total output. The Republic also grows almost all the Soviet Union's tangerines and lemons and is renowned for its grapes, wines, tobaccos, essential oils and mineral waters. In areas where crops are grown, particularly near industrial centres and on the Georgian highlands, stock is raised for meat, milk and wool.

In 1974 there were 573,000 persons engaged in agriculture on 1,159 collective farms and 269 state farms.

THE KAZAKH SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

The Kazakh Republic was formed as an Autonomous Republic within the Russian Federation on August 26th, 1920, and reconstituted as a Union Republic on December 5th, 1936. It has an area of 2,717,300 sq. km. and a population of 14,527,000 (January 1st, 1977). Of these, 32.6 per cent are Kazakhs, 43.2 per cent Russians, 7.2 per cent Ukrainians and 2.2 per cent Tatars (1970 census). The population density is 5.1 persons per square kilometre. Alma Ata, the capital, has a population of 871,000 (1977). In size the Kazakh Republic (Kazakhstan) is second only to the Russian Federation. It extends from the Volga to the Altai Mountains and from the Siberian plains to the Central Asian deserts. Kazakhstan has a frontier with the People's Republic of China to the south-east.

The number of towns and industrial communities in Kazakhstan has increased greatly in recent years. The Kazakh settlement of Baikonur, in the heart of the Steppes, is world famous as the launching place of the Soviet spaceships.

THE KIRGHIZ SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

Kirghizia was made an Autonomous Republic on February 1st, 1926, and attained the status of a Union Republic on December 5th, 1936. It has an area of 198,500 sq. km. and a population of 3,451,000 (January 1st, 1977). Of these, 43.8 per cent are Kirghiz, 29.2 per cent Russians, 10.6 per cent Uzbeks, 4.1 per cent Ukrainians and 2.4 per cent Tatars (1970 census). Frunze, the capital, has a population of 511,000 (1977). The Kirghiz Republic is situated at the junction of two gigantic mountain systems, the Tien-shan and the Pamirs, and is noted for its severe natural beauty and amazing range of climate. In the south-east there is a frontier with the People's Republic of China.

AGRICULTURE

The Kirghiz were formerly wandering herdsmen. They have now settled on the land, taken up agriculture and built up their own industry. Kirghizia produces wheat, cotton, tobacco, southern hemp, kenaf, essential oil plants and poppy. Grape- and fruit-growing and silkworm breeding also have an important place in the economy.

Livestock raising is the main branch of agriculture. The wealth of the Republic is made up of its herds of cattle, flocks of fine-fleece sheep and droves of horses.

In 1974 there were 329,000 people engaged in agriculture on 225 collective farms and 121 state farms.

THE LATVIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

Latvia became part of the Soviet Union on August 5th, 1940, the Republic having been constituted on July 21st of that year. It has an area of 63,700 sq. km. and a population of 2,512,000 (January 1st, 1977). Of these, 56.8 per cent are Letts, 29.8 per cent Russians, 4 per cent Byelorussians, 2.7 per cent Poles and 2.3 per cent Ukrainians (census 1970).

Riga, the capital, has a population of 816,000 (1977). The Latvian Republic is situated in the north-west of the Soviet Union, between Lithuania and Estonia on the Baltic coast. It is bounded on the east by the R.S.F.S.R. and on the south-east by Byelorussia.

1975	14.0	12.1

Latvia is a maritime country and fishing plays a big part in its economy. The Letts now catch fish not only in the Baltic but also in the Atlantic near the coasts of Canada and Africa. There has been a considerable increase in the amount of fish caught and in the output of tinned fish (herring and sprat). The raising of livestock is also important and this is the reason for the growing number of food factories, creameries and cheese factories. In many districts there are collective farms which raise poultry and keep bees. The Republic also has silver fox and mink farms.

In 1974 there were 241,000 people engaged in agriculture on 556 collective farms and 235 state farms.

THE MOLDAVIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

The Moldavian S.S.R. was formed as an Autonomous Republic on October 12th, 1924, and joined the U.S.S.R. on August 2nd, 1940. It has an area of 33,700 sq. km. and a population of 3,896,000 (January 1st, 1977). Of these, 64.6 per cent are Moldavians, 14.2 per cent Ukrainians, 11.6 per cent Russians, 3.5 per cent Gagauzi, 2.7 per cent Jews and 2.1 per cent Bulgarians (census 1970). Kishinev, the capital, has a population of 489,000 (1977). Moldavia is situated in the south-west of the Soviet Union, with Romania to the west.

AGRICULTURE

Moldavia contributes a quarter of the grape crop in the Soviet Union, half of the rose oil, and holds second place in tobacco production, after the Ukraine. In addition to grapes and fruit, the Republic raises high-grade winter wheat, maize (which is the main grain crop), sunflower (the biggest industrial crop) and also hemp, soya beans and essential-oil plants. The growth of production of fruit, grapes, vegetables and sugar beet has led to greater development in the food industries. Thus, Moldavia is one of the country's biggest producers of grape wines and also makes vast quantities of canned foods.

In 1974 there were 742,000 people engaged in agriculture on 481 collective farms and 239 state farms.

THE TURKMEN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

The Turkmen Republic was formed on October 27th, 1924. Turkmenia, the southernmost republic in the Soviet Union, is situated in the south-west of Central Asia. It is bounded on the north by the Kazakh S.S.R., on the north-east by the Uzbek S.S.R., on the south by Iran, and the south-east by Afghanistan. To the west lies the Caspian Sea. The Republic has an area of 488,100 sq. km. and a population of 2,652,000 (January 1st, 1977). Of these, 65.6 per cent are Turkmen, 14.5 per cent Russian, 8.3 per cent Uzbeks and 3.2 per cent Kazakhs (1970 census).

The Kara-Kum, one of the largest Central Asian deserts, occupies more than four-fifths of the territory and irrigation is therefore of prime importance to this desolate land. The capital, Ashkhabad, has a population of 302,000 (1977). The mostly densely populated districts are the valleys of the rivers Amu-Dar'ya and Murgab and the foothills of Kopet-Dag, and the oases of Khorezm, Tedzen, Atrek and Ashkhabad, where there are up to 300 inhabitants per sq. km. It is extremely sparse in the vast desert lands. However, the discovery of rich mineral deposits has caused many settlements to develop even in the most arid districts.

AGRICULTURE

Agricultural areas occupy almost half of the territory. By mid-1977 more than 960 km. of the Great Kara-Kum Canal had been completed, from the Amu-Dar'ya river to Geok-Tepe. It supplies water for Ashkhabad and has already provided irrigation for more than 160,000 hectares of desert land; it is also used for shipping. Thanks to its special climatic conditions, Turkmenia is able to grow large quantities of long-staple cotton. Sowing and cultivating operations are fully mechanized. Sheep-breeding is also important.

In 1974 there were 294,000 people engaged in agriculture on 330 collective farms and 55 state farms.

AGRICULTURE

The Ukraine is the second most productive agricultural area of the Soviet Union as the warm climate and black earth give high yields of diverse crops—wheat, sugar beet, maize and sunflower. About a quarter of the industrial crops and more than a quarter of the meat and milk in the Soviet Union is produced in the Ukraine.

In 1974 there were 5,300,000 people engaged in agriculture on 8,740 collective farms and 1,635 state farms.

THE UZBEK SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTION

The Uzbek Republic was formed on October 27th, 1924. It has an area of 447,400 sq. km. and a population of 14,485,000 (January 1st, 1977). Of these, 65.5 per cent are Uzbeks, 12.5 per cent Russians, 4.9 per cent Tatars, 4.0 per cent Kazakhs, 3.8 per cent Tadzhiks and 2.0 per cent Kara-Kalpaks (census 1970). Tashkent, the capital, has a population of 1,689,000 (1977). The Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic of Kara-Kalpakiya (capital Nukus) is part of the Uzbek Republic. Uzbekistan is situated in the south-eastern part of the Soviet Union, in the heart of Central Asia, and has a short frontier with Afghanistan in the south. Turkmenia lies to the south-west, Kazakhstan to the north, Kirghizia to the east and Tadzhikistan to the south.

THE UNITED KINGDOM

GREAT BRITAIN

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Great Britain is the largest of the islands forming the United Kingdom. It comprises England, Scotland to the north and Wales to the west. It is separated from the coast of western Europe by the English Channel to the south and by the North Sea to the east. The northern and western shores are washed by the Atlantic Ocean. Ireland lies to the west across the Irish Sea. Climate is temperate and variable. The language is English, but Welsh is spoken fairly extensively in Wales. The Church of England is the established church in England. Other large Christian denominations are Roman Catholicism, Methodism, Presbyterianism, Congregationalism and the Baptists. The national flag (proportions 2 by 1), known as the Union Jack, is a superimposition of the red cross of Saint George of England, the white saltire of Saint Andrew of Scotland and the red saltire of Ireland, all on a blue background. The capital is London.

Recent History

After the Second World War, reconstruction of the economy and the establishment of peace-time international relations took first priority. Labour gained a large majority in the general election of 1945 and a smaller one in 1950. Sweeping social reforms were enacted, including the establishment of the National Health Service and the nationalization of major industries and services. In 1951 a Conservative government was formed by Winston Churchill. The Conservatives were to stay in power, forming five consecutive ministries, until 1964.

Britain sought a new role in international affairs in the light of the emergence and ideological confrontation of the two "superpowers", the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R. The Suez crisis of 1956, and international condemnation of British intervention in the Middle East, marked the end of direct involvement in the affairs of other sovereign states. In response to nationalist aspirations, independence was granted to India and Pakistan in 1947 and thereafter to the majority of Britain's former colonies. Most remained members of the Commonwealth and increased their multi-lateral relations.

In 1964 Harold Wilson formed a Labour government with a small majority. Labour were re-elected in 1966, but in 1970 a Conservative government under Edward Heath was returned. Economic rather than ideological issues dominated administrations during this period as successive Chancellors of the Exchequer struggled with balance of payments problems and the continued international role of sterling.

The United Kingdom became a full member of the European Economic Community in January 1973. In the election campaigns of 1974, Labour undertook to renegotiate British terms of entry and to hold a referendum on continuing membership, which in June 1975 endorsed British membership. Legislation for the direct election of a European Parliament was due to be introduced in 1977/78.

Direct rule from London was introduced in Northern Ireland in March 1972. At the end of 1973 direct rule was replaced by government under an Executive of 15 members from the three main parties in Northern Ireland. This Executive collapsed in May 1974 and the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland assumed responsibility for the Government (see Northern Ireland, page 1412). During 1974 the Irish Republican Army (IRA) terrorist campaign was extended to Great Britain with increased intensity, leading to the introduction in November of anti-terrorist measures and the outlawing of the IRA. At the end of 1977 proposals were being considered by the major Ulster parties for a measure of Northern Ireland autonomy on transport, planning and the environment.

Successes by the Scottish National Party in the 1974 elections, when they gained 30 per cent of the Scottish vote, the second highest of any party, speeded central government's promises of more autonomy for Scotland and Wales. In late 1977 legislation for Scottish and Welsh assemblies and the devolution of some of Westminster's powers to them was going through Parliament and was expected to occupy most of that session. Before the bills were enacted a referendum was expected to be held in Scotland and Wales.

Following the failure of Heath's appeal for a mandate for his economic measures in the general elections of February 1974, Harold Wilson formed a minority government. In the October 1974 elections Labour achieved a small majority, but this had been reduced to a majority of one by October 1976. Harold Wilson resigned as Prime Minister in April 1976 and was succeeded by James Callaghan, formerly Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. The new Labour government was immediately put to the test by an unprecedentedly serious monetary crisis and the need to avoid defeat in the House of Commons.

In return for the modification of some Labour policies such as the imposition of a sales tax on petrol, the Government came to an agreement with the Liberal Party, which was renewed for the 1977/78 session of Parliament. The Liberal Party lost a proportion of its support through its pact with Labour, losing votes in by-elections.

In 1977 there were violent scenes in London as large numbers of police and pickets repeatedly clashed outside a film processing laboratory over the right of pickets to interrupt the entry of non-striking workers into the factory. The Government also faced industrial unrest from the civil service, the police and firemen after it insisted on a firm ceiling of 10 per cent for wage rises. The firemen went on strike in November, and troops were brought in to fight fires.

Government

The United Kingdom is a constitutional monarchy. The Sovereign is Head of the State and the monarchy is hereditary. Parliament consists of the House of Commons and the House of Lords. The 635 members of the Commons are elected for a maximum of five years by direct suffrage by all citizens of 18 years and over, using single-member constituencies. The House of Lords is composed of hereditary Peers of the Realm and Life Peers and Peeresses created by the Sovereign for outstanding public service. Legislation may be initiated in either House but it usually originates in the Commons. Each bill has three readings in the Commons and it is then passed to the House of Lords who may return it to the Commons with amendments or suggestions. The House of Lords cannot prevent any bill from becoming law once it has been passed by the Commons. Executive power is vested in the Cabinet headed by the Prime Minister.

Defence

Britain is a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and maintains a regular army. The total strength of the armed forces at July 1977, including women's services and those enlisted outside Britain, was 339,150 (navy 76,700, army 175,250, airforce 87,200). There is no compulsory military service. Britain possesses a nuclear deterrent. Defence expenditure for 1977/78 is estimated at £6,298 million.

Economic Affairs

Britain is one of the world's leading industrial and exporting countries. In 1975 over 30 per cent of the United Kingdom's Gross Domestic Product came from manufacturing. Among the principal industries are those producing iron and steel, engineering, chemicals, electronics, motor vehicles, aircraft, textiles, clothes and other consumer goods. The coal, gas, electricity and atomic energy industries are nationalized as are the railways, shipbuilding and the largest civil aviation group.

Petroleum was first discovered under the bed of the North Sea in 1970 and production began in 1975. By 1977 seven fields were on-stream, producing over 800,000 barrels per day of high-quality oil, almost half of domestic requirements, and giving royalties to the Exchequer of over £66 million in 1976. The Government, through the British National Oil Corporation, acquired the right to buy the majority of the oil produced, and took measures to reduce wastage of gas. Large coal deposits were discovered in 1977 under the North Sea and in three mainland fields, extending expected energy self-sufficiency into the 1990s.

Although Britain's agriculture and trawler-fishing are highly mechanized, half of the country's food supplies and most of its raw materials are imported. Britain maintains a large passenger, cargo and oil tanker merchant fleet. At June 30th, 1976, Britain's merchant shipping fleet totalled 32,923,000 gross tons, the third largest in the world, and accounted for more than 10 per cent of world trade.

Although Britain achieved steady economic growth from the end of the Second World War, this declined steadily in relation to other European countries, so that by the early 1970s its per capita G.N.P. was 10 per cent below the European average. Attempts to achieve higher levels of growth by stimulating demand led to repeated crises in the balance of payments and consequent squeezes on credit.

Britain was affected by the world slump which followed the 1973 rise in oil prices. As the recession deepened in 1974 and 1975, production declined, unemployment rose and wages soared in response to the declining value of the pound and rising prices. The Government introduced anti-inflation measures in July 1975 and, with the co-operation of the trades unions and business organizations, agreed a limit on wage rises. This agreement was continued in June 1976, with the result that incomes declined 1.5 per cent in real terms over 1976 and by June 1977 had reached their lowest point for four years, while retail prices rose by 15.1 per cent over 1976. Unemployment rose to 1,278,000 in June 1976 and over a million children were in families dependent for their income on supplementary benefit.

There were, however, indications of economic recovery from 1977 onwards. Manufacturing investment, which by 1976 was down 22.4 per cent on 1970 in real terms, showed signs of reviving. In January 1977 an international "safety net" was announced to support Britain's reserves if they fell below U.S. $6,750 million and international confidence in the pound was restored by management of the economy on lines recommended by the IMF. Interest rates dropped steadily, and in July the authorities relaxed their intervention in the foreign exchange market, allowing the pound to "float" upwards against the dollar and other currencies. Record numbers of tourists, the increasing flow of oil royalties and a recovery on the stock market brought the prospect of a surplus in the balance of payments in 1977 and a return to single-figure inflation in 1978. The flow of money into Britain became so strong that British reserves became the third largest in the world, and the Government's control of the money supply was threatened.

Although unemployment continued to rise, to 1,356,700 in August 1977, domestic inflation slowed sharply in the autumn, helped by record vegetable harvests and lower import prices. Public sector borrowing requirements were less than forecast, allowing the Government to announce in October measures worth £1,000 million which took 900,000 people out of the tax-paying category and were designed to reduce unemployment in 1978/79.

Transport and Communications

Railways in Britain cover some 18,562 route kilometres. Of these British Rail operate 18,007 route kilometres. In 1976 British Rail carried 708 million passengers and 178 million metric tons of freight. The London Transport Executive operates by far the largest urban passenger transport undertaking in the world and in 1976 its buses carried 1,423 million passengers while its Underground, the oldest and most extensive in the world, operated over 380 route kilometres and carried 546 million passengers. Total road length in Great Britain was 333,418 kilometres in 1976, including 2,226 kilometres of motorways. In 1976, road transport accounted for 65 per cent of freight movement and 91 per cent of passenger travel. Navigable inland waterways extend for just over 4,000 kilometres. There are over 300 ports, of which London, Liverpool, Southampton, Tees, Milford Haven and Immingham are the busiest. Britain is linked to the continent of Europe by an extensive passenger and vehicle ship ferry service. British Rail, besides having a fairly large share of this business, also runs two hovercraft services which carry passengers and vehicles to France. In addition to many international air services into and out of the country an internal air network operates from 21 main commercial airports.

Social Welfare

The National Insurance Scheme was started in 1948 and is run by the Department of Health and Social Security, through 545 local offices; the Department of Employment acts as agents in administering unemployment benefit. The scheme is compulsory for most people over 16 and under minimum pension age (which is 65 for men, 60 for women). Employers and employees make earnings-related contributions. The scheme insures against loss of income due to sickness, unemployment and maternity and provides retirement pensions and widows' benefits, maternity benefits, child and guardian allowances, death and industrial injury benefits.

Child benefit is payable for all children, and certain one-parent families are entitled to an extra allowance for their first or only child. The family income supplement is payable to families with at least one child, where the head of the family is in full-time employment and where the family income is below a certain level. Mobility allowance for those unable to walk, attendance allowance for those in need of constant supervision and invalid care allowance for those attending them are among provisions for the severely disabled.

The National Health Service is a comprehensive health service, not based on an insurance scheme, which everyone ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom may use. Apart from charges (from which there are certain exemptions) for such things as prescriptions, dental treatment and spectacles, the service is free. Most of the cost of the service is met from taxation, the remainder (about a tenth) being made up from the proportion of national insurance contributions allocated to the health service. In the financial year ending March 31st, 1976, the gross cost of health and personal social services in Great Britain was £6,441 million.

Education

Education is compulsory from the age of 5 to an appropriate school-leaving date in relation to the 16th birthday.

Secondary education generally begins at the age of 11 and, in the state-maintained system, is given in grammar schools, secondary modern schools and comprehensive schools. Since the mid-1960s there has been a steady replacement of the grammar and secondary modern schools, admission to which is based on a test of ability, by a system of comprehensive schools to which all pupils are admitted without any assessment of their ability. In some areas comprehensive schools are organized for an age-range of 11 to 16, with sixth form colleges for pupils between 16 and 19; there are about 75 such colleges. About 79 per cent of the secondary school population in England and Wales attend over 3,000 comprehensive schools. Alongside the state system, there are fee-paying schools including "public schools", many of which are boarding schools and most of which award scholarships to suitable pupils; numerous private schools, some independent and some run by charitable trusts or churches; and direct grant grammar schools, which have in the past received grants from the Department of Education and Science but which, since the phasing out of the system started in September 1976, have either entered the maintained sector or are becoming fully independent. The General Certificate of Education (G.C.E.) Ordinary Level may be taken (usually at the age of 16) in as many subjects as a candidate wishes. The G.C.E. Advanced Level, generally taken two years later, qualifies for entrance to higher education. The Certificate of Secondary Education (C.S.E.) is taken by pupils completing five years of secondary education but who are not up to G.C.E. standard.

Further Education: There are about 580 institutions providing vocational and academic courses, on a full-time, part-time and sandwich basis. Three-year teacher training courses and one-year postgraduate teaching courses are provided in institutions of further and higher education and in departments of education in universities and polytechnics.

University Education: Although five G.C.E. passes including two at Advanced Level are normally the minimum requirement for university entrance, the decision to admit students is made by a university according to its own requirements. The first degree course normally lasts three years and leads to a Bachelor of Arts or Sciences (B.A. or B.Sc.) degree. There are 45 universities, including two business schools, plus an Open University which provides degree courses by means of television, radio, correspondence and summer schools.

Responsibility for providing education other than in universities rests with the local education authorities. The Department of Education and Science only sets standards of educational provision, controls the cost of educational building, and the training and supply of teachers. Government finance to the universities is administered through the Universities Grants Committee.

Public expenditure on United Kingdom education was £8,204 million in 1976/77, equivalent to 7.3 per cent of the Gross National Product.

Tourism

Tourism plays a significant part in the economy. In 1976, 10,089,000 visits were made by foreign residents to Britain. Receipts from international tourism totalled £2,156 million in 1976, including £528 million in fares paid to British carriers. The chief attractions are the country's history and traditions and the beauty of the countryside.

In 1969 the British Tourist Authority was established as a statutory organization with particular responsibilities for attracting tourists from overseas. In addition, English, Scottish and Wales Tourist Boards were set up to encourage tourist development in and the growth of visitors to their areas.

Visas are not required for nationals of the following countries: all countries in Central and South America, all members of the EEC, all countries of the Commonwealth, Algeria, Andorra, Austria, Bahrain, Finland, Greece, Iceland, Iran, Israel, the Ivory Coast, Japan, the Republic of Korea, Kuwait, Liechtenstein, Maldives, Monaco, Morocco, Niger, Norway, Portugal, Qatar, San Marino, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Tunisia, Turkey, the U.S.A. and Yugoslavia.

Sport

Many kinds of sport are popular in Britain. Football (Association and Rugby) is played everywhere. Cricket is regarded as England's national game, and it is played much less in Scotland and Wales. Other popular recreations are golf, tennis, athletics, fishing, boating, swimming, horse racing and motor racing. A Sports Council was formed early in 1965 to advise the government on training and facilities for sport.

Public Holidays

1978: March 24th (Good Friday), March 27th* (Easter Monday), May 1st (May Day), May 29th (Spring Holiday), August 7th†, August 28th*, December 25th (Christmas), December 26th* (Boxing Day), December 26th† (for May Day).

1979: January 1st (New Year's Day).

* Excluding Scotland.

† Scotland only. Dates of Spring and late Summer holidays vary throughout Scotland.

Weights and Measures

The imperial system of weights and measures is in force; conversion to the metric system is in progress.

Weight:

1 pound (lb.) = 16 ounces (oz.) = 453.59 grammes
14 pounds = 1 stone = 6.35 kilogrammes
112 pounds = 1 hundredweight (cwt.) = 50.8 kilogrammes
20 hundredweights = 1 ton = 1,016 kilogrammes.

Length:

1 yard (yd.) = 3 feet (ft.) 36 = inches (in.) = 0.9144 metre.
1,760 yards = 1 mile = 1.609 kilometres.

Capacity:

1 gallon = 4 quarts = 8 pints = 4.546 litres.

Currency and Exchange Rates

100 new pence = 1 pound sterling (£).

Exchange rates (October 1977):

£1 = U.S. $1.77;

U.S. $1 = 56.35 pence.

Imports c.i.f.	8,317	9,040	9,825	11,143	15,852	23,234	24,128	31,155
Exports f.o.b.	7,352	8,076	9,187	9,759	12,505	16,600	19,921	25,769

* Figures relate to the imports c.i.f., including landing charges, and the exports (including re-exports) f.o.b., excluding purchase tax, of the whole United Kingdom (including Northern Ireland) plus the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands. The coverage includes certain goods imported and exported temporarily (such as animals for breeding and racing or commercial samples on loan) and German War reparations in kind (except ships and boats). Figures exclude trade in gold, aircraft and sea-going vessels (except ships for breaking up and newly-built vessels and aircraft) and stores for naval, military and air forces carried on government vessels. Imports also exclude fissionable materials (including uranium ore and concentrates), the improvement and repair trade in aircraft, and naval, military and air equipment imported from the U.S.A. under the Mutual Defence Assistance Agreement. Exports also exclude military aircraft delivered to foreign armed forces stationed in the United Kingdom, fish landed abroad directly from British fishing vessels and certain minor categories of military goods on government account. No adjustment has been made for the under-recording of exports (£20 million in 1973; £82 million in 1974; £77 million in 1976).

THE CONSTITUTION

THE United Kingdom is a Constitutional Monarchy. In the ninth century, when England was first united under a Saxon King, the Monarchy was the only central power and the Constitution did not exist. To-day, the Sovereign acts on the advice of her Ministers which she cannot, constitutionally, ignore; power, which has been at various times and in varying degrees in the hands of kings, feudal barons, ministers, councils and parliaments, or of particular groups or sections of society, is vested in the people as a whole; and the Sovereign is an essential part of the machinery of government which has gradually been devised to give expression to the popular will.

Both the powers of the Government and the functions of the Sovereign are determined by the Constitution, by the body of fundamental principles on which the State is governed and the methods, institutions and procedures which give them effect. But the United Kingdom has no written Constitution. There is no document, no one law or statute, to which reference can be made. The Constitution is organic; it is an accumulation of convention, precedent and tradition which, although continually changing as the times change, is at any one moment binding and exact.

Some of the principles and many of the practices are secured by Statute, some are avowed by Declaration or Manifesto and many are incorporated in the Common Law; the Reform Bill of 1832 dramatically broadened the basis of representative government and prepared the way for further changes; the Bill of Rights of 1689 ended the long era of rivalry between Crown and Parliament and began the story of their co-operation; and Magna Carta, in 1215, began the process by which the law of the land acquired a status of its own, independent of King and Parliament and, as Professor G. M. Trevelyan has put it, "gave expression to the spirit of individual liberty as it has ever since been understood in England." But the Constitution is above all based on usage. It has been, and will continue to be, moulded and modified to match changing customs and to meet successive situations. Any one Parliament could, if it chose, revise or repeal every law and disown every convention that has constitutional significance. It could destroy the whole fabric of political and social existence, including its own; because, according to the Constitution, Parliament, which represents the people, is supreme. The work of one Parliament is not binding on its successors, except in so far as changes must be made by constitutional means. Parliament cannot disobey the law, but it can change it.

It would be impossible to enumerate the principles which are extant in the British Constitution. It would also be misleading, because declarations of general principles are quite out of character. In constitutional as in legal practice, the way has been to admit the general principle in quite practical terms related to specific practical problems: the Habeas Corpus Act, which establishes the principle of no imprisonment without trial, makes no mention of the principle itself but lays down in most concrete terms the punishments that shall be inflicted on a judge, or other law officer, if he fails to issue the Writ (commanding the prisoner to be brought before the court) when applied for. The principles of the Constitution and constitutional practice are in fact inherent in the Common Law on the one hand and in the structure, functions and procedures of the various instruments of government on the other: of the Crown, of Parliament, of the Privy Council, of the Government and the Cabinet and of the Government Departments.

THE SOVEREIGN

The monarchy is hereditary, descending to the sons of the Sovereign in order of seniority or, if there are no sons, to the daughters.

Her constitutional position as head of the state, quite apart from her position as Head of the Commonwealth, demands of the Queen that she keep herself informed on all aspects of the life of her subjects, that she maintain absolute impartiality and that she should personally visit the different parts of her realm as often as it is possible for her to do so, but she has also quite specific functions, all exercised on ministerial advice: she summons, prorogues and dissolves Parliament; she must give Royal Assent to a Bill which has passed through both Houses of Parliament, before it becomes law; she is head of the judiciary (although the judiciary is now quite independent of the executive); she appoints all important state officials, including judges, officers of the forces and representatives abroad, and she confers honours and awards. Her formal consent is necessary before a Minister can take up office or a Cabinet be formed; and before a Treaty may be concluded, war declared or peace made. These are some of the more essential functions. But the Queen has also endless residuary responsibilities, such as the guardianship of infants and persons of unsound mind, the creation of corporations, granting of printing rights for the Bible and Prayer Book and for state documents; and her signature and consent are necessary to many important state papers. Constitutional government cannot in fact be carried on without her, so much so that provision has been made by Act of Parliament for the appointment of a Regent should the Sovereign be incapacitated or under age and for Counsellors of State to act in the temporary absence of the Queen.

PARLIAMENT

The Queen in Parliament—the House of Commons and the House of Lords—is the supreme legislative authority in the United Kingdom. Under the Parliament Act of 1911 the maximum life of one Parliament was fixed at five years; if, that is, Parliament has not meanwhile been dissolved for any other reason, such as the fall of the government in power, then a general election is at the end of five years necessary by law. During its lifetime, the power of Parliament is theoretically absolute; it can make or unmake any law. In practice, of course, it must take account of the electorate. Parliament is prorogued at intervals during its life, which therefore consists of a number of sessions; by present custom, a session has normally 160 sitting days and is divided into five periods: from November (when the session is opened) until Christmas (about 30 days), from January till Easter (50), from Easter till Whitsun (30), from Whitsun until the end of July (40) and 10 days in October.

The House of Commons. The House of Commons has 635 members, each elected for one geographical constituency. The Speaker, who is elected by the members immediately a new parliament meets, presides. Members of Parliament may be elected either at a general election or at a by-election (held in the event of the death, resignation or expulsion of the sitting member) and in either case hold their seats during the life of the existing parliament. All British subjects over 18 (and subjects of any Commonwealth country and of the Irish Republic who are resident in the United Kingdom) have the vote unless legally barred (e.g. for insanity). Anyone who has the vote may stand as a candidate for election except clergymen of the Church of England, the established Churches of Scotland and Northern Ireland and the Roman Catholic Church, and certain officers of the Crown; Civil Servants must resign from the Service if they wish to stand as a Member of Parliament.

The House of Lords. There are over 1,000 peers who have the right to a seat in the House of Lords, including Princes of the Royal Blood (who, by tradition, take no part in the proceedings); hereditary peers of England and of the United Kingdom (peerages created since the Act of Union of England and Scotland of 1707 are all peerages of the United Kingdom); several Lords of Appeal in Ordinary (appointed for life to carry out the judicial duties of the House); Scottish peers; created life peers and life peeresses; and the two archbishops and the twenty-four senior bishops of the Church of England. All except the spiritual, judicial and life peerages are hereditary. The Lord Chancellor is the Speaker of the House. The 1963 Peerage Act made three main amendments to the Constitution: (1) An hereditary peerage may be disclaimed by the holder for the duration of his lifetime. The peerage can be reclaimed at his death by his heir, but he himself cannot reclaim it. (2) All Scottish peers, instead of only sixteen representatives, and (3) peeresses in their own right, may take their seats in the House of Lords.

The Party System. Members of Parliament whose views coincide form groups which agree in each case to support the policies put forward by their chosen leaders, and to present a common front on all important issues both in Parliament and to the electorate. This system evolved during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries and is now essential to the working of the British Constitution.

Under the party system, the Queen sends for the leader of the party which wins the majority of seats (although not necessarily of votes) at a general election and asks him to form a Government. The party which wins the second largest number of seats forms the Opposition, which has quite specific functions. Members of other minority parties and independents may support the Government or Opposition as they choose. Each party has its own Whips, officials whose duty it is to arrange, in consultation with the Whips of other parties, matters of procedure and organization, to see to it that Members attend debates and to muster for their party its maximum voting strength, and each has its own national and local organizations outside Parliament.

Parliamentary Procedure. Parliamentary procedure, like the Constitution itself, is determined by rules, customs, forms and practices which have accumulated over many centuries. The Speaker is responsible for their application, and generally for controlling the course of business and debates in the house.

It is the duty of Parliament to make the laws which govern the life of the community, to appropriate the necessary funds for the various services of state and to criticise and control the Government. Parliament is also consulted before the ratification of certain international treaties and agreements.

Legislation may with some exceptions be initiated in either House and on either side of the House. In practice, most Public Bills are introduced into the House of Commons by the Government in power (the chief exceptions are Private Members' Bills) as the result of Cabinet decisions. Each Bill which is passed by the Commons at its third reading is sent to the House of Lords, who either accept it or return it to the Commons with suggested amendments. The Lords cannot in any instance prevent Bills passed by the Commons from becoming law: over Money Bills or Bills affecting the duration of Parliament they have no power at all, and by the Parliament Act of 1949 any other Bill passed by the Commons in two successive sessions may be presented for Royal Assent without the consent of the Lords provided one year has elapsed between the date of the second reading in the Commons and the date of its final passing. In practice, the House of Lords is extremely unlikely to push things thus far, and its main function is to scrutinize the work of the Commons, to caution and suggest. Bills of a non-controversial kind are sometimes introduced initially in the House of Lords.

THE PRIVY COUNCIL

The power of the Privy Council has declined with the development of the Cabinet and its main function to-day is to give effect to decisions made elsewhere. There are at present over 300 Privy Counsellors, including Cabinet Ministers (who are automatically created Privy Counsellors), and people who have reached eminence in some branch of public affairs. Meetings are presided over by the Queen, and the responsible Minister is the Lord President of the Council, an office which since 1600 has always been held by a member of the party in power, who is usually also a leading member of the Cabinet. The Privy Council is responsible for making Orders in Council, of which there are two kinds, those made in virtue of the Royal prerogative, e.g. the ratification of treaties, and those which are authorized by Act of Parliament and are in fact a form of delegated legislation. It has also various advisory functions which cover such subjects as scientific, industrial, medical and agricultural research. An important organ of the Privy Council is the Judicial Committee.

HER MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

The Government is headed by the Prime Minister, who is also the leader of the Party which holds the majority in the House of Commons. It includes Ministers who are in charge of Government departments and those who hold traditional offices which involve no special departmental duties; the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Lord Chancellor, who are specially responsible for financial and economic, and legal affairs respectively, the law officers of the Crown (the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General, the Lord Advocate for Scotland and the Solicitor-General for Scotland), the Ministers of State, who are usually appointed to assist Ministers in charge of departments, and Parliamentary Secretaries and Under-Secretaries.

The Cabinet. The Cabinet system developed during the eighteenth century from the informal meetings of Privy Counsellors who were also Ministers and who formed a committee of manageable size which, it was gradually realized, could take decisions far more quickly and simply than larger bodies. The cabinet to-day has between 15-25 members at the discretion of the Prime Minister—its main duty is to formulate policy for submission to Parliament.

Ministerial responsibility. The doctrine of ministerial responsibility has also evolved gradually but was generally accepted by the middle of the last century. Each Minister must take full responsibility for the work of his own department, particularly in Parliament; if his department fails over any important matter, he will be expected to resign. Ministers also assume collective responsibility for the work of the Government and for any advice which it may offer to the Crown.

The aims of the Conservative Party are to uphold religion, preserve the Constitution, and to strengthen the free association of the Commonwealth; to maintain, in collaboration with other like minded nations, defence forces adequate for the preservation of freedom and prevention of war; to work for peace by international disarmament; to provide financial and technical aid to raise the conditions of under-developed territories; to provide freedom and opportunity by supporting free enterprise and initiative against Socialist systems of state-trading and nationalization; to improve the standards of life by economic policies which preserve full employment, promote expanding trade and production, maintain national solvency, and encourage thrift and an ever wider spread of ownership of property; to promote greater educational opportunities at all levels; to ensure that the old share in rising living standards; to promote better health by good housing and slum clearance, and a modern hospital system.

The Labour Party: Transport House, Smith Square, London, SW1P 3JA; f. 1900; 669,187 individual mems.; 5,757,183 union-affiliated mems. (1975); Gen. Sec. R. G. HAYWARD, C.B.E.; National Agent H. R. UNDERHILL.

Leader: JAMES CALLAGHAN.

The British Labour Party is a democratic socialist party. Its central ideal is the brotherhood of man. Its purpose is to make this ideal a reality everywhere. It rejects discrimination on grounds of race, colour or creed, stands for the right of all peoples to freedom, independence and self-government, pledges itself to support the United Nations Charter and to work for world disarmament. It affirms the duty of richer nations to assist poorer ones, stands for social justice and the creation of a socialist community with a classless society and planned economy. It stands for democracy in industry and the expansion of common ownership, the protection of all citizens from any exercise of arbitrary power. It seeks to obtain and hold power only through free democratic institutions.

Relations with the Trades Union Congress and the Co-operative movement are maintained through the National Council of Labour, representing the T.U.C. General Council, the National Executive of the Labour Party (Chair. JOAN LESTOR), the Parliamentary Labour Party and the Co-operative Union.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

There are three sources of the law as administered in the law courts today: Statute Law, which is written law and consists mainly of Acts of Parliament, Common Law, which originated in ancient usage and has not been formally enacted, and Equity.

Scottish common and statute law differ in some respects from that current in the rest of the United Kingdom, owing to Scotland's retention of her own legal system under the Act of Union with England of 1707.

Two factors help to ensure a fair trial: the independence of judges, who are outside the control of the executive and can be removed from office only after an address from Parliament to her Majesty; and the participation of private citizens in all important criminal and some civil cases, in the form of a summoned jury of twelve persons, who judge the facts of a case. The judge decides the law. The jury verdict in both criminal and civil cases is a majority verdict system.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS or PETTY SESSIONS

The criminal courts of lowest jurisdiction are presided over by Justices of the Peace, who are unpaid laymen appointed by the Lord Chancellor. They have power to try all non-indictable offences, and some of the less serious indictable offences, if the accused so desires. The trial of nearly all criminal offences begins in the Magistrates' Court. The vast majority of committals for trial are carried out under the Criminal Justice Act of 1967, which does not require the magistrate to consider the evidence.

There are only a few cases in which full committals of the pre-Justice Act era are now necessary.

In London and in certain other large towns there are professional salaried magistrates, known as metropolitan stipendiary magistrates in London and as stipendiary magistrates in the provinces, who sit alone, whereas lay justices cannot when acting judicially.

Juvenile Courts, composed of specially qualified justices selected by the justices of each petty sessional division (in London, by the Lord Chancellor), have power to try most charges against children under seventeen. The general public is excluded and there are restrictions on newspaper reports of the proceedings.

Magistrates also have power to grant, renew, transfer or remove or order the forfeiture of licences for the sale of intoxicating drinks, and to control the structural design of licensed premises where intoxicating liquor is sold for consumption on the premises.

COUNTY COURTS

A high proportion of civil actions are tried in these courts, which are presided over by a paid judge, sitting alone. Subjects coming under the jurisdiction of County Courts include rent restrictions, certain cases under the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1954, and all civil cases where the sum in dispute is not more than £1,000. The jurisdiction may be increased by the consent of the parties and in certain other special cases. Some County Courts also have jurisdiction in divorce matters, and undefended divorce cases are heard by a Judge in these Courts.

CROWN COURTS

Crown Courts came into force on January 1st, 1972 under the Courts Act 1971 and replace Quarter Sessions and Assizes, abolished by the Act. They sit at various centres throughout the country but, at the Lord Chancellor's direction, they may sit anywhere. The country has been divided into six administrative circuits, each including all three tiers of the Crown Courts. Crimes calling for the severest penalties, such as life imprisonment, are tried in the first tier Crown Courts which, outside London, also deal with civil cases. The Crown Court for the City of London is the Central Criminal Court (Old Bailey). High Court Judges or Circuit Judges preside over the first and second tier courts, Circuit Judges or Records over the third, where less serious offences are heard.

Appeals from the Crown Court in respect of criminal matters go to the Criminal Division of the Court of Appeal and in civil matters to the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE

Certain civil cases are heard in the three divisions of this court—Chancery, Queen's Bench and Family. The Chancery Division deals with litigation about properties, family trusts, companies, dissolution of partnerships and disputed estates. The Queen's Bench Division hears cases involving damage to property, personal injuries etc. and also includes the Admiralty Court. The Family Division hears contested or complex divorce and separation cases and matters relating to children such as adoption, wardship, guardianship of minors.

The judges of these three divisions have the title of Justice of the High Court.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL

It is the highest court of appeal on certain issues concerning United Kingdom dependent territories, some former dependent territories and, in a few instances, the United Kingdom. The Lord Chancellor selects a board of three or five from the Committee by invitation for each particular case.

SCOTTISH JUDICIAL SYSTEM

CRIMINAL COURTS

Minor offences are dealt with in District courts.

SHERIFF COURT

Most criminal actions, including all but the most serious offences, are tried in this court. Each of the six sheriffdoms of Scotland has a Sheriff Principal and a number of Sheriffs, who hear the cases.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICIARY

The supreme criminal court in Scotland and all the most serious criminal cases are taken there. Appeal may be made to it from the Sheriff Court and from the District courts; there is, however, no further appeal to the House of Lords.

The judges of this court are known as Lords Commissioners of Justiciary and are headed by the Lord Justice General. Apart from their criminal jurisdiction in this court, these same twenty-one judges are also judges of the Court of Session (see below) in civil cases. The Lord Justice General is also the President of the Court of Session.

CIVIL COURTS

SHERIFF COURT

Tries civil as well as criminal cases, and in civil cases its jurisdiction is practically unlimited. Appeal may be made to the Court of Session.

COURT OF SESSION

This is the supreme civil court in Scotland. It has an Inner House and an Outer House.

INNER HOUSE. Has two divisions of equal standing, each consisting of four judges under the presidency of the Lord President and the Lord Justice Clerk respectively, is mainly an appeal court, whence further appeal may be made to the House of Lords.

First Division:

Lord Justice General and President of the Court of Session:

Rt. Hon. Lord EMSLIE.

Judges:

Hon. Lord CAMERON
Hon. Lord JOHNSTON

Rt. Hon. Lord AVONSIDE

Second Division:

Lord Justice Clerk: Rt. Hon. Lord WHEATLEY.

Judges:

Rt. Hon. Lord HUNTER
Hon. Lord KISSEN

Hon. Lord ROBERTSON

OUTER HOUSE. Deals with the major civil cases and all divorce actions.

The judges are those of the High Court of Justiciary, sitting in a civil capacity as judges of the Court of Session.

Judges:

Hon. Lord THOMSON
Rt. Hon. Lord STOTT
Hon. Lord DUNPARK
Hon. Lord GRIEVE
Hon. Lord BRAND
Hon. Lord KINCRAIG
Hon. Lord MAXWELL

Hon. Lord McDONALD
Rt. Hon. Lord WYLIE
Hon. Lord STEWART
Hon. Lord ROSS
Hon. Lord ALLANBRIDGE
Hon. Lord COWIE

RELIGION

British Council of Churches: 10 Eaton Gate, London, S.W.1; f. 1942; 50 mem. bodies; Pres. Archbishop of Canterbury; Gen. Sec. Rev. H. O. MORTON; publ. One World (ten a year).

THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND

The Church of England is the Established Church, and as such acknowledges the authority of Parliament in matters in which secular authority is competent to exercise control. Queen Elizabeth I was declared "supreme Governor on Earth" of the Church of England, and the Sovereign is consecrated to this office at coronation.

In England, there are two Provinces, Canterbury and York. The former contains 29, the latter 14, dioceses. Each Province has its ancient Convocations, an Upper and Lower House. By the Enabling Act the Constitution of the National Assembly of the Church of England ("Church Assembly") received statutory recognition in 1920, with power, subject to the control and authority of Parliament, of initiating legislation on all matters concerning the Church of England. Measures passed by the Assembly and approved by Parliament, are submitted for the Royal Assent, and have the force of Acts of Parliament.

In 1970 by the Synodical Government Measure 1969 the Church Assembly was reconstituted as the General Synod and was also given authority to exercise most of the functions of the Convocations. The House of Bishops consists of members of the Upper House of the Convocations (52 persons). The House of Clergy consists of the members of the Lower Houses (a maximum of 251 persons). The House of Laity consists almost entirely of representatives of the dioceses elected by the deanery synods (a maximum of 251 persons).

The estimated membership of the Church of England in 1977 was 27 million (baptized), 2 million (on parish electorate).

Sec.-Gen. of the General Synod: W. D. PATTINSON.

Office: Church House, Dean's Yard, London, S.W.1.

The Archbishops and the 24 senior Bishops sit in the House of Lords.

Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate of All England and Metropolitan: Most Rev. and Rt. Hon. Dr. DONALD COGGAN.

Archbishop of York, Primate of England and Metropolitan: Most Rev. and Rt. Hon. STUART Y. BLANCH.

THE CHURCH IN WALES

The Province of Wales was created as a result of the Welsh Church Act of 1914, which took effect on March 31st, 1920, and separated the four Welsh Dioceses from the Province of Canterbury. It is divided into 6 Dioceses served by 860 clergy. The number of Easter communicants is approximately 133,000.

The Church in Wales has an administrative Governing Body which is a legislative assembly composed of bishops, clergy and laity, and a Representative Body incorporated by Royal Charter, which holds and manages the property and central funds of the Church.

Office: 39 Cathedral Road, Cardiff. Lay Sec. of the Governing Body B. V. DAVIES; Clerical Sec. of the Governing Body Rev. J. C. MEARS; Sec. and Accountant of the Representative Body W. R. JONES.

Archbishop of Wales: Most Rev. GWILYM OWEN WILLIAMS.

ROMAN CATHOLIC

The Roman Catholic population of England and Wales is estimated at 4,190,550 (1976).

of British converts. The chief concentrations of Muslims are in London, the Midlands, South Wales, Lancashire and Yorkshire. There are numerous mosques in the United Kingdom of which the oldest and best established is the Shah Jehan Mosque at 149 Oriental Rd., Woking, Surrey; work began in 1973, and was expected to be completed in 1978, on the London Central Mosque and the Islamic Cultural Centre at 146 Park Rd., London, N.W.8; Dir. H.E. The Raja of Mahmudabad; publ. The Islamic Quarterly.

BUDDHISM

The Buddhist Society: 58 Eccleston Square, S.W.1; f. 1924; Founder-Pres. CHRISTMAS HUMPHREYS; Gen. Sec. BURT TAYLOR; publ. The Middle Way (quarterly).

THE PRESS

(Except where otherwise stated, addresses are in London.)

The United Kingdom has the world's third highest newspaper circulation per head of population, and boasts some of the highest circulation figures for individual newspapers (The Daily Mirror 3.9 million, The Sun 3.7 million, News of the World 4.9 million). Daily newspaper readership is dominated by nine dailies with a national distribution and combined circulation of over 13 million.

There is no law which specifies the operations of the Press but several items of legislation bear directly on press activities.

Although exact reporting of legal proceedings appearing at the time of trial is protected from later charges of defamation, the freedom to report cases is subject to certain restrictions as defined in the Judicial Proceedings Act of 1926, in the Children's and Young Persons' Act of 1933 and in the Criminal Justice Act 1967.

The strict laws of contempt of court and of libel somewhat limit the scope of the Press. Journalists are subject to the former if they publish material liable to interfere with a matter which is sub judice, but this law is qualified by the Administration of Justice Act of 1960 which declares an editor not guilty of contempt if, after taking reasonable care, he remained ignorant of the fact that proceedings were pending. The Scottish law of contempt is more severe than the English.

In recent years libel cases involving the awarding of extremely punitive damages against the Press have taken place. The Defamation Act of 1952 lessened the possible repercussions of unintentional libel and made provision for the claim of fair comment by the defence.

The Official Secrets Act of 1911 prohibits the publication of secret information where this is judged not to be in the national interest. The Secretary of State is empowered to require a person with information about a violation of the Act to disclose his source. Journalists have no exemption here.

The publication of morally objectionable and harmful material is treated in the Children's and Young Persons' (Harmful Publications) Act of 1955 and in the Obscene Publications Act.

In recent years legislative measures have been taken to limit the excessive development of concentrations of newspaper ownership and the extent of the control by newspaper owners over other mass media such as the television. The Television Act of 1964 provides for intervention by the Postmaster-General or the Independent Television Authority where investments by newspaper owners in television companies are judged liable to lead to abuses. The Monopolies and Mergers Act of 1965 requires the written consent of the Board of Trade for the transfer of daily or weekly papers with an aggregate average of over 500,000 copies per day of publication. The Board's decision is based on the conclusions of the Monopolies Commission to which, with exception of cases of papers judged to be uneconomical and of papers with an average daily circulation of no more than 25,000 copies, all cases are referred for investigation.

The Press Council is a non-statutory association of newspaper editors, publishers, journalists' organizations and lay members which though having no legal powers has acquired considerable standing as an adjudicating body on Press conduct.

Although many British newspapers are owned by individual publishers the great rate of news consumption has fostered the growth of large national groups or chains of papers controlled by a single organization or individual. The six largest of these chains are as follows:

Associated Newspapers Group Ltd.: Carmelite House, E.C.4; Chair. Hon. VERE HARMSWORTH; controls 2 national dailies (The Daily Mail and The Evening News) and one national weekly (Weekend); and through the Northcliffe Newspaper Group Ltd. 12 evening papers, 1 morning paper and several weeklies; the Northcliffe Group also has holdings in a further 5 provincial dailies (4 evening and one morning).

Beaverbrook Newspapers: Fleet St., E.C.4; subsidiary of Trafalgar House; Pres. Sir MAX AITKEN, Bt.; Chair. and Chief Exec. VICTOR MATTHEWS; controls The Daily Express, The Evening Standard (London), and The Sunday Express.

Mirror Group Newspapers Ltd.: 33 Holborn, E.C.1; Chair. EDWARD PICKERING; Deputy Chair. and Chief Exec. PERCY ROBERTS; controls two national daily papers (The Daily Mirror, The Sporting Life), two national Sunday papers (The Sunday People, Sunday Mirror), provincial newspapers (including two Scottish national papers Daily Record and Sunday Mail).

News Group Newspapers Ltd.: 30 Bouverie St., London, E.C.4; Chair. RUPERT MURDOCH; controls The Sun and The News of the World.

The Thomson Organisation Ltd.: P.O.B. 4YG, 4 Stratford Place, W1A 4YG; Chair. Lord THOMSON of Fleet; controls 30 daily and weekly papers (including The Times and The Sunday Times) in England, 9 (including The Scotsman) in Scotland, 13 in Wales and 4 in Northern Ireland, and 45 magazines in England.

United Newspapers Publications Ltd.: 23-27 Tudor St., EC4Y 0HR; Chair. Lord BARNESON; controls 9 provincial dailies (7 evening and 2 morning), one bi-weekly and 30 provincial weekly papers.

No newspaper is directly owned by a political party. The Morning Star, closely related to the British Communist Party, is effectively owned by the People's Press Printing Society, a co-operative society with 30,000 mems. Several influential newspapers are owned and operated by trusts or independent companies, notably The Observer and The Economist.

Among the most influential newspapers may be included: The Times, The Guardian, The Daily Telegraph and The Financial Times (daily), The Observer, The Sunday Times and The Sunday Telegraph (Sunday newspapers). Outstanding among the popular press are: The Daily Mirror, The Daily Express and The Sun (daily), The Sunday Mirror, The News of the World and The Sunday People (Sunday newspapers), Woman and Woman's Own (weekly magazines), which together with The Radio Times and the TV Times represent the most widely distributed newspapers and magazines.

THE PRESS COUNCIL

1 Salisbury Square, London, E.C.4.

The Press Council, a voluntary body consisting of an independent chairman, ten lay-members and twenty members nominated by the Newspaper Publishers Association, the Newspaper Society, the Scottish Daily Newspaper Society, the Scottish Newspaper Proprietors' Association, the Periodical Publishers Association, the National Union of Journalists, the Institute of Journalists and the Guild of British Newspaper Editors, was set up in June 1953 and reconstituted in July 1963 and July 1973. Its principal aims are to safeguard the freedom of the Press, to maintain its highest professional and commercial standards, to deal with any complaints it may receive about the conduct of the Press or of any persons towards the Press, to keep under review developments likely to restrict the supply of information of public interest and importance and to report publicly on developments that may tend towards greater concentration or monopoly in the Press.

Chairman: Rt. Hon. The Lord SHAWCROSS, G.B.E., Q.C.

Director: N. S. PAUL.

The Authority was created by Parliament in 1954 as the Independent Television Authority, to provide a comprehensive television service additional to that of the

UNITED KINGDOM (GREAT BRITAIN)

Radio and Television

BBC. Under the terms of the Sound Broadcasting Act 1972, the Authority was renamed the Independent Broadcasting Authority and its functions extended to cover the provision of Independent Local Radio.

The Authority selects and appoints the programme companies; supervises the programmes provided by the contractors and their scheduling; controls the advertising, and builds, owns and operates the transmitting stations. Fifteen television programme companies provide programmes in the 14 independent television regions of the United Kingdom (two companies share the contract for London). Nineteen Independent Local Radio stations provide a programme service in 18 areas of the United Kingdom (two companies operate in London). Both services are financed by the sale of advertising time.

RADIO

BBC

Domestic services

BBC Radio provides a service of four national networks throughout the United Kingdom, 20 local radio stations in England, and Radio Scotland, Radio Wales, Radio Cymru, broadcasting in Welsh, and Radio Ulster.

Radio 1 on 247 metres broadcasts about 12 hours a day of "pop" music programmes.

Radio 2 on 1500 metres and stereo VHF provides "middle of the road" music.

Radio 3 on 464 metres and stereo VHF provides classical music, drama, talks and documentaries.

Radio 4 on medium wave and VHF is a mixed network including entertainment and drama, and the main channel for the coverage of news and current affairs. Schools programmes are broadcast on Radio 4 VHF.

New frequencies were planned for Radio 1, 2, 3 and 4, to come into effect in November 1978.

External services

The World Service (in English), broadcast for 24 hours daily and directed to all areas of the world in turn. In addition there are special services to:

The Far East	In Burmese, Cantonese, Indonesian, Japanese, Standard Chinese, Malay, Thai, Vietnamese.

FINANCE

The United Kingdom's central bank is the Bank of England, which was established by Act of Parliament and Royal Charter in 1694 and nationalized under the Bank of England Act 1946. The Scottish and Northern Ireland banks issue their own notes but these are largely covered by holdings of Bank of England notes.

The Bank of England is responsible for advising the Government on the formulation of monetary policy and for its subsequent execution. It holds the main government accounts, acts as registrar of government stocks and as agent of the Government for a number of financial operations, including the management of the Exchange Equalization Account, and for the administration of Exchange Control. It is also banker to a number of commercial banks. The London clearing banks maintain a substantial proportion of their total cash holdings in the form of balances at the Bank and these are used in the settlement of the daily cheque and credit clearings.

The commercial banks may be divided into two broad categories: clearing banks and other banks.

The clearing banks are divided into the six London clearing banks, which cover England and Wales, the three Scottish clearing banks and the four Northern Ireland banks. These banks play the main part in operating the money transmission system throughout the U.K. At mid-September 1976 the London clearing banks held deposits totalling approximately £28,000 million, the Scottish clearing banks some £3,000 million, and the Northern Ireland banks about £900 million.

The other banks can be divided into accepting houses (taking their name from their business of accepting bills of exchange for payment) and other U.K.-owned banks, overseas-owned banks and consortium banks. The accepting houses and some of the U.K.-owned banks are specialists in bill finance, new issues and company finance.

Consortium banks have been formed in the U.K. by groups of banks, mostly from overseas, but include British clearing banks anxious to expand their merchant banking activities. The consortium banks and many overseas banks are especially active in the Euro-currency markets which have developed rapidly in recent years. Many of the U.K. and overseas banks have large investments in the United Kingdom local authority market and participate in the large inter-bank market in sterling and currency deposits and certificates of deposit. Unlike the clearing banks, nearly all do not seek to provide a money transmission service, but prefer to deal in large sums on behalf of relatively few customers.

The Discount Houses are a specialized group of institutions peculiar to London. The eleven member Houses raise the greater part of their funds from within the banking sector. These funds are borrowed by the Houses at call or short notice (thereby providing the lending banks with a highly liquid interest-bearing investment) and are used to purchase correspondingly liquid assets—mainly Treasury and commercial bills, short-dated government stocks, certificates of deposit, local authority debt, etc.

As a result of England's lead in international trade and finance during and after the industrial revolution, several countries tended to use sterling rather than their national currency for international trading transactions and maintained their central currency reserve in London. These countries pegged their currency exchange rate to the pound sterling when the gold standard was abandoned by the United Kingdom in 1931; the pound was devalued by 30.5 per cent in 1949, and by 14.3 per cent in 1967. In June 1972 the pound was floated and, by October 1977, it had not returned to a fixed parity. Since 1958 sterling has been, for non-residents, freely transferable and convertible into other currencies. The United Kingdom's official reserves, comprising gold, convertible currencies and special drawing rights on the International Monetary Fund, are held in the Exchange Equalization Account operated since 1932 by the Bank of England as agent for the Treasury.

The London Gold Market evolved in the days of the Australian and Canadian gold rushes in the 19th century, and it remains the leading free market of the world. There are five members of the Market who are present at the two daily price fixings, although all authorized banks may (but rarely do) deal in the commodity.

The building society movement is important both as a medium of savings (the largest in the U.K.) and for the finance of house purchase in a country where over 50 per cent of dwellings are owner-occupied. There were 354 societies in June 1977, of which ten accounted for over 60 per cent of funds invested by the public in this way.

National Savings are shared between the Department for National Savings and the Trustee Savings Banks. Through the Department for National Savings the Government administers the National Savings Bank "investment" and "ordinary" accounts, National Savings certificates, and Premium bonds and other securities, all aimed primarily at the small saver. The outlets for these services are some 22,000 post offices in the U.K. National savings securities can also be bought through Trustee Savings Banks and other banks. The Trustee Savings scheme was started in the 19th century, and at the end of 1975 there were 20 banks with 1,579 offices and some 14 million accounts.

In 1968 a new service, the Post Office Giro, was opened to provide a cheap credit transfer and postal cheque service for its accountholders, most of whom would not also have bank accounts.

There are certain institutions set up to provide finance for specific purposes; the more important of these are

Finance for Industry and its two main subsidiaries the Finance Corporation for Industry (capital for large corporations unable to borrow elsewhere) and the Industrial and Commercial Finance Corporation (capital for technical innovation and small companies); the Commonwealth Development Finance Company (investment of private capital in Commonwealth and other countries' development schemes) and the Agricultural Mortgage Corporation (loans against mortgages on agricultural property).

The main capital market is the Stock Exchange. About 10,000 securities are traded.

The U.K. has a highly developed insurance market, located primarily in London. Lloyd's, with its unique system of underwriting syndicates (of which there are about 330, with over 10,670 members) has an international reputation for marine, aviation and other types of insurance; most of its premium income comes from outside the U.K. The bulk of the domestic insurance market is shared, through the 261 accredited Lloyds brokerage houses, between about 100 of the 600 (approximately) insurance companies operating in the U.K. which also do a lot of international business. These companies are important for both their general and their life-assurance business.

ATOMIC ENERGY

United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority (UKAEA): 11 Charles II St., London, SW1Y 4QP; f. 1954; Chair. Sir JOHN HILL; Deputy Chair. Dr. W. MARSHALL; publ. Atom (monthly).

The Authority was created in 1954 to take responsibility for the rapidly growing programme of research and development into all aspects of atomic energy. The Authority is a public corporation with a structure akin to that of a big industrial organization rather than a government Department.

The Authority is responsible for research and development on reactor systems for the generation of electricity; this has included the construction of prototypes. The Authority's role is fourfold: first, their stewardship on behalf of the Government in atomic affairs generally; secondly, research into new reactor systems and safety and environmental matters; thirdly, continuing research and development support for the British nuclear industry and, fourthly, research using the Authority's special expertise and skills in areas outside the nuclear power field.

The functions of its establishments are as follows:

Atomic Energy Establishment, Winfrith, Dorchester, Dorset, DT2 8DH; major activities are concerned with the development and assessment of both thermal and fast reactor systems including the important areas of reactor physics, heat transfer and fluid dynamics, reactor safety, reactor control and nucleonic instrumentation. There are extensive experimental facilities for the study of reactor core performance including reactor kinetics, safety and operation. Studies are also made of new reactor concepts and new applications for nuclear reactors.

Dir. H. CARTWRIGHT, M.B.E.

Deputy Dir. Dr. J. E. R. HOLMES.

Atomic Energy Research Establishment, Harwell, Didcot, Oxfordshire, OX11 0RA; about half of Harwell's effort is directly concerned with problems of reactor development and nuclear power generally, with particular reference to materials research. This is supported by a programme of underlying research. The rest of the laboratory's effort is divided between work (not necessarily related to nuclear energy) done for industry and for the public sector including government departments. Most of this work is done on direct repayment, but a small effort is devoted to joint innovative projects with industrial firms.

Dir. Dr. L. E. J. ROBERTS.

Sec. M. A. W. BAKER.

Group Sec. C. E. KILVINGTON.

Culham Laboratory, Abingdon, Oxfordshire, OX14 3DB; UKAEA centre for research in nuclear fusion and plasma physics and associated technology. The British fusion research programme is carried out in close collaboration with other countries in the European Economic Community, under a contract of Association with Euratom. In addition, the Laboratory undertakes contract research in the fields of electrotechnology, laser applications, space technology, electrostatics and computing.

Dir. Dr. R. S. PEASE.

Sec. P. G. OATES.

Downreay Nuclear Development Establishment, Thurso, Caithness, KW14 7TZ; principal centre for fast reactor development concerned with reactor operation, the testing of fuel elements including comprehensive post-irradiation examination, fuel reprocessing and development work associated with components required to operate in sodium environments. DERE is the site of the 250 MW(e) Prototype Fast Reactor. Comprehensive fast reactor irradiation services are provided for overseas customers and materials testing reactor fuels fabricated and reprocessed for U.K. and overseas customers.

Dir. C. W. BLUMFIELD.

Deputy Dir. A. D. EVANS.

Windscale Nuclear Power Development Laboratories, Wind-scale, Sellafield, Seascale, Cumbria, CA20 1PF; development of plutonium fuels for fast reactors with appropriate facilities covering manufacture, assembly, and inspection. Development work on advanced gas-cooled reactors is centred on the 32 MW(e) Windscale AGR and the out-of-pile rigs for heat transfer, fluid flow and vibration studies. There are extensive post-irradiation examination facilities for the examination of gas-cooled and water-cooled reactor fuels of all types. Development and monitoring studies are made for trapping fission product iodine in charcoal and storing other fission products in glass.

Head Dr. H. LAWTON.

Deputy Head J. S. NAIRN.

Springfields Nuclear Power Development Laboratories, Springfields, Salwick, Preston, Lancs., PR4 0RR; development of fuels and fuel element components and necessary fuel engineering for thermal and fast nuclear reactors. The laboratory facilities cover the complete range from prototype manufacturing plant to rigs for environmental testing of complete fuel assemblies. Development work is also carried out on welding, brazing, machining and inspection techniques and the Advanced Metal Forming Laboratory carries out studies on the commercial development of hydrostatic and helical extrusion processes. REFEL silicon carbide is developed as an engineering material.

Head J. HARPER, O.B.E.

Deputy Head Dr. G. B. GREENOUGH and D. O. PICKMAN.

Safety and Reliability Directorate, Wigshaw Lane, Culcheth, Warrington, Cheshire, WA3 4NE; concerned with developing technology to establish the safety of nuclear plants, and through the National Centre of Systems Reliability, the safety and reliability of other industrial processes. Advice and services are also provided to government departments, other organizations and industry and a Systems Reliability Service is available to industry on a repayment basis.

Dir. G. H. KINCHIN.

Safety Adviser F. R. FARMER, O.B.E.

Risley Nuclear Power Development Establishment, Warrington, Cheshire, WA3 6AT; responsible for the design and development of nuclear reactors. It acts as engineering consultant for the Electricity Boards, overseas organizations and the company formed for the building of nuclear power stations.

Man. Dir. Dr. T. N. MARSHAM, O.B.E.

Risley Nuclear Power Development Establishment Laboratory, Risley, Warrington, Cheshire, WA3 6AT; all stages of reactor component development. Large-scale component evaluation rigs, operating with sodium, water and high pressure gases, are supplemented by extensive laboratory facilities in the areas of hydraulics, vibration, instrumentation, corrosion, metallurgy, pressure vessel technology, fabrication and non-destructive testing. The Laboratory also incorporates the National Centre of Tribology.

Head J. M. HUTCHEON, O.B.E.

The Radiochemical Centre Ltd.: Amersham, Bucks.; f. 1940; previously part of the UKAEA, est. as a limited company under the Atomic Energy Authority Act 1971; produces and markets throughout the world a wide range of radioactive products for use in industry, medicine and research; Chair. Sir JOHN HILL; Man. Dir. Dr. W. P. GROVE, C.B.E.

British Nuclear Fuels Limited (BNFL): Risley, Warrington, Cheshire; f. 1971 to take over all the nuclear fuel business of the Production Group of the UKAEA; Man. Dir. C. ALLDAY, C.B.E.

Windscale and Calder Works: Sellafield, Seascale, Cumbria; Gen. Man. P. W. MUNNERY, O.B.E.

Reprocessing of irradiated nuclear fuels and manufacture of plutonium and plutonium oxide fuels. Windscale will provide a large part of the reprocessing capacity for United Reprocessors G.m.b.H., an international company in which BNFL is an equal shareholder with French and German nuclear organizations.

Chapelcross Works: Annan, Dumfriesshire; Gen. Man. R. L. PILLING.

Operation of nuclear power station.

Springfields Works: Salwick, Preston, Lancashire; Gen. Man. H. E. DIBBEN, O.B.E.

Uranium ore treatment, uranium fuel element manufacture and uranium hexafluoride production.

Capenhurst Works: Chester, Cheshire; Gen. Man. A. W. AVERY.

Operation of a gaseous diffusion plant producing enriched uranium. A prototype plant, using an alternative gas centrifuge process, is now operational. This forms part of the collaborative project between the U.K., the Netherlands and Federal Germany (see co-operation below).

Nuclear Power Programme

Calder Hall, opened in 1956, was the world's first commercial-scale nuclear power station. In 1959 the Authority commissioned another four-reactor station at Chapelcross, Scotland.

Nuclear power stations based on the Calder Hall 'magnox' concept, but built for the generating boards by the British nuclear industry, now have an installed capacity of more than 5000 MW(e). The first two, Berkeley (Gloucestershire) and Bradwell (Essex), started to produce electricity in 1962 and the others, at Hinkley Point 'A' (Somerset), Trawsfynydd (Merionethshire), Dungeness 'A' (Kent), Sizewell (Suffolk), Oldbury-on-Severn (Gloucestershire), Hunterston (Ayrshire), and Wylfa (Anglesey), were all on load by 1971.

Stations based on the Authority's advanced gas-cooled reactor will provide 6,000 MW(e) when completed. The first two, AGRs at Hinkley Point, Somerset and at Hunterston, Ayrshire, have now been commissioned. At the end of 1977 nuclear power accounted for 14 per cent of all electricity generated in England and Wales, and a rather higher percentage in Scotland.

International co-operation

The U.K. continues to support the activities of the IAEA. Support is also given to OECD activities through the Nuclear Energy Agency and the U.K. participates in the NEA/IAEA and WHO/FAO food irradiation project based on Karlsruhe.

U.K. collaboration in the nuclear field is maintained with countries of the Commonwealth, Europe, including the European Economic Community, Latin America, Japan, the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R., through bilateral and other agreements for the exchange of information, attachment of personnel, visits and other reciprocal arrangements. This collaboration extends over a wide variety of topics, including thermal and fast reactor systems development, reactor safety, fuel enrichment and reprocessing, fusion research and other research and development.

NUCLEAR POWER STATIONS OWNED AND OPERATED BY THE CENTRAL ELECTRICITY GENERATING BOARD

NORTHERN IRELAND

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Northern Ireland is situated in the north-east of Ireland and forms part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. It comprises the six Ulster counties of Antrim, Armagh, Down, Fermanagh, Londonderry and Tyrone. The rest of the island comprises the Republic of Ireland. The climate is mild and temperate. It is characterized by freedom from extremes of temperature and very little snow, fog or thunder. The language is English. There are approximately two Protestants to every one Roman Catholic. The flag is the union flag of the United Kingdom. The capital is Belfast.

Brief History

The sectarian tension that has characterized Ireland's history began with the first major settlement by British Protestants in the 17th century. The main area of Protestant colonization was the province of Ulster, comprising nine counties in the north-east of Ireland. Protestant supremacy over the indigenous Catholics was established and in 1801 Great Britain absorbed Ireland into the new United Kingdom.

The resentment of the dispossessed Catholics came to a head in 1916 with the Easter uprising in Dublin. Administrative division of the country was implemented and the Government of Ireland Act of 1920 provided for two parliaments in Ireland, one in Dublin for 26 of the 32 counties and one in Belfast for the other six (mainly Protestant-populated) counties, known today as Northern Ireland. The presence of a large Catholic minority, traditionally deprived of many civil rights, has led to a continuance of tension.

Efforts were made by Captain Terence O'Neill, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland from 1963 to 1969, and by his successor, Major James Chichester-Clark, to improve the situation, but agitation for civil rights continued, as did the activities of the Provisional wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army. The British military presence in Northern Ireland had been growing since the late 1960s and Brian Faulkner, who became Prime Minister in 1971, endorsed this trend and established internment without trial for terrorists. These measures led to an increase in violence and to the banding together of Protestants in paramilitary groups. During the early part of 1972 the situation deteriorated to such an extent that in March the British Government prorogued the Northern Ireland Parliament and introduced direct rule from Westminster, which alienated many Protestants. A referendum held in March 1973 showed that a majority of the electorate wanted to retain links with Britain. A 78-member Assembly for Northern Ireland was proposed and established. After lengthy negotiations with William Whitelaw, Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, the three main parties formed the first-ever coalition Government in the Province. A 15-member Northern Ireland Executive, with Brian Faulkner at its head, was set up. Direct rule was terminated on December 31st, 1973, and the new Executive took office the following day.

As a result of the talks in December 1973 at Sunningdale, England, between the British and Irish Governments and the Northern Ireland Executive, parallel declarations were made by the British and Irish Governments on the new status of Northern Ireland, and it was agreed that a Council of Ireland comprising a Council of Ministers of 7 members from each of both the Irish Government and the new Executive, together with a Consultative Assembly, would be set up as soon as possible.

Following a vote in favour of the Sunningdale Agreement in the Northern Ireland Assembly in May 1974 a Protestant trade unionist organization, the Ulster Workers' Council, declared a general strike which led to widespread disruption, the declaration of a state of emergency and the collapse two weeks later of the Northern Ireland Executive, followed by the proroguing of the Assembly. The Executive's functions were taken over by the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

In July 1974 the Northern Ireland Act 1974 provided for the election of a Constitutional Convention to determine the general opinion in Northern Ireland on future constitutional and government institutions, with the provision that any proposals must include power-sharing. The Convention, elected in May 1975, reported in November, with a majority firmly opposed to power-sharing. The Convention's conclusions were considered unacceptable by the Westminster Government in January 1976, and the Convention was reconvened in February for further discussions. These were fruitless and the Convention was dissolved in March. Talks between the parties and Roy Mason, the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, were re-started in November 1977 in the hope of establishing an acceptable constitutional arrangement, while direct rule continued.

In May 1977 there was a call for a general strike by the leaders of the United Ulster Unionist Action Council. The strike had a very limited effect and resulted in the withdrawal of the majority official Unionist Party from the United Ulster Unionist coalition and its dissolution at Westminster.

In August H.M. the Queen visited Northern Ireland for the first time, as part of her Jubilee tour.

Violence and terrorist activities continued throughout 1973 and 1974, but early in 1975 the IRA declared a ceasefire. At the end of 1976 the ceasefire was still technically in force, but terrorist activities in Northern Ireland continued into 1977, although at a decreased level.

Government

After the collapse of the Northern Ireland Executive in May 1974, the Northern Ireland Act 1974 of July made the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and his ministers answerable to Parliament at Westminster for the government of Northern Ireland.

Northern Ireland also returns 12 members to the United Kingdom Parliament.

Economic Affairs

Northern Ireland has experienced a shift of emphasis in recent years from traditional manufacturing industries, such as shipbuilding, to services as its main source of growth in employment and income. Agriculture remains an important part of the economy but its success will increasingly depend on greater specialization in beef and milk production based on grassland.

The industrial structure has been strengthened over the last 15 years by the establishment of new investment in the manufacturing of man-made fibres, rubber products and engineering; such investment has, however, declined in recent years owing to the world economic recession and the problems caused by local unrest. These two factors have caused severe economic problems; post-war records in unemployment and declining industrial production precipitated a review of economic and industrial strategy in the province in 1976. On the recommendations of the review team the Government made £1,000 million available in 1977, to be spread over a number of years, to stimulate growth and put the province on a sound economic footing. This sum was in addition to the annual grant-in-aid.

Northern Ireland remains at a more depressed level than the other regions of the United Kingdom. Earnings are 90 per cent of the United Kingdom average, household income is 86 per cent, personal income is 81 per cent, and G.D.P. per head is 74 per cent. In October 1977 unemployment rates were running at over 10 per cent of all employees, a level which was 180 per cent of the United Kingdom average. The differentials have, on the whole, been narrowing, but there are indications that the economy of the province, as one of the peripheral regions of the E.E.C., is both more sensitive to economic down-turn and more difficult to stimulate and stabilize. There are fears that, without effective action, the differentials with the rest of the United Kingdom may again widen and that Northern Ireland will become increasingly dependent on public monies for its economic and social well-being.

Defence

All matters of defence come under the jurisdiction of the United Kingdom Parliament.

Transport and Communications

The Northern Ireland Railways Co. Ltd. provides services on 203 miles of railways and there are 14,400 miles of road, including 67 miles of motorway. There are frequent cross-channel shipping services to Great Britain for passengers and freight.

Social Welfare

There is a comprehensive system of health and social services similar to that in Great Britain, managed on behalf of the Ministry of Health and Social Services by four Health and Social Services Boards and by the Central Services Agency, which comprises representatives from each of the Boards. There are also a Ministry of Community Relations and an independent Community Relations Commission, which work together.

Education

Education is compulsory between the ages of 5 and 16 and is free in primary, secondary (intermediate) and special schools; fees are payable in all grammar schools but the great majority of the pupils in their secondary departments hold scholarships from the local education authorities as qualified pupils.

In 1976/77 there were 1,134 primary (including nursery) schools, 262 secondary schools, 30 special schools, 27 technical colleges, one polytechnic, Ulster College, and 2 universities, Queen's University, Belfast, and the New University of Ulster. Teacher training is catered for in 3 general colleges of education and in the departments of education of Ulster College and the universities.

Tourism

Income from tourism has been severely affected by violence and terrorism: in 1968 income was £28.2 million from over a million visitors and in 1976 £23.8 million when the total number of visitors was 410,000. The majority of visitors are from Great Britain.

Sport

Football and rugby are the most popular sports.

Public Holidays

The main public holidays are the same as for Great Britain with the addition of March 17th (St. Patrick's Day) and July 12th (Battle of the Boyne).

Weights and Measures

The Imperial System of weights and measures is gradually being replaced by the metric system. (See under Great Britain.)

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

After the collapse of the Northern Ireland Executive and the proroguing of the Northern Ireland Assembly in May 1974, the Northern Ireland Act of July 1974 made the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and his ministers responsible to the United Kingdom Parliament at Westminster for the Government of Northern Ireland.

(December 1977)

Secretary of State for Northern Ireland: Rt. Hon. ROY MASON.

Minister of State: JOHN D. CONCANNON, deputy to Secretary of State, responsible for Departments of Commerce and Manpower Services.

Minister of State: Lord MELCHETT, responsible for Departments of Health and Social Services and Education.

Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State: RAY CARTER, responsible for Department of the Environment.

Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State: JAMES DUNN, responsible for Department of Agriculture.

In the elections to the United Kingdom Parliament in October 1974 10 Unionists, one member of the SDLP and one independent were returned.

POLITICAL PARTIES

Alliance Party: 88 University St., Belfast, BT7 1HE; f. 1970; non-sectarian and non-doctrinaire party of the centre; third largest political party in Northern Ireland, attracting support from within both Catholic and Protestant sections of the community; Leader OLIVER NAPIER; Deputy Leader BASIL GLASS; Gen. Sec. JOHN CUSHNAHAN; publ. Alliance (monthly).

Democratic Unionist Party: 1A Ava Avenue, Belfast, BT7 3BN; f. 1971; right-wing anti-Republican Protestant party; Leader Rev. IAN R. K. PAISLEY, D.D., M.P.; Sec. PETER D. ROBINSON.

Unionist Party of Northern Ireland: 15 Chichester St., Belfast, BT1 4ND; f. 1974; comprises those members of the original Unionist Party who support the Sunningdale proposals, including government by a voluntary coalition; Leader ANNE DICKSON; Chair. F. C. TUGHAN, C.B.E.

Volunteer Political Party: f. 1974; identifies with Ulster Volunteer Force; extremist Protestant sectarian party.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The judicial system of Northern Ireland, so far as the Supreme Court is concerned, is a miniature of the English system, and is based on the Supreme Court established in Ireland in 1877 on the model of the Supreme Court in England. It consists, as in England, of a High Court and a Court of Appeal, the High Court having an unlimited jurisdiction both in civil and criminal matters. A Court of Criminal Appeal was established in 1930, also on the English pattern. The county court system to some extent corresponds to its English prototype, with the important difference that in Northern Ireland a county court has, in addition to its civil jurisdiction, a criminal jurisdiction that in England is exercised at Crown Courts. County court judges and recorders of boroughs accordingly exercise all the jurisdiction which in England is divided. The jurisdiction of the courts of summary jurisdiction is held by a permanent judiciary of resident magistrates.

The Lord Chief Justice of Northern Ireland: The Rt. Hon. Sir ROBERT LOWRY.

Lords Justices of Appeal:

Rt. Hon. Lord Justice Sir EDWARD WARBURTON JONES.
Rt. Hon. Lord Justice Sir AMBROSE JOSEPH MCGONIGAL, M.C.
Rt. Hon. Lord Justice Sir MAURICE WHITE GIBSON.

Judges of the High Court:

Hon. Mr. Justice O'DONNELL
Rt. Hon. Mr. Justice KELLY
Hon. Mr. Justice MacDERMOTT
Hon. Mr. Justice MURRAY

Recorders:

Belfast: His Honour The Rt. Hon. Judge TOPPING, Q.C.
Londonderry: His Honour Judge LITTLE, Q.C.

County Court Judges and Chairmen of Quarter Sessions:

W. W. B. TOPPING, Q.C.
DAVID J. LITTLE, Q.C.
W. JOHNSON, Q.C.
J. A. BROWN, Q.C.
R. WATT, Q.C.
J. P. B. HIGGINS, Q.C.
R. R. CHAMBERS, Q.C.
H. G. McGRATH, Q.C.
R. T. ROWLAND, Q.C.
R. J. BABINGTON, Q.C.

RELIGION

The organization of the churches takes no account of the fact that Ireland is divided into two political entities—Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic; Armagh is the seat of both Catholic and Protestant Primates of All Ireland, and Belfast is the headquarters of the Presbyterians and Methodists. Figures below however are for Northern Ireland only.

Roman Catholic	477,921

ISLE OF MAN

The Isle of Man lies in the Irish Sea between the Cumbrian coast of England and Northern Ireland. It is a dependency of the Crown and does not form part of the United Kingdom. It has its own legislative assembly and legal and administrative systems, its laws depending for this validity on Orders made by the Queen in Council. Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom is responsible for the defence and international relations of the island, and the Crown is ultimately responsible for its good government. However, control of direct taxation is exercised by the Manx government.

THE CONSTITUTION

The Isle of Man is governed by its own laws. Tynwald is the administrative body, and consists of both branches of the Legislature, that is, the Legislative Council and the House of Keys, sitting together as one body, but voting separately on all questions except, in certain eventualities, the appointment of Boards of Tynwald. The House of Keys has 24 members chosen by adult suffrage for five years. The Legislative Council is composed of the Lieutenant-Governor, the Lord Bishop of Sodor and Man, the Attorney-General and eight members elected by the House of Keys. Customs duties and income-tax come within the province of Tynwald, but since 1921 the Governor, who is Chancellor of the Exchequer, submits the budget estimates in private to the Keys and the Council separately before bringing the vote to Tynwald. The Isle of Man Act, 1958, gave the Tynwald greater control of Fiscal matters. An Executive Council of five members of the House of Keys and two of the Legislative Council was set up in 1961, to act with the Governor.

THE GOVERNMENT

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL (Upper House)

The Lieutenant-Governor: Sir JOHN WARBURTON PAUL, G.C.M.G., O.B.E., M.C.

The Lord Bishop of Sodor and Man: Rt. Rev. V. S. NICHOLLS.

Clerk: J. R. CANNAN.

HOUSE OF KEYS (Lower House)

Speaker: H. C. KERRUSH, O.B.E., C.P.

Secretary: R. QUAYLE.

The House of Keys consists of 24 members, elected by adult suffrage—seven for Douglas, two for Ramsey, one each for Peel and Castletown, and thirteen for rural districts.

The last General Election was held in November 1976.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The Isle of Man is, for legal purposes, an independent sovereign country under the British Crown with its own Legislature and its own Judiciary administering its own common or customary and statute law. The law of the Isle of Man is, in most essential matters, the same as the law of England and general principles of equity administered by the English Courts are followed by the Courts of the Isle of Man unless they conflict with established local precedents. Her Majesty's High Court of Justice of the Isle of Man is based upon the English system but modified and simplified to meet local conditions. Justices of the Peace are appointed by the Lord Chancellor of England usually on the nomination of the Lieutenant Governor. Members of the Legislative Council, the High Bailiff and

THE CHANNEL ISLANDS

The Channel Islands lie off the north-west coast of France and are the only portions of the Duchy of Normandy now belonging to the Crown of England, to which they have been attached since 1106. They do not form part of the United Kingdom, however. They have their own legislative assemblies and legal and administrative systems, their laws depending for their validity on Orders made by the Queen in Council. Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom is responsible for the defence and international relations of the islands, and the Crown is ultimately responsible for their good government.

Exports are protected by British tariff barriers. The citizens of the Channel Islands enjoy tax sovereignty and imports are free of British purchase tax. Income tax is low. Jersey and Guernsey, especially the former, are being developed as finance centres, and Jersey's commercial laws have encouraged the founding of several merchant banks, mainly subsidiaries of London banks, which profit the economy, otherwise largely based on agriculture.

In addition to the British public holidays, the Channel Islands also celebrate May 9th (Liberation Day).

JERSEY

Jersey, the largest of the Channel Islands, is situated to the south-east of Guernsey, from which it is separated by 17 miles of sea.

THE CONSTITUTION

The Lieutenant-Governor and the Commander-in-Chief of Jersey is the Personal Representative of the Sovereign, the Commander of the Armed Forces of the Crown, and the channel of communication between Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom and the Insular Government. He is appointed by the Crown, and is entitled to sit and speak in the Assembly of the States, but not to vote. He has a veto on certain forms of legislation.

The Bailiff is appointed by the Crown, and is President both of the Assembly of the States (the Insular Legislature) and the Royal Court of Jersey. He has, in the States, a right of dissent and a casting vote.

The Deputy Bailiff is appointed by the Crown and, when authorized by the Bailiff to do so, may discharge any function appertaining to the office of Bailiff.

The Government of the Island is conducted by Committees appointed by the States. The States consist of 12 Senators (elected for six years, six retiring every third year), 12 Constables (triennial), and 28 Deputies (triennial), all elected under universal suffrage, by the people. The Dean of Jersey, the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General are appointed by the Crown and are entitled to sit and speak in the States, but not to vote. Permanent laws passed by the States require the sanction of Her Majesty in Council but Triennial Regulations do not.

The official language is French, but English is the language in daily use.

THE CONSTITUTION

The Lieutenant-Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Guernsey is the Personal Representative of the Sovereign and the channel of communication between Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom and the Insular Government. He is appointed by the Crown. He is entitled to sit and speak in the Assembly of the States, but not to vote.

The Bailiff is appointed by the Crown and is President both of the Assembly of the States (the insular legislature) and of the Royal Court of Guernsey and has a casting vote.

The Government of the island is conducted by committees appointed by the States.

The States of Deliberation is composed of the following members:

- (a) The Bailiff, who is President ex-officio.
- (b) Twelve Conseillers elected by the States of Election (elected for six years, six retiring every three years).
- (c) H.M. Attorney-General and H.M. Solicitor-General (Law Officers of the Crown), who have a voice but not a vote.
- (d) Thirty-three People's Deputies elected by popular franchise.
- (e) Ten Douzaine Representatives elected by their respective Parochial Douzaines.
- (f) Two Alderney Representatives elected by the States of Alderney.

The Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General are appointed by the Crown, and are entitled to sit and speak in the States, but not to vote.

Projets de Loi (Permanent Laws) require the sanction of Her Majesty in Council.

The function of the States of Election is to elect persons to the offices of Jurat and Conseiller. It is composed of the following members:

- (a) The Bailiff (President ex-officio).
- (b) The 12 Jurats or "Jures-Justiciers".
- (c) The 12 Conseillers.
- (d) The 10 Rectors.

(e) H.M. Attorney-General and H.M. Solicitor-General.

(f) The 33 People's Deputies.

(g) Thirty-four Douzaine Representatives.

(h) Four Alderney representatives for the election of Conseillers only.

Meetings of the States and of the Royal Court formerly conducted in French, are now conducted in English, but the proceedings in both are begun and ended in French. English is the language in common use but the Norman patois is often heard in the country parishes.

ALDERNEY

President: J. KAY-MOUAT.

Clerk of the States: W. R. JONES, M.A.

Clerk of the Court: K. K. LACEY, D.S.C., V.R.D.

The President is the civic head of Alderney and has precedence on the island over all persons except the Lieutenant-Governor of Guernsey, and the Bailiff of Guernsey or his representative. He presides over meetings of the States of Alderney, which are responsible for the administration of the Island with the exception of Police, Public Health and Education which are administered by the States of Guernsey. The States consist of twelve members who, with the President, hold office for three years and are elected by universal suffrage of residents. The area is 1,962 acres and in 1975 the population was 1,785.

Transport: Alderney Shipping Co. Ltd., White Rock, Guernsey.

Aurigny Air Services, Alderney; Services to Guernsey, Jersey, Southampton and Cherbourg.

SARK

Seigneur of Sark: J. M. BEAUMONT.

Seneschal: B. G. JONES.

The Seigneur of Sark is the hereditary civic head of the island and thereby entitled to certain privileges.

He or she is a member of the Chief Pleas of Sark, the island parliament, and has a suspensory veto on its ordinances. He or she has the right, subject to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor of Guernsey, to appoint the Seneschal of Sark, who is President of the Chief Pleas and Chairman of the Seneschal's Court, which is the local Court of Justice. The area of the island is 1,348 acres and in 1976 the population was 604.

Transport: No motor vehicles are permitted apart from 42 tractors. In summer a daily steamer service runs between Guernsey and Sark, and in winter a service four times a week (Mon., Wed., Fri., Sat.).

HERM

Tenant: Major A. G. Wood.

Herm is leased by the States of Guernsey to a tenant whose contract obliges him to carry out some of the day-to-day administration of Herm on behalf of the States. The island has an area of 500 acres and a population in 1971 of 107 (including Jethou).

Transport: A daily boat service runs between Guernsey and Herm.

JETHOU

Jethou has an area of 44 acres and is leased by the Crown to a tenant who has no official functions.

VATICAN CITY STATE

HISTORICAL NOTE

For a period of nearly a thousand years, dating roughly from the time of Charlemagne to the entry of the Italians into Rome at Porta Pia, Sept. 20th, 1870, the Papacy held temporal possessions. During the process of unification the Kingdom of Italy gradually absorbed these possessions of the Pope, the States of the Church, which stretched from sea to sea across the middle of the peninsula, the process being completed by the entry into Rome of King Victor Emmanuel's troops in 1870. From 1860 to 1870 many attempts had been made to induce the Pope to surrender his temporal possessions; but regarding them as a sacred trust from a higher Power, to be guarded on behalf of the Church, he replied constantly "Non possumus". After the entry of the Royal Army into Rome he retired into the Vatican, whence no Pope issued thereafter until the ratification of the Lateran Treaty of February 11th, 1929. By the Law of Guarantees of May 1871, Italy attempted to stabilize the position of the Papacy by recognizing the Pope's claim to use of the Palaces of the Lateran and the Vatican, the Papal villa of Castelgandolfo, and their "gardens and annexes", and to certain privileges customary to Sovereignty. This unilateral arrangement was not accepted by Pius IX, and his protest against it was repeated constantly by his successors.

In 1929 two agreements were made with the Mussolini Government, the Concordat and the Lateran Treaty. Under the Concordat, the Catholic religion became the state religion of Italy, with special privileges defined by law. By the terms of the Lateran Treaty the Holy See was given exclusive power and sovereign jurisdiction over the State of the Vatican City, an area of 44 hectares (109 acres) within the city of Rome. The Vatican State was declared neutral and inviolable territory. The new Italian Constitution of 1947 reaffirmed adherence to the Lateran Treaty, but in 1967 negotiations were begun for a revision of the Concordat. In November 1976 the two sides agreed on a draft plan for a new Concordat which would remove most of the Catholic Church's special privileges in Italy. The Lateran Treaty and the status of the Vatican City State were not, however, put in question.

The population of the Vatican City was 726 at July 1st 1976).

GOVERNMENT

The Vatican City State came into existence with the Lateran Treaty of 1929. The Holy See (a term designating Rome as the bishopric of the Pope) is a distinct, pre-existing entity. Both entities are subjects of international law. Ambassadors and Ministers are accredited to the Holy See, which sends diplomatic representatives (Nuncios and Pro-Nuncios) to more than 80 states, as well as having Delegates or Observers at the United Nations and other international organizations. The Vatican City State is a member of such international governmental organizations as the Universal Postal Union and Intelsat.

Both entities are indissolubly united in the person of the Pope, who is at once ruler of the state and visible head of the Catholic Church.

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE VATICAN CITY STATE

The Vatican City is under the temporal jurisdiction of the Pope, the Supreme Pontiff elected for life by the College of Cardinals. He appoints a Papal Commission, headed by a President who is Secretary of State of the Roman Curia, to conduct the administrative affairs of the Vatican.

HEAD OF STATE

His Holiness Pope PAUL VI, GIOVANNI BATTISTA MONTINI.

PAPAL COMMISSION

Cardinal JEAN VILLOT (President)
Cardinal SERGIO GUERIN (Pro-President)
Cardinal MAXIMILIEN DE FURSTENBERG
Cardinal PAOLO BERTOLI
Cardinal JOHN JOSEPH WRIGHT
Cardinal SILVIO ODDI
Cardinal GIUSEPPE PAUPINI
Marchese GIULIO SACCHETTI (Special Delegate)

THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT OF THE HOLY SEE

The central government of the Catholic Church in Rome is vested in the Pope, who is supreme, and in the College of Cardinals. Cardinals who reside in Rome as the Pope's immediate advisers are styled Cardinals "in Curia". The Sacred College of Cardinals derives from the church's earliest days. Until the reign of Pope John XXIII, the number of Cardinals was limited by custom to seventy. In June 1977 there were 137 Cardinals. There are six Cardinal Bishops who are in Titular charge of suburban sees of Rome—Palestrina, Sabina, Porto and Santa Rufina, Albano and Ostia, Velletri, and Frascati. An Oriental Patriarch is also a member of the order of Cardinal Bishops. Cardinal Priests hold titular churches in Rome, the origins of which go back to the earliest times. The administration of the affairs of the Church is carried out through the Secretariat of State and the Council for the Public Affairs of the Church under the Cardinal Secretary of State, and through a number of Sacred Congregations, each under the direction of a Cardinal, as well as through Tribunals, Offices, Commissions and Secretariats for special purposes.

A general reform of the Curia became effective in 1968, with a reduction in the number of departments, the creation of three new organs and the restructuring of the Secretariat of State. In May 1969 the Sacred Congregation of Rites was divided into two Congregations—one for Divine Worship and the other for the Causes of Saints. In July 1975 the Sacred Congregation for the Discipline of the Sacraments and the Sacred Congregation for Divine Worship were amalgamated.
